

Matrimony Needs More Than Love

Mental and Spiritual as Well as Physical Tie Required.

BY HELEN WELSHIMER
Times Special Writer

LOVE needs a little extra flavor or it will drop like last April's Easter lily. It's a grand emotion, this soul-stirring, heart-breaking upheaval, and a marriage which doesn't start with it and keep up the excitement—quietly, in time, of course, resembles a birthday cake that doesn't have white icing and pink candles.

But affection isn't enough to use as a basis for marriage any more than sugar is sufficient for the baking of a cake. A cake that does not digest is unpalatable. So is a marriage which is lacking in the essential ingredients.

Dr. Paul Popenoe of the California Institute of Family Relations, who addressed the home Economics Conference in New York, stated recently that romantic love for each other is not enough for two persons to use as their marriage basis. Two persons who would make their marriage succeed must have the same goal and some mutual rugged interests, he asserts.

One Appeal Insufficient

Dr. Popenoe is telling the truth. Love may glorify the commonplace, leave you breathless in the moonlight, singing in the rain, oblivious to time and place and caution. But if that affection has not been centered around some one whose appeal is mental and spiritual as well as physical, that love will dry up like a field of wheat in a Kansas drought.

The Breton fisherman and the gypsy maid with the wild red lips sometimes discover that their inward reactions are alike. When they do they find peace and love becomes a perennial plant, though the fisherman lives for the sea and the gypsy maid's heart roams the hills. But if she knows the language of the wind in the pines, while the fisherman's ears are tuned to the pounding of the surf, she will find little joy in watching the harbor and mending sails.

Other Essentials

We can not promise to love another forever and ever. We make our pledges in the hope that we can do so, with a sincere desire that we will live happily ever after.

We promise to do all in our power to preserve love, to keep faith and render loyalty. Beyond that, some would say, one can not go. But there is another step. If a man or woman makes sure that the one whom he loves has his roots in the same soil, is interested in the same things, is traveling the same path and came from the same environment, a long, long step toward happiness is taken.

When the heiress no longer thrills to the passionate chauffeur's kisses and the fact that his nouns and verbs do not agree grows grating, she will become homesick for one of her own kind.

Certainly the physical appeal is necessary. But marriage requires so much more.

As Dr. Popenoe says, if emotional love is all one looks for in marriage, then either the man or the woman is justified in severing the marriage tie and turning to another who promises more romantic love.

There is a certain alchemy, to be sure, that draws a certain man and a certain woman together. But if he wants the road to Dublin and she is going to London, how can they travel together?

Like calls unto like, they say. But it takes a well trained ear to pick out the right voice in the chorus! (Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

A Woman's Viewpoint

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

A LIBERAL education in certain social conditions may be had from a conversation such as I enjoyed recently with a teacher in a fashionable boarding school for girls. Her establishment is patronized by the well-to-do, and is very, very elegant. I'll let her do the talking.

"You end," she told me, "by hating the word freedom. The majority of our pupils are victims of divorce, and after you have seen them suffering under your very eyes you do not think so much of personal liberty."

"First the girl goes for a visit with the mother, then for a week-end with the father. Often she has step-parents, whole sets of them, maybe, and she may be faced suddenly with a new bunch of brothers and sisters, whom she has never seen before."

"Then, too, I have a fine chance to see what low tricks men and women will play on each other to stand in the good graces of the child. Some of their complicated relationships are positively degrading. It's enlightening, I assure you. Better than a college course for learning the inhibitions and complexes and meannesses of human nature. But it is horrible for the children."

"We've done wonders glorifying freedom, I suppose, but I wish all those who shout for it could see the system of homelessness we have made for many of our boys and girls. They'd be better off in a respectable orphan asylum."

By this time she really was warming up to her subject.

"When you talk about sterilization for criminals and morons," she went on, becoming less and less the teacher and more and more the angry woman, "I'll tell you what I think. I'm in favor of doing some of that sterilization on the so-called upper classes. They are as unfit emotionally and as dangerous to society as the lowliest dolts, so far as parent-hood is concerned."

"You've also heard, no doubt, of the dangers we invite by trusting our precious lads and lassies to the old maid school teacher. Well, I'm an old maid school teacher, and if I didn't have any more sense of moral responsibility toward the children in our school than some of their parents, I'd—I'd—"

"I'd go jump in the creek!"

Here was a triumph of nature over education, so I was convinced she meant what she said.

Lebanon to Be Scene of Annual Fete

Columbia Club Outing Wednesday Will Be Family Event.

Wednesday is the day that Columbia Club families motor to Lebanon for their annual summer picnic and golf tournament at the Ulen Country Club. The picnic is the occasion for each member of the family to take part in a diversified program of entertainment for them.

Most of the families arrive at Lebanon for lunch. While the men play golf, the women play bridge in the club house. Attendants supervise games of all kinds for children and take care of them for the day.

Members of the Ulen club will form a reception committee to greet the Columbia visitors, and the club house and golf course will be turned over to Columbia Club members for the day.

According to Wallace O. Lee, chairman of the Columbia Club golf committee, the committee is expecting a large number of entries in the tournament. Many special events have been planned, in addition to the golf, bridge, games and dancing, and dinner.

After dinner trophies and prizes will be awarded to those winning in the various events.

Among the numerous trophies to be awarded is the Henry C. Ulen family trophy, awarded each year to the Columbia Club family with the largest number of individual prize winners. Prizes will be awarded to low gross and low net golfers.

Mrs. J. Hart Laird, Columbia Club hostess, is chairman of a committee of women planning entertainment for the women and children. Prizes will be awarded to each table of bridge.
