

Torrid Days Met Coolly by Clothes

City Women Keep Poise With Wardrobes Well Chosen.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

CAREFULLY chosen wardrobes are carrying Indianapolis women through a torrid summer with amazing ease. Colorful and gay additions the women are to the circles they frequent. Assured and comfortable they are in their fashionable gowns.

Brown is becoming to Mrs. Samuel Lewis Shank, and it is combined to a advantage with white in one of Mrs. Shank's summer suits. A brown linen blouse is worn with the white skirt, a nod over them a white finger tip length coat, trimmed with large brown buttons, emphasized by white string fringes falling from the centers. Mrs. Shank wears a brown linen cardigan hat at the exact angle to be most flattering.

Mrs. Frank Dalton goes to Bob Brown's riding stable for afternoon rides. Her black and yellow plaid acetate gown is trimmed in black buttons and the tailored collar fastened with a tiny black grosgrain bow.

When Miss Jane Gent laces at the Woodstock Club she wears white gaberdine shorts and a white halter, a becoming contrast to her mellow sun tan.

Chooses Nautical Motif
Mrs. Leonard Campbell's brown and white pique suit intrigues us with its white buttons, copying the lines of a ship's helm. The buckle is formed by a clasp similar to the buttons, fastened with an anchor. A heavy white cord is looped at the neckline to hold the finger tip length jacket together.

A white maple leaf pattern figures Mrs. Lillian Lee's black crepe suit. The short fitted jacket has long sleeves; its tight cuffs are edged with white pleated waffle wale pique. The rippling collar likewise is edged in white. Mrs. Lee's hat for the ensemble is of black bangkok straw.

Tomato With White
Mrs. Lee's niece, Margaret Albert, is vacationing at Camp Kinnikinnick, situated at the foot of Pike's Peak, Manitou, Col.

With a white silk shantung sport dress, Miss Harriett Denny wears a short sleeved tomato bisque jacket. A belt braided of tomato bisque, white and navy blue is worn with the dress.

Miss Denny's sister Margaret has returned from a visit with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Horace P. Nixon, Chestnut Hills, near Philadelphia, and with her cousin, Mrs. Buford Scott, Richmond, Va.

Samarang Club To Meet
Miss Jean Noe, 4221 North Capitol avenue, will be hostess at 8 tomorrow night at her home for a meeting of the Samarang Club.

City Woman Treasures Rare Dutch Antiques

BY MRS. C. O. ROBINSON
Times House Editor

FROM the time of the Pharaohs to the present day, craftsmen working in wood, have employed the arts of veneering and inlay to beautify their creative efforts. The application or insertion of thin sheets of harmonizing native or foreign woods appeared to artists of various nations at different periods, but during the seventeenth century the mosaic of colored woods, the inlay designated as marquetry, reached its greatest vogue as a decoration.

Although much of the earliest marquetry is found in Italy, Dutch craftsmen excelled in work of this kind and their products, which have survived today are among the rarest of marquetry pieces.

The ships of the Dutch East India Company carried a large portion of the commerce of the world and brought to the home ports the choicest of tropical woods and the most exquisite of Chinese porcelain.

These strange and costly rarities sometimes were combined as decoration for furniture to delight the home-loving wives of the prosperous merchants as they could afford the most expensive and intricate workmanship.

Some Dutch marquetry in the United States today is treasured by old New York families as heirlooms inherited from the first settlers of New Amsterdam. Numerous other pieces, fortunately have reached museums for preservation. The John Heron Art museum of this city owns a very handsome piece.

Although seldom found for sale in antique stores an occasional example of this beautiful inlay has been available to collectors. Some years ago E. R. Gilgour, a local dealer, obtained an exceptionally handsome corner cupboard which was purchased by Mrs. Sellers, Elwood.

A gorgeous screen and desk in the antique Dutch marquetry are owned by Mrs. Albert E. Sterne of this city. They were purchased at Amsterdam in 1900 by the late Dr. Sterne to complement his splendid collection of Dutch ceramics.

THE large massive screen is made of a rich, dark wood, probably walnut, and fashioned in four sections. On the side here illustrated, each section is paneled into two divisions, inset with large, medium and small bowl-shaped pieces of blue and white Chinese porcelain.

Each dish is decorated with a different yet similar charming landscape showing mountains, trees, rivers, bridges and quaint figures representing Chinese people.

The surface of the porcelain feels slightly waxy to the touch, a peculiarity which adds to its interest and fascination.

Possibly the "china" was made during the reign of Ming-hsi, 1661-1722, the best period for blue and white Chinese porcelain and the time of the most extensive import through Holland.

The date of the screen is placed approximately at that time also. The screen is decorated further with small marquetry flowers and leaves made of colored woods, such as pear, holly and maple, or the more exotic amboyna, thuya and palisander.

Undoubtedly some of the woods have been tinted delicately to supply the variant tones. The reverse side of the screen is equally as beautiful. On each section are two large baskets of flowers which have attracted birds and butterflies. The designs are similar, yet vary as do the figures in a Persian rug.

Although the marquetry screen commands first attention because it is unusual and arresting, and appeals both to furniture collectors and ceramic enthusiasts, the aura of romance which surrounds the old desk makes it equally as interesting. Its marquetry is extremely intricate and unique, and presumably it was made for a wedding gift, since the slant top picture of a wedding party of four couples, each riding in a two-wheeled horse-drawn cart. A large tree at the roadside shelters a group of spectators. The work is very delicate, even the eyelashes being shown clearly.

A COAT OF ARMS, the signature "Noord-Holland 1703" and the inscription, "Eene Hollandsche boerenbruiloft," a Dutch wedding, accompany the picture in minute inlay.

On the side panels of the desk are bust pictures of a young man and woman with the inscription "Kostuum Seeland Axel," meaning a costume as worn in the town of Axel in the province of Zeeland.

The desk is made in the style known as bombe bulging and is as fat and opulent looking as doubtless was the rich burgher who purchased it originally.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Do you need a better understanding of your problems? Write a letter to Jane Jordan and read her opinion in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—Some years ago I was unfaithful to my wife. If I had known what far-reaching effects it would have on my life, I never would have done anything so foolish. My wife has been a nervous invalid ever since and blames me for it. She will not trust me and I think lots of her. He doesn't want me to go with other boys and is very jealous if I do. But I know he has other girls. He wants to correspond regularly, and while I write regularly, he sometimes goes three or four weeks before answering. How can I get him to be more faithful?

ANSWER—I wish I knew, but I do not. The best thing you can do is to order your wife without considering his wishes until he learns to consider yours. If you were more elusive, he would put forth more effort.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 20 and going with a boy 23 and have been for six years. He is working in a northern state and comes back to see me every year. We write all the time. I do not have dates with other boys and he says he does not go with other girls. Do you think I should go with other boys of my age? Do you think we should get married?

WONDERING.
Answer—If you are content as you are there is no good reason for making a change. If you are not, it is your privilege to increase your circle of friends, and leave him free to do the same. I can not see why two people who are in love but separated for long periods should live like a couple of hermits. I do not know whether you should marry him or not.

She is the kind of woman who is dependent on the love and affection of her husband for her health and strength. Her plan of life collapsed when you were unfaithful, and she hasn't been able to replace it with a new plan.

A braver woman would have met unpleasant reality without resorting to weakness in order to gain power. She does not know how to force you to your knees except through her own disabilities. Her attempt to bind you with sweetness and light failed; now she will plague you into submission through illness.

If your physicians are right in their diagnosis, and there is nothing organically wrong with your wife, then her illness must take the form of a neurosis. The first question we ask concerning such a condition is, "What does this person hope to gain by a neurosis?" It would seem like a good idea to let the neurosis fall in its purpose, but to give her all the love and attention which she craves whenever she behaves like a normal, healthy woman.

Mrs. Lillian Lee Opens Exclusive Beauty Salon in Chinese-Modern Motif

BY HELEN LINDSAY

FOR the first time in several years, Mrs. Lillian Lee, former president of the Indianapolis Women's Golf Association, will be missing from the teas and fairways this week during the women's state championship meet. But Mrs. Lee will be quite as busy as she would be with her golf friends at the South Bend Country Club.

Saturday and yesterday she held the formal opening of her new exclusive feature, the Lillian Lee Beauty Salon, 1801 North Meridian street. The salon probably is one of the most modern and different establishments of its kind in Indianapolis. Before leaving for the tournament at South Bend, her friends and future patrons visited it, to admire the distinctive Chinese setting, planned and decorated by Miss Virginia Lloyd of the L. S. Ayres & Co. interior decorating department.

The salon has a reception room, lounge and dressing room, done in colorful Chinese fashion. Ceilings are of Chinese vermillion, and walls and woodwork are off-white grained to appear as bamboo. Floors are covered with rich blue carpets, and the furniture is Chinese-modern, carrying out a color scheme of yellow, vermillion, blue and white.

Hand-cut Chinese fretwork is seen over the windows, and hangings are Chinese blue chintz over white Venetian blinds. Eight booths, each equipped with a telephone for the convenience of patrons, are paneled in Chinese chintz.

In the lounge is a large mirror, on a blue glass frame in bamboo. The doors are paneled to give a pagoda effect.

Sun Dry of Hair Available
Unique features of the salon is a rock garden, built around a pool in the back yard, with chairs and benches arranged so that patrons may sun-dry their hair following a shampoo, if they prefer.

The salon formally was opened from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 9 Saturday, and open for inspection from 2 to 9 yesterday.

Mrs. Lee is well known in golfing circles. She played in the women's state championship last year at the Highland Golf and Country Club, of which she was a member, and the previous year at South Bend. As president of the Indianapolis Women's Golf Association, she was active in arranging for the state tournament which was held at the Avalon Country Club, now Hillcrest Country Club, in 1931.

Ayres Store to Install Escalators
ESCALATORS probably will make their first appearance in Indianapolis at the L. S. Ayres & Co. store, when they are installed to take care of the Christmas shoppers this year. A contract, approximating $150,000, has been awarded the Otis Elevator Company, for the installation of six of these four-foot wide moving stairways, which will provide up and down service between the first and fourth floors of the store. The escalators will provide additional means of inter-floor traffic, in addition to the elevator service already maintained.

Additional moving stairways will be installed in the store following the Christmas season.
