

ANNE LINDBERGH TELLS THRILLS OF AERIAL TRIP

Flier's Wife Wore 'Woolies' But Couldn't Keep Feet Warm.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Anne Morrow Lindbergh wears "woolies" and gets cold feet when she goes flying into frigid climates with her husband. She sits on her feet.

Mrs. Lindbergh told all today about their famous flight back and forth across the Atlantic last year. The National Geographic Magazine published her article with a foreword by Colonel Lindbergh, who said there no longer was any doubt about the feasibility of establishing an airline across the Atlantic.

"It is only a question," he wrote, "of which route can be flown now and in the future with the highest degree of efficiency."

Mrs. Lindbergh's feet first got cold when they were approaching the Greenland ice cap at an altitude of 13,000 feet.

"I was wearing, in addition to woolen underwear," she wrote. "One thin wool skirt, one thick wool skirt, one wool sweater, wool riding trousers, several pairs of wool stockings, fur-lined kamiks and helmet and over everything the hooded white blanket parka. I was quite warm, except for my feet, which I sat on."

Mrs. Lindbergh administers a mild scolding to her famous husband—who has the reputation of never losing his way in the air—for taking five hours to go from Amsterdam to Rotterdam, a forty-mile trip.

"We were trying to reach Geneva through what I considered a very thick fog," she said. "My husband said it wasn't bad at all. Perhaps it wasn't bad. I only know that we spent a good deal of time circling small ponds under the mist. I thought we were about to make a forced landing, but my husband said he was looking at castles. I was all ready to step out in Geneva and we turned up in Rotterdam. I was very glad to see Rotterdam even if it was a five-hour trip from Amsterdam."

SEWER REPAIR WORK APPROVED BY BOARD

Connections With Pogue's Run to Be Fixed Soon.

The boards yesterday approved a recommendation to repair sewer connections with Pogue's run under the elevated tracks at Alabama street.

It was pointed out at the meeting that due to sewer leakage the street intersection at Alabama street and Virginia avenue was flooded after heavy rains.

The board indicated that it will ask for government labor on the project.

The board also announced that it would receive bids in the next few weeks on the improvement of Market street from West street to Blackford street.

CITY PRODUCTS GO BY AIR TO LATIN-AMERICA

Four Firms Here Take Advantage of New Express Service.

Four local industries took advantage of the "first flight" of International Air Express under the new arrangement between the Railway Express Agency and Pan American Airways.

Products from the J. D. Adams Company, E. C. Atkins Company, Commercial Export Company and the Elwood Pattern Company speeded southward to Latin America last week.

Cornine, a strong tonic said to possess many of the properties of quinine, is made from the bark of the round-leaved dogwood.

HEALTH DIRECT TO YOU HAAG'S

YOUNGSTER GIVEN CHANCE TO LIVE AFTER RESCUE FROM FAITH CULT

His life in danger while his parents refused medical aid for his infected leg and tried to heal it by prayer, Wallace Doyle Sharp, 8, is shown above, just before he was surrendered by his parents. His leg was amputated and he was given a fair chance to medical attention.

The boy was spirited to a hideout in the Dark Sand mountains near Ft. Payne, Ala., where members of the Holiness cult held a long prayer service in a healing attempt before consenting to medical attention.
