

SHIPWRECK IS SEEN IN LATEST NEWS PICTURE

Times-Universal Newsreel
Shows Sinking of German Ship.

First pictures of the wreck of the North German Lloyd liner Dresden, which struck a rock off the Norwegian coast and keeled over and sank, are to be seen in the current issue of The Times-Universal Newsreel, which has Graham McNamee as its talking reporter.

One thousand German excursionists are saved from the ship. Four passengers are dead. The captain in his report of the catastrophe, reports an uncharted rock staved a hole in the ship's hull, while he was navigating a dangerous fiord.

Other important events in the reel include scenes at Longchamps, France, as high state officials, in-

PLUNGES INTO RIVER; DROWNS

City Man Ends Life After Fighting Off Would-Be Rescuer.

Funeral services for Howard E. Marlatt, 34, of 3837 Byram avenue, chauffeur, who committed suicide just before dawn yesterday in a spectacular plunge from the Washington street bridge over White river, will be held at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon in the Christian church at Milton.

Mr. Marlatt, who threatened several persons with a revolver when they tried to dissuade him from taking his life, and who almost drowned a would-be rescuer, was married and had one child.

Early yesterday morning he hailed a taxicab operated by Bryan Tyrone, 2322 North Illinois street, and asked to be taken to the bridge. There, he dismissed his driver with the fare and a 10-cent tip.

"Here's the last tip you'll ever get from me," Mr. Marlatt observed in a strained tone of voice.

He then walked to the bridge railing and sat on it.

Thomas Bolling, 1440 West Everett street, a passerby, approached him and asked him what he intended to do. He answered that he was going to jump to his death.

When Mr. Bolling and others, attracted to the scene, tried to dissuade him, Mr. Marlatt threatened them with a revolver.

Suddenly, he stood up and jumped. As he leaped, Mr. Bolling ran to the bank of the river, removing his coat as he ran. He plunged in to aid Mr. Marlatt, but the latter fought him off and finally, tried to pull him under.

Mr. Bolling, exhausted, released the struggling man, who sank at once.

Survivors are Mrs. Corinne Marlatt, the widow; Richard Marlatt, a son; Leo Marlatt, a brother, and the parents, Fremont Marlatt and Mrs. Lydia Royl.

Burial will be in Franklin cemetery.

Boy, 5, Fractures Arm in Park.

Delbert Heath, 5, of 3944 East Thirtieth street, suffered a broken left arm yesterday when he was pushed from a slide in Washington park. The injury was reported to police by his father, Thomas Heath.

INDIANA DAY NAMED AT FAIR

Governor McNutt Chooses
July 19 in Reply to Invitation.

BY MRS. MAURICE MURPHY
Times Special Writer

CHICAGO, July 9.—In response to an invitation from Rufus C. Dawes, president of the world's fair, for Indiana to set a day as Indiana state day at the fair, Governor Paul V. McNutt has responded with a letter, designating July 19 as the Hoosier state day.

No definite plans have been arranged for the program, but world's fair officials are co-operating with Hoosiers to make the celebration a success.
