

TRIBUTES PAID SCHAEFER FOR CONCERT WORK

Orchestra Leader Praised at Symphony Group's Session.

"The Faith of Ferdinand Schaefer has changed the history of music in Indianapolis," stated Herman Woolf last night at the first team meeting of the Indiana Symphony Society, at the American Central Life Insurance building.

Mr. Woolf praised the work of Mr. Schaefer in his patient training of the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra and in his gracious generosity with his time.

"The number of free hours of instruction which Mr. Schaefer has given to his musicians, besides the money he has spent himself in building the organization, will probably never be estimated," said Mr. Woolf.

Mrs. Herbert Woolen, chairman in charge of the meetings, next introduced Ralph Wright, superintendent of music in the public schools, who spoke concerning the annual children's concerts given by the orchestra.

School Music Helped

"If for no other reason," Mr. Wright explained, "the orchestra should be kept alive for the purpose of giving Indianapolis school children actual examples of beautiful music."

This is the third year for the children's concerts, and Mr. Wright is planning four concerts for the current season. One of these he hopes to present before the convention of the North Central Music Supervisors in March.

Mr. Wright explained that it is the practice of the various public school music teachers to purchase phonograph records of the different compositions which are to be played on the orchestra concert programs and to thereby acquaint the children over and over with the thematic quality of the piece before the actual playing.

Mr. Schaefer Responds

George Newton, local baritone, who has recently returned from a concert tour, presented a group of brief songs as the entertainment portion of the evening's program.

Mr. Schaefer was introduced by Mrs. Woolen, and responded with a quaintly humorous talk on the general subject of how to sell tickets to the orchestra concerts.

He expressed the desire that the members of the society "radiate symphony," until their prospects have been compelled to "sign on the dotted line."

Indiana in Brief

By Times Special

FRANKFORT, Sept. 25.—Stolen twice in two hours, a bicycle owned by Robert Van Brunt, a high school student, was recovered each time. Two Kokomo young men, Charles Armstrong and Denny Bowman, are under arrest in connection with the theft.

With the arrests, Frankfort police believe they are well on the way to proving that a thriving trade in stolen bicycles is being carried on in Kokomo. Officers who have investigated numerous thefts of bicycles here recently believe the loot was taken to a "fence" in Kokomo.

Armstrong, mounted on the missing wheel, was the first to be arrested. Police arrested him and returned the bicycle to the student. Within two hours, he reported it stolen again and police found Bowman riding it.
