New Orleans city government of practically every governing power. Rickerfor's avowed allegiance to Long comes at a most disconcerting time. A hand-picked "investigating committee," composed of nine legislators guided by Long, is preparing to launch an examination into the city administration.

City officials, enjoying themselves for the first time since the "war" started, gleefully point to the known fact that Rickerfor was closeted with Senator Long in a Baton Rouge hotel for more than four hours, during the legislative session last week. Rickerfor, in the meantime, refused to amplify his original announcement that "Long's my friend. I am going to support him at the polls and urge my friends to do so."

Huey Attacks Pegler BY LYLE C. WILSON

United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1934, by United Press)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—I telephoned Senator Huey P. Long at Baton Rouge, La., today and said:

"Hello, senator. What's going on down there? Are you setting up a dictatorship in Louisiana?"

"We just ran the lotteries out of New Orleans. That's all we've done," Long replied. "It made a lot of people pretty sore, including Mayor Walmsley, but we ran 'em out. Now the newspapers are telling lies about a dictatorship."

Generalizing newspaper reports of Louisiana's political circus as "lot of ————," the Kingfish said his own newspaper would be on the stands this week with the "true story" of what has happened.

"There was a fellow named Westbrook Pegler down here," Long complained, referring to the Scripps-Howard writer who visited the Louisiana battle front.

"They would hang that ———— if he came back."

"All right, but what is your next step?" Huey was asked. "There are people in Louisiana who say that Huey Long has established a dictatorship."

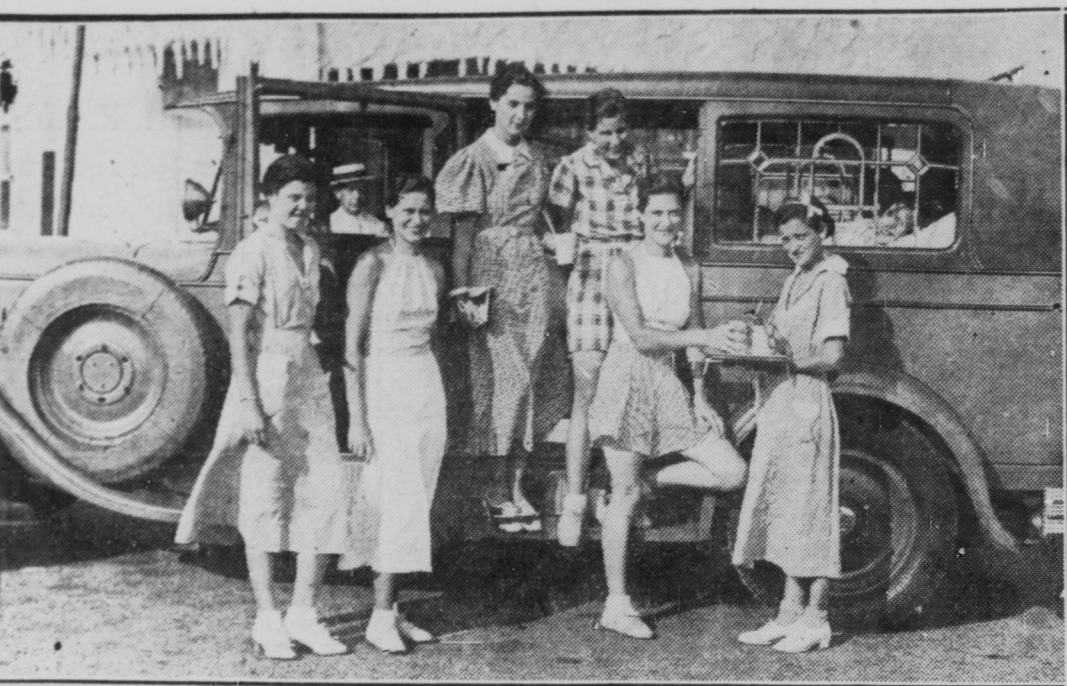

"I don't know what they call it," the Kingfish replied, "but it is all about a lottery."

Plaster Cast on Back Fails to Stop Pat—Visits Friends in Ambulance

BY HELEN LINDSAY
Times Staff Writer

AFTERNOON tea parties in an ambulance are becoming regular social events in Indianapolis, with charming Charlotte (Pat) McFadden, 839 West drive, Woodruff place, as hostess.

"Pat" entertains in unique fashion, lying on her back on a stretcher, her slender young body increased in a heavy plaster cast.

In spite of such a handicap, she wears the same happy smile with which she greeted college classmates last semester, before she was forced to relinquish her sophomore studies at Indiana university because of curvature of the spine.

For four months, "Pat" has lain in a cast waiting for nine inches of bone grafted from her leg into her spine to heal. Each day her hundreds of friends have called on her. The heavy plaster cast is covered with the autographs of her friends who have visited her.

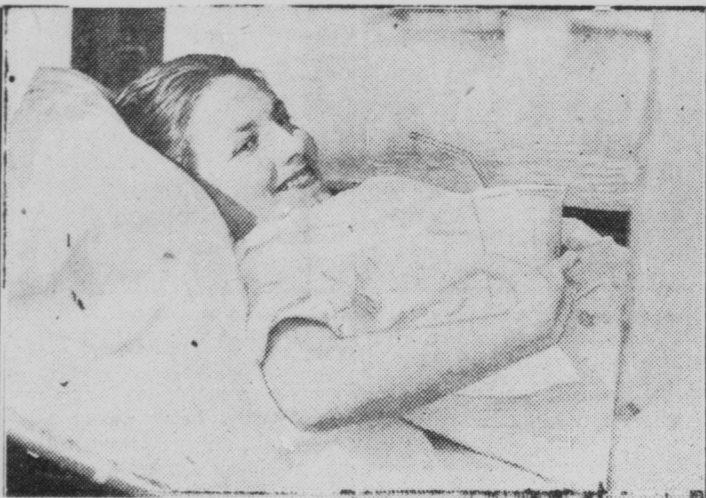

Near Pat's bed is a penny bank, in which these friends have deposited coins on their visits.

Pat has been an active girl all her life, and even her cheerful disposition failed to keep her from yearning for excitement.

ONE day she counted the pennies in the bank. Then she called J. C. Wilson, owner of an ambulance.

"What will it cost to take a ride in your ambulance?" she asked. It was an unusual query, and resulted in the first of a series of odd pleasure trips. Seated in the ambulance beside Pat's stretcher, two of her sisters, Miss Ruth Elizabeth McFadden and Mrs. W. H. Forsyth, and one or two of her girl friends accompanied her on an ambulance tour of the city.

Other friends, advised of the trip, drove in their own automobiles to a soft drink stand on North Illinois street at the canal. The reunion of friends there was meetings in a bid for the veteran vote.

Although vivacious Charlotte (Pat) McFadden, 839 West drive, Woodruff place, Indiana university coed, must remain in a heavy plaster cast until the fall, she is able to be among her friends by hoarding her savings for ambulance rides to a north side outdoor confectionery.

She is shown (upper) with Juanita Trotter, Hazel Guio, Betty Hughes, Lois Williams, Ruth Eppy and Margaret Ratcliff.

Yesterday Senator Robinson and Mr. Minton journeyed to Corydon in the southern part of the state and addressed 3,000 Indiana veterans from the same platform.

The occasion was American Legion day at the Harrison county fair.

Mr. Minton, who lost the toss of a coin, spoke first, and pledged his support to all worth-while veteran legislation which did not run contrary to the best interests of the country as a whole.

Senator Robinson again sounded the 1934 battle cry of the Republican party "to defend the Constitution," "viewed with alarm" the condition of the country under the New Deal, and flayed Agriculture Secretary Henry A. Wallace, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Mr. Wallace's undersecretary, and other "brain-trusters."

Immediately after speaking, Mr. Minton hurried to his home at New Albany, where his wife is gravely ill.

"If I get to Washington, I'll do everything possible that really is constructive for the veteran," said Mr. Minton. "But I will not do anything for the many able-bodied chiselers among the veterans who are preventing the really disabled men from receiving deserved benefits."

"You will soon hear my distinguished opponent," said Mr. Minton referring to Senator Robinson for the first time, "speak of the veteran who was thrown out of a Dayton hospital without a shirt to his back."

"Perhaps the distinguished defender of the Constitution doesn't remember when not only veterans, but practically every working man lost his shirt during the administration of Mr. Hoover."

"There is a menace confronting the United States today, Senator Robinson warned. "It is a question of the loss of freedom and liberty. The issue in this campaign is the maintenance of democracy."

"Everybody is in danger of going to jail," he asserted, "due to the new laws. Today we still may accumulate property and have free speech but no man knows what tomorrow holds."

BABY JOAN HAS PAPA DEMPSEY ON THE ROPES

Jack Dempsey

"Nobody in the boxing game can stand up to Max Baer today," said Jack Dempsey as he clinched with a piece of breakfast melon at his suite in the Claypool this morning.

He arrived early today to referee the three final bouts being presented tonight at Perry stadium.

Dempsey today looks in perfect fighting trim. There was only the barest suggestion of weight around his waist as it showed through the deep red silk dressing gown the former champion donned for his "bout" with his Indianapolis breakfast.

Boxing was the topic for a while, but the real champion who has Jack's interest at the present isn't Max Baer, it's little Joan Hannah Dempsey, who entered the ring Aug. 4, and already has a decision over her famous dad.

Baby Joan is home in New York with her mother, the lovely Hannah Williams, and the former champion, after two more stops to fulfill a contract for refereeing bouts, is going to hurry east for another look at the title-holder of the Dempsey household.

TREASURY HEAD IS UNMOVED BY DOLLAR DECLINE

Remains Silent on Hints of Monetary Warfare
Among Nations.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr., said today he was "not disturbed" over the sensational foreign monetary developments of the past few days.

The secretary said he was at a loss to understand the circulation of various financial rumors in various parts of the world.

"The financiers," he said, "seem to take seriously rumors from South Africa, Shanghai and Timbuctoo. Why these places claim to know definitely what I'm going to do is more than I can see."

Mr. Morgenthau said there had been no change in treasury policy with respect to permitting free export of gold from the United States to foreign gold countries whenever the American dollar falls below par. Reports of an impending new international monetary war among leading nations met with silence from the treasury secretary.

Monetary War Looms

By United Press

PARIS, Aug. 23.—French financial circles predicted a new monetary war today when the British pound sterling slumped precipitously, closing at a new low of 76.03 francs.

The dollar, fractionally stronger than at the opening of the foreign exchange market, closed at 14.93 (6.695 cents a franc) as against an opening of 14.93 (6.698 cents a franc).

The huge stabilization fund of $30,000,000 pounds (more than $1,750,000,000) set up by Great Britain was inactive again today in the Paris bourse.

As a result, French economists believed London was preparing for a fresh devaluation of the pound which, if put into effect, would be followed, it was assumed by another devaluation of the United States dollar.

MARK TWAIN/ was Wrong....

Mark Twain said people are always talking about the weather but never do anything about it.

He was right in his day, but his statement is wrong now. If he could come back to earth he would find us turning sultry summer air into early autumn breezes by means of electric fans. Of course, he would think only the rich could afford them—and he would be wrong again. The amount he used to spend for a cigar would now run an electric fan three days.

In Mark Twain's day, people let their butter melt, their milk sour, their vegetables spoil. Think of the waste of it! And often their children became sick. No wonder he said what he did, for he never saw an electric refrigerator.

Mark Twain had a great imagination, but he never imagined ultra-violet lamps to shed on us their healing rays, radios to bring the music and the voices of the world into our homes, or electric room heaters to take off the chill of a cool autumn evening. Nor could he imagine that all these things can be enjoyed in Indianapolis for a few cents a day.
