

HOME LOAN ACT IS EXPLAINED TO DISTRICT STAFF

McKinney and Washington Official Conduct School for Employees.

Provisions of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation plan were explained in detail yesterday in a school conducted by E. Kirk McKinney, state manager, for district employees.

Because thousands of home owners in the state are clamoring for funds for repairing, remodeling and modernizing their dwellings, activities of the loan organization are expected to increase greatly by fall, Mr. McKinney said.

Sessions were held yesterday afternoon and last night at the Indianapolis Athletic Club. L. R. Hoffman, Washington, regional reconditioning supervisor, explained various phases of the recent amendment to the home loan bill, in which a fund of $300,000,000 was authorized by congress.

Three classes of property owners are eligible for loans, Mr. Hoffman said: (1) Those who already have obtained loans from the corporation; (2) those who are eligible to have their mortgages taken over by the corporation, and (3) those who own their homes clear of any mortgages, but can not obtain reconditioning loans from any private lending agency.

Advice on the reconditioning of any home will be provided free by experienced realtors, builders and architects employed by the corporation, Mr. McKinney stated.

Through the establishment of a model advisory service on home reconditioning, the corporation hopes to reduce the danger of ill-advised and irresponsible work, he said.

TERRORISTS THREATEN TO BLOW UP HAVANA

"Guerillas of Death" Plant Eight Bombs; City Damaged.

HAVANA, July 6.—Leaders of a new, mysterious terroristic society, self-styled the "Guerillas of Death," informed police today they intended to sow the city with bombs.

The terrorists planted eight bombs during the night. Five did heavy damage. Police and soldier patrols were sent out to search suspicious pedestrians and motor cars for bombs.

RABIES? ONE IN 20,000 CASES, SAYS DR. CONGER

Precautions Are Ridiculous, Is View of Dog Pound Executive.

BY GRENVILLE MOTT
Times Staff Writer

Not more than one dog in 20,000 has rabies. This comforting statement came today from Dr. Elizabeth Conger, city dog pound superintendent, while discussing what she referred to as the "current canine panic."

"These things happen every now and then," she explained.

"The dogs get excited, and the people get excited, and hundreds of dogs get sent out here for rabies examinations—nice dogs, dogs that wouldn't hurt a flea.

"Maybe," she added thoughtfully, "I shouldn't say a flea. Some awfully gentle dogs become very annoyed at fleas."

"But, seriously," she continued, "the people of Indianapolis have been co-operating with us in splendid fashion during this panic. In the sixteen years I have been out here I never have known them to take better care of their dogs."

"Of course, we have to destroy lots of dogs—more than I care to think of. And it is at its worst now. One day, probably the worst I have ever spent, we chloroformed 300. It was awful!"

"But," she added, more cheerfully, "all the best of our dogs get homes. If they are and their owners fail to claim them, some one always is glad to pay the $2 impounding fee and take them home as pets of their own."

"When I came to work out here sixteen years ago," said Dr. Conger, "conditions were beyond belief. They had men around who beat the dogs with clubs, and the dogs were killed by the most cruel methods imaginable."

"Of course, I was only a female helper and the men did their best to make it unbearable for me. One day I lost my temper and knocked one of those men down. I got him by the neck."

The doctor still is a very healthy looking lady.

"Conditions," she continued, "are far from perfect, even now. We need far more money and equipment."

"Now, that one there will get a

Wellington-Wellington (lower), a handsome English bulldog, a few days ago was just another anonymous and unclaimed stray in the city pound. Soon after this picture was taken, he was purchased for the impounding fee of $2 and now lives in a canine lap of luxury.

G. O. P. OPENS FIGHT AT BIRTHPLACE SITE

National Importance Attached to Michigan Meeting.

By United Press

JACKSON, Mich., July 6.—Fifty thousand Republicans rallied today under the historic oaks where their party was founded, to signal the opening of the national campaign.

The rally ostensibly was a Michigan affair, to select the date and site for the state convention, but national headquarters designed the rally as the official opening of the 1934 campaign. Henry P. Fletcher in closing sessions tomorrow will deliver an address.

STOCK MARKET CONTROL BOARD READY FOR JOB

New Commission Organizes Rapidly; Meetings to Start Monday.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Assembly of the administration's new stock market and security control organization was pushed rapidly today with indications that the new five-man commission would begin regular meetings Monday.

Several hundred employees, including legal and publicity divisions as well as a large corps of experts are to be hired and quarters are yet to be obtained in the old interstate commerce commission building across Pennsylvania avenue from the reconstruction finance corporation.

Complete harmony was said to exist among the five members of the commission who comprise Joseph P. Kennedy, one-time market operator, as chairman; James M. Landis, George C. Mathews, and Robert E. Healy, formerly of the federal trade commission, and the government's star investigator, Ferdinand Pecora.

BARTENDER EXECUTED FOR DERELICT SLAYING

Strange Murder Is Avenged; Three Pals Also Executed.

By United Press

OSSINING, N. Y., July 6.—The difficult murder of "Durable" Michael Malloy was completely expiated today with electrocution of Joseph Murphy, Bronx bartender.

Reprieved ending in failure to prove insanity, Murphy marched to the Sing Sing electric chair a month behind Frank Pasqua, Anthony Marino and Daniel Kriesberg.

The quartet insured the life of barroom derelict Malloy and set out to kill him. Mike liked poisoned whisky, glass-filled sandwiches and tainted oysters. Finally he died peacefully, "that good liquor" in his stomach and a gas tube in his mouth.

Land-Office Business

John Dillinger's Escape at Little Bohemia "Miraculous," Says City Man.

BY BASIL GALLAGHER
Times Staff Writer

THE enigma of John Dillinger's escape from Little Bohemia lodge in the Lac du Flambeau district was pondered today by an Indianapolis business man who just has returned from the scene.

"I am ashamed to admit that I have joined the ranks of the morbidly curious who visit the scenes of sensational crimes," said the business man, who asked that his name be withheld, "but when I found myself in Wisconsin on a fishing trip I couldn't resist the urge."

"I drove 200 miles out of my way to go to Little Bohemia, and after a thorough inspection of the place it is inconceivable to me that Dillinger ever could have broken through the ranks of the federal men in the raiding party."

"In the first place, the lodge is entirely surrounded by a thick woods. Only one narrow road leads from the building where Dillinger fought it out with the justice agents to the main highway."

"That road," he continued, "is the only exit from the lodge. There just isn't any other way to effect an escape. I learned that the federal agents, instead of calling upon local authorities and the backwoodsman of the neighborhood for help, stood off at a considerable distance and fought it out with the outlaws."

"It seems to me that this was bad strategy, which resulted in nothing more than the death of a CCC worker who was an innocent spectator."

The Indianapolis man revealed that Emil Wanetka, proprietor of the lodge in which Dillinger, "Baby Face" Nelson and other notorious desperadoes spent several days before the fatal raid, has done a rustling business in transient trade.

"But many women refuse to spend the night at the lodge, fearing a return of the gangster," said the local fisherman.

Wanetka, he revealed, has posted a list of questions asked by visitors about the Hoosier bandit.

Among the questions on the wall of the bar are:

"Is Dillinger good-looking?"

"What did they like best to eat?"

"Were the women good?"

"What kind of a poker game does Dillinger play?"

The proprietor of the place was quoted as saying that Dillinger was welcome back to his lodge any time.

'WHAT'S IT TO YOU?' ADDED BY ICKES TO FAMOUS LAST LINES

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, one of the busiest "New Dealers," has discovered at least one loafer in his department.

Walking down a corridor in the large interior building, Mr. Ickes chanced to look into an office. He was surprised to see a young man sitting comfortably with his feet on a desk reading a magazine.

Mr. Ickes entered the office and asked:

"Is this the way you receive visitors?"

The young man, without turning his head to glance at the questioner, retorted:

"What's it to you?"

The secretary returned to his office to learn the young man's identity. Then he acted.

ADEQUATE ROAD PATROL URGED BY MOTOR CLUB

Increase in State Police Personnel to Be Asked of Legislature.

Increase in the personnel of the state police department in order that an adequate road patrol may be established may be asked at the next session of the general assembly, according to Todd Stoops, secretary of the Hoosier Motor Club.

Pointing out that the state police department has only a superintendent, a captain, three lieutenants, six sergeants and fifty-eight patrolmen, Mr. Stoops said the apportionment to each man is about 1,000 miles of road.

"The state police department is operated on funds from the sale of certificates of title," Mr. Stoops said. "The department should be operated on money from the state general fund and the money taken from the driving public used for a road patrol."

"Other states provide one patrolman for every 100 miles. If Indiana would do that, it would have about 100 patrolmen on patrol duty, leaving the department as it now is organized to deal with regular police work."

BORAH SPEECH TARGET OF RICHBERG ATTACK

NRA Counsel Flays Senator, Praises Recovery Program.

By United Press

FT. WORTH, Tex., July 6.—Donald Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, combined a glowing description of the national recovery administration with a bitter attack on Senator William E. Borah in an address last night before the Texas Bar Association.

"There ought to be some figures, as well as facts, even in a Fourth of July oration," Mr. Richberg said in assailing Senator Borah's stand on some of the NRA policies.

After his criticisms of the Idaho senator, Mr. Richberg turned to his own description of NRA, and declared that more than 5,000,000 persons had been put back to work in trade and industry as a result of it.
