

Boys Alert for Trip to Southwest

Annual Trek Headed by Hillis L. Howie to Start Tomorrow.

By BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

WHEN parents and friends watch the 1934 Prairie Trek expedition leave the Children's Museum at 10 tomorrow, they will note an alert eagerness to be off. With assignments from the Newark Museum, Newark, N. J., to collect items, the boys are keenly desirous of starting their exploring.

The Newark museum director wants a plaster cast of a dinosaur footprint, and the boys expect to detect such a print somewhere in the itinerary from the base camp, Cottonwood Gulch, in the Zuni mountains at Thoreau, N. M. They'll gather items of paleontology, ethnology and botany on their trips through Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico.

A private collector has supplied the expedition with a fund to purchase relics of the gold rush of 49 and a complete shepherd's wagon and branding iron.

Then as official field explorers of the Children's Museum, led by Hillis L. Howie, director of Orchard school, the participants will gather data, photographs and specimens of interest to school children. To spare duplication of effort, each boy will choose one department in the field of natural history in which to specialize.

Philip A. Sweet, Indianapolis, and Edward L. Chaffin, Short Hills, N. J., are senior assistants. They are joined by Robert Failey and Andre Rhoads, both of Indianapolis; John Ragdale, Summit, N. Y., and Paul Torrence, Evanston, Ill., are junior assistants and will assist in directing preparation of specimens and planning of objectives at the base camp between trips.

Alan Appel, Allen Beck, Jack Brant, Paul Buchanan, Edwin Craft, James Darlington, James French, Robert Fortune, Alex Holliday, Bates Johnson, Jack MacLean, Jr., Rhodehamel, Donald Sharp and David Sherwood, all of Indianapolis, will share the adventures with several out-of-town boys.

Richard Adler, New York; Jacob Breed, Swampscott, Mass.; Robert Berr, Livingston Moore, Short Hills, N. J.; Peter Burnett, Glencoe, Ill.; John Crume, Peru; Howard Hull, Bernardsville, N. J., and Tom Pogue, Cincinnati, will take part in the two months' camping trip.

The boys will witness snake dances in the Hopi villages and an inter-tribal ceremony at Gallup. They will explore the cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde, the deserted mining towns, pueblos of the Rio Grande and the Kaibab forest. They will visit Pueblo Bonito in Chaco canyon, meteor crater in Arizona, the Painted Desert and House Rock valley, the north rim of the Grand canyon, the Bryce national park, Zion national park, Boulder dam and Navajo lake in southern Utah. Their adventures will lead them to five national parks, twenty-seven national monuments and twenty-three Indian reservations.

Miss Virginia Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Roberts, has gone to Canyon, Mesenchaca, near Green Bay, Wis., to act as counselor. She stopped in Chicago for a two days' visit before joining the camp staff.

Manners and Morals

By JANE JORDAN

Have you a problem which you believe to be unique? Ask Jane Jordan what to do about it, and read her reply in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—I went with a girl for about two years. Both of us were very much in love, but I started running around and she found it out. She forgave me and things went along O. K. until I left town for a week. When I came back I found she had gone out with a friend of mine. She told me she was in love with him and didn't want to see me any more. I kept on running after her, but she wouldn't see me only once in a while.

I left town again and when I came back she told me that she wanted to settle down and straighten out. I had a date with her this afternoon and she told me she was in trouble with this other fellow and that I was the only one she could tell. She wants me to help her and says she doesn't love this other fellow and that she does care for me. I still am in love with her, I guess.

When she got in trouble she says she was drinking and didn't know what she was doing. She isn't every one's girl. Please tell me if I should help her and take her back.

Answer—Any humane person will help another who is in trouble, but you will have to be the judge of whether you want to resume your old relationship or not. At present you are smarting from the blow to your pride in losing the girl and her return flatters your vanity.

I do not know whether you are contemplating marriage with her or not, but it would seem like a sensible thing to wait and see whether her mistake is going to eat into your esteem for her or whether you will be magnanimous enough to forget it.

People who drink seem to feel that inebriation excuses them from all responsibility for their own conduct. If only they can say "I was drunk when I did it," they feel that all should be forgiven. The purpose of drinking is to enjoy a less responsible state of consciousness. Drinking may excuse what is done, but what excuses drinking?

Answer—Neither should consider themselves, but the welfare of the baby to come. In our civilization an illegitimate child has such a hard handicap that it would be better for them to marry now even if they separate later.

A Woman's Viewpoint

By MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

MY sympathy has been aroused by the plight of the missionaries, as it was explained in Cleveland before the General Assembly of Presbyterian churches. "One of the greatest drawbacks to the work," said the Rev. Daniel C. Buchanan, back from Japan, "is the type of motion picture which is sent into foreign lands."

He enlarged upon the subject, but we all get the point at once. The situation of those who are from the United States to spread moral uplift abroad easily may be imagined. Doubtless their faces always are red, as well they may be.

Because, while the poor dears try to impress upon the lost heathen the advantages of the Christian religion as a potent force for morality and progress, along comes Hollywood and gives them quite a different picture. It must be discouraging for the reformers and confusing for the natives. The America pictured by Mae West's questionable morals, the smart-cracking banditry of Edward B. Robinson, and the morose antics of Jimmy Durante hardly fit in with the ideals of an intelligent and godly people. That the United States of the films is exactly as unreal as that of the missionaries does not lessen the problems of the preachers themselves, nor explain the truth to the natives.

Undoubtedly the latter often must ask themselves why the churchmen do not remain at home for a time and reclaim their own countrymen from sin. I have put the same question to myself as I dropped coins into the collection plate for the work of foreign fields. I even have asked the devotees of this phase of Christian endeavor, but have, as yet, had no satisfactory answer.

The physicians who are trying to teach the heathen cleanliness and sanitation must be embarrassed often by the figures which are made public here. Thousands of women die unnecessarily in childbirth each year; illness bred by malnutrition and filth increasing; dirt, disease, poverty, crime, disgracing every section of the country, and kidnappings which startle even a heathen world. Doesn't it strike you that we have plenty of home work for the missionaries?

Sorority Elects

Mrs. Morris Corbin is the new president of Phi Zeta Delta sorority. Other officers are Mrs. Carl Herman, vice-president; Miss Rose Ruff, treasurer, and Mrs. Morris Conner, secretary.

Women Seek Comfort in Their Shoes

Only Those Past Fifty Crowd Their Feet, Salesmen Say.

By HELEN LINDSAY

ONLY women past fifty worry about the size of their shoes, and try to crowd their feet into small sizes. Younger women and college girls, interested in active sports and in comfort, seek shoes which fit them. At the Marott Shoe Store, sales records show that where in previous years more size 5 shoes were sold, now size 7 shoes are the most popular.

"Young women have become so insistent on having shoes fit them correctly that we have found it necessary to have more than $5,000 worth of equipment for proper fitting," an official of the store said today.

"The most necessary part of this equipment is the X-ray foot fitting machine, which allows the customer to get a view of her feet without the shoe, so she can determine for herself if the shoe is the correct size. We will have another of these machines in the store by the last of this month, which will make four in the store."

Larger Sizes Bought

Young women can wear the sandals which have become popular in the last few years because their feet are as well kept and as perfect as their hands, Marott salesmen believe.

"It is unusual to find young women with bunions, or other defects, on their feet. They never have crowded their feet into small shoes, and so have not damaged them. We now sell even inexpensive shoes in very narrow sizes. Once an A last was an unusual size to find in any shoe store. Now we carry this size in practically every shoe in the store, and carry most styles in double, triple, and quadruple A," the salesmen continued.

"In more expensive makes of shoes, we now have a shoe even narrower than the quadruple A, and it is in such demand that we continually re-order it."

Insist on Practical Heels

College girls and young women have insisted on practical heels on shoes, until the French heel is almost out. It has been replaced by the popular boulevard heel, which can be had in height equaling those of French heels, but in more practical shapes.

A new heel, developed for sport sandals and walking shoes for girls this year, has been so popular, that it will be seen this fall even on evening shoes.
