

NEW DEAL COST MINIMIZED BY WAR CONTRAST

Much Larger Debts Caused by War Were Being Liquidated.

By Scripps-Honored Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Republicans have chosen to pitch the congressional campaign on a note of doubt and cents. Their speakers are stressing the high cost of the New Deal and the rising total of the public debt.

As the politicians among them who were hungry and has been fed, the man without a job who now is working, will be greatly stirred by talk about balancing the budget. It sounds, they suspect, too reminiscent of Ogden L. Mills and others of the Herbert Hoover fold whose "Balance the Budget" slogan was smothered at the polls in 1932.

Mr. Hoover was one of the first to compare the fight against depression to war.

35 Billions for War

As a matter of record, the United States spent $23,400,000,000 to equip, train and send young men to Europe to fight in the World war. This is exclusive of war loans to Europe, a total of some $12,000,000,000 of which a little was paid and the rest now cancelled or defaulted.

Thus the bill reaches a total of $35,000,000,000 for a war the wisdom of which is now questioned.
Republicans protest against spending a fourth of this amount to save Americans from a peace-time disaster in many ways worse than war.
The two-year budget covering the first half of the Roosevelt administration amounts to $16,500,000,000.
About half of this, or something over $8,000,000,000, is for the recovery agencies. It is too early to gauger the accuracy of the budget forecasts, but they are near enough to serve in this discussion.

War Budget Still Huge

"Thirty-five billion to destroy lives; eight billion to save them!" summarizes the administration response to what the New Dealers call pinch-penny politics.

The government now is spending about half of its ordinary budget, around $2,000,000,000 annually, for past wars and protection against future wars. This includes army, navy and navy upkeep, compensation for veterans and interest on the debt.

President Roosevelt, like President Hoover, regarded the fight against depression as a war. He thought it was a fight for which the nation would be willing to pay. Congress, including Republicans, agreed with him.

The President counted the cost and decided in favor of spending what was required to rescue the country from depression.

Debt Passes Earlier Peak

Boldly he told the country the truth. He figured the two-year budget at $16,500,000,000, which he said would bring the public debt up to $31,834,000,000 by July 1, 1935.

The debt stood at $22,538,000,000 a year ago. Now it is $27,053,000,000.
His previous peak was $25,503,000,000 on Dec. 30, 1930, when the depression had reached its lowest point.

From this peak on Aug. 31, 1919,
Democratic secretaries of the treasury
and their Republican successor, Andrew W. Mellon, whittled the debt down more than one and a half billion dollars to $16,026,000,000
on Dec. 30, 1930, when the depression had reached its lowest point.

From this peak on Aug. 31, 1919,
Democratic secretaries of the treasury
and their Republican successor, Andrew W. Mellon, whittled the debt down more than one and a half billion dollars to $16,026,000,000
on Dec. 30, 1930, when the depression had reached its lowest point.

By higher taxes on returning prosperity, by continuing the economy in ordinary expenditures, the treasury expects presently to resume paying down the debt while at the same time taking care of the needs of the people.

Sees Balance in 1936

In an analysis of the last congress' appropriations, Chairman James P. Buchanan of the house appropriations committee forecast that the government would live within the $16,500,000,000 two-year budget despite unforeseen outlays for drought sufferers, and would be able to balance its budget by July 1, 1936.

The government spent $2,786,000,000 less than had been anticipated in the year that ended last June 30.
Budget estimates of expenditures were $9,891,000,000. Actual outlays were $7,105,000,000. This saving provides a leeway for such unpredictable needs as that of the drought victims.

"The only hope in this depression of millions upon millions of our citizens for the preservation of their homes, their farms, their business, their financial recovery and even their daily bread and butter is the government of the United States," said Mr. Buchanan.

"Our people have the courage, the vision and the industry to lift themselves from this slough of despondency, but they need the helping hand of the federal government.
Under the leadership of our great President they are receiving that assistance."

"Whatever measures are necessary, whatever funds are requisite, the American people are willing to furnish him to carry on this herculean task. They do not begrudge the outlays. All that they ask is that the money be well and carefully expended."

PARALYSIS GRIPS SAN FRANCISCO HARBOR IN DOCK STRIKE

More than 175 vessels are tied up, in idleness, in San Francisco's magnificent harbor, usually one of the world's busiest ports, while the longshoremen's strike paralyzes shipping. Stagnation that rules in the harbor is strikingly shown here. With derricks standing unused, turbines stilled, and ships lying at anchor as they have for nearly two months. Docks and piers are piled high with freight awaiting shipment, as federal mediators seek peace.

DIRECT RELIEF SHOWS DECLINE

Figures for May Reveal Increase in Cost of Work Relief.

Direct relief costs and the number of families on the direct relief rolls in Indiana showed a sharp decrease for May over April while the number of families and cost of work relief increased correspondingly for the same period, according to a report to the federal emergency relief administration, made public today, by the Governor's commission on unemployment relief.

The shift from direct relief to work relief is explained by the fact that during April the work relief program was in a formative stage, while in May the workers were able to put in practically full time, according to the report.

In Marion county families on direct relief dropped from 14,557, consisting of 57,486 persons, in April, to 11,857, consisting of 43,742 persons, in May. The cost showed a corresponding decrease from $180,786.59 to $133,275.85.

Work relief showed an increase of 2,172 families, consisting of 7,904 persons, to a May total of 6,165 families, consisting of 29,290 persons, with an increase in cost of $239,642.44 from the April figure of $67,301.52.

REMUS HOUSE, ONCE FAMED FOR LUXURY, GOES FOR PITTANCE

By United Press

CINCINNATI, July 16.—George Remus' Price Hill estate, scene of many gay parties when the ex-bootleg king's coffers were filled with the gains from illicit whisky sales, has been sold for a pittance.

Remus revealed today that he had parted with the estate—and its accompanying mortgages—to Alice Delehanty, employee of a Newport (Ky.) pharmacy. He cleared $5,500 on the deal, he said.

The property included a nine and one-half-acre estate, with a $75,000 mansion and a $100,000 swimming pool, about which many good-time stories were told during Remus' trial for killing his wife, the former Mrs. Imogene Remus. One story told about Remus' more affluent days was that an entire party of guests went in swimming one night in evening dresses and tail coats. Recently Remus wanted to open the palatial pool to children of the neighborhood, but it is understood, the city refused him permission to do so.

KAYE DON SENTENCED TO 4 MONTHS IN JAIL

Famed Race Driver Files Appeal in Manslaughter Case.

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, July 16.—Kaye Don, internationally famous racing motorist, was sentenced today to four months' imprisonment for manslaughter.

The charge was the result of a motor crash in which Don's mechanic, Francis Taylor, was killed. They were testing Don's car for a race late at night. The car was wrecked. Don, himself severely injured, was charged with carelessness.

Don, pale and careworn and still limping because of injuries he received in the crash, filed notice of appeal.

Times Swimming Classes Start at Broad Ripple

Instruction Is Free to Entrants in Annual Course.

Sixth annual free swimming course sponsored by The Times and Broad Ripple swimming pool opened at 10 this morning, with the class for children up to 12.

Today's classes were to feature getting acquainted with the 4,300-gallon of water in the pool, so that pupils might conquer fear of the water.

Arno Wade, chief life guard and instructor of the pool, and his assistants planned to show the novice swimmers how to immerse their faces under water while holding their breath.

Following this first lesson, the swimmers will be taught the duck float, lying on their faces in the water, with arms extended in front of them.

Succeeding lessons will teach kicking in rhythm, use of the arms in the crawl stroke, and co-ordination of the arms and feet.

Following the lessons in these various steps, tests will be given. Those qualifying as swimmers will be given Red Cross certificates.

Hundreds of children and adults learned to swim last year in the free swimming course. Entrance in the classes requires only the entrance fee into the pool, plus coupons published daily in The Times.

Classes will be held at 10 and 2:30 each day of this week for children under 12; at 10:30 and 3 for children between 12 and 18, and at 11 and 3:30 for those over 18. Special classes for employed persons will be held at 8:30 each night.

PRESIDENT HAS QUIET SABBATH

Heads for Hawaii Tonight After Fishing Waters Off Mexico.

ABOARD U. S. S. NEW ORLEANS, July 16.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt expected to arrive today at tiny Clipperton island, 500 miles off the Mexican coast, for another day's fishing.

He planned to leave the cruiser Houston, in which he is cruising to Hawaii, and fish the Clipperton waters in the launch specially fitted for him.

Tonight the President planned to leave directly for Hawaii. The President spent a quiet Sunday. He read and rested on deck after attending church services.

On Saturday Mr. Roosevelt fished in heavy rain at Cocos Island. He and his son Franklin Jr., each caught a 50-pound ono—a fish much like the Barracuda.

'IRON MAN' WRECKS 4 BUILDINGS AFTER AUTO MISSES CURVE

Four empty buildings were wrecked in a freak automobile accident early today at Eastern avenue and St. Clair street, in which no one was injured.

Robert Tolson, 23, of 1636 Mont-calm street, driver, told police that he failed to see the jog in St. Clair street and tipped into the buildings. He and William (Sam) Neff, 20, of 646 Russell avenue, passenger, ducked under the cowl-ling of their car when they saw the crash was inevitable.

Four structures, three garages and a shed, in the vicinity of 801 Temple avenue, were demolished. Mr. Tolson was charged with reckless driving and property destruction.
