SCHOTT FIRM
DISPLAYS 1935
AUBURN LINES

New Models Available in Sixes and Eights With Lycoming Motors.

Auburn's new 1935 lines of straight eights and six-cylinder automobiles are now on display at the Schott Automobile Company, distributor for the Indianapolis territory.

Roadability, ease of steering and handling, economy of operation and upkeep, quietness, luxurious finish and appointments with an unexcelled performance are the recognized features of these models.

Earl Schott, head of the company, says: "Those who have ridden in these cars report being particularly impressed with the quality of 'ride' which they say is not only different but is far advanced."

"Four models are being offered in the straight eight line, a five-passenger two-door brougham, two-passenger convertible cabriolet with rumble seat and a five-passenger convertible sedan."

"Four models of the same body types are available in the six-cylinder line. All models are of the custom type. Dual ratio may be had on any model at a slight additional cost."

Roominess Featured
"These 1935 cars are remarkably big and roomy, luxuriously finished and designed to give the impression of class. The wheelbase of the six is 120 inches, one inch longer than last year's six, while the straight eight has been advanced to 127 inches, likewise an inch longer than its last year's forerunner."

"Through the deft handling of design lines the cars appear even longer and bigger than they really are."

"In general appearance the new Auburn reflects the present tendency toward streamlining. Through the use of longitudinal lines the hoods of the cars appear extra long and the distinctive radiator design augments this length. This hood, coupled with the wing and torpedo type fenders and slanting top lines of the body, give an appearance of smart distinction."

Body of Welded Steel
"Chromium plate and stainless steel is much in evidence. Headlights, bumpers, louvre beads, running board trim, radiator grill, window separator, hub caps and tire cover edging are all in bright finish."

"Mechanically, the cars contain such features as all-steel unit wheel body structure, new and improved shock absorbers, controlled ventilation system, sound-proof insulation, hydraulic brakes, X-plus-A chassis frame construction, overhead carburetor, sixteen-inch wheels on the eight and needle-bearing universal joints."

"Dual ratio may be had on all models. The eight line is powered with a 115-horse power straight eight Lycoming engine. The horse power of the Lycoming six engine is eighty-five."

Electric Motorcycle
A motorcycle constructed by a Parisian inventor uses electricity for power with a storage battery supplying the current. The cycle can run more than forty miles on one charging of the battery.

GOING OUT OF TOWN?
Leaving from Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis or New York? In these cities you need never "take a chance" on your hotel—you can stay at a Statler (in New York, the Pennsylvania). You'll be sure of all the conveniences, all the comforts that mean complete hotel satisfaction. Even "little things"—neglected by many hotels—are important to the Statlers.

DRIVERS SEEK SAFETY PRIZE

Indianapolis Represented in Campaign of Goodrich Firm.

More than 600 drivers of trucks, buses and taxicabs in the Indianapolis district have entered the race for the Silvertown Safety League awards since the program was inaugurated a little more than a year ago by the B. F. Goodrich Company, it is announced by Mr. L. L. Sowers, district manager.

A large number of awards to drivers for a year without an accident already have been made in the Indianapolis district, and a still larger number presented drivers who have operated six months without an accident, Mr. Sowers says.

Upon completion of six months without an accident for which they are responsible, each driver receives a Silvertown Safety League silver lapel medal and a Silvertown Safety League emblem for his vehicle. After operation of his vehicle for a year he is given a gold medal.

A certificate is presented every fleet operator, or independent owner upon completion of a year's driving without accident.

JERITZA WILL SING FOR FORD

Viennese Soprano to Be on Air Sunday With Detroit Orchestra.

Maria Jeritza will be guest star with the Ford Symphony orchestra on the first Ford Sunday Evening Hour, Oct. 7. The noted Viennese soprano will sing a group of solos, one with the twenty-four voice chorus, which will be featured during the entire thirty-nine-week series of broadcasts.

The new Ford programs under the direction of Victor Kolar, which will be broadcast from Orchestra Hall in Detroit, will be carried over the coast-to-coast network of Columbia stations. The programs will last an hour, beginning at 8 eastern standard time.

The personnel of seventy members of the orchestra for the Ford programs is identical with that of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, which Victor Kolar conducted this summer in Ford Symphony Gardens at the world's fair, Chicago. During this period, the orchestra played more than 600 different selections and, counting repetitions, a total of 1,450 compositions.

Mr. Kolar left the conductors' stand only four times during the series, three times when Ossip Gabrilowitch took over the baton from his associate and once when the orchestra was led by Ilya Scholnik, the concert master, as a reward for his work in the violin section.

Mr. Kolar was born in Budapest of Slovak-German parentage, and received his early musical training as well as his general education in Prague, where he was a pupil of Anton Dvorak. He traces his love and mastery of music to both his mother and father, the latter having been the outstanding oboe virtuoso of Europe in his day.

At 17, the musician came to America where he began as a violinist with Walter Damrosch's New York Symphony orchestra. Later he became assistant conductor of the Pittsburgh symphony, and for some years has been associate conductor with Gabrieliwitsch in Detroit.

Physiologist Makes Unique
Research in Field of Automobile.

An intriguing promise of revelations for the automobile-minded comes from Chicago, where the internationally famed physiologist, Dr. Andrew H. Ryan, has just finished a series of tests which, according to advance information, will interest every person concerned, as designer, engineer, owner, driver or passenger, with motor cars.

Dr. Ryan is an investigator who for years has devoted his energies to the scientific study of human fatigue. Many of his researches, especially those made during the World war, have led to the far-reaching changes in manufacturing methods, working conditions, hours of employment and other occupational factors.

Early this year, Mary B. Warner, an associate of Dr. Ryan in his fatigue work, had occasion to drive automobiles of several different makes. She became acutely conscious of the fact that some of the cars were, or seemed to be, more comfortable, less fatiguing than others.

Having the observation brought to his attention, Dr. Ryan perceived a new line of research, promising worthwhile results. So, early this spring plans and instruments were ready, a special laboratory had been fitted out, a crew of men and women driver-subjects had been enlisted, test cars of different makes had been requisitioned, routes and time schedules had been established, and the work was on.

Now, after nearly six months of painstaking scientific tests of men and women drivers, a prominent automobile manufacturer is reported to be ready to divulge what may prove surprising news of automobile riding qualities such as were ascertained by Dr. Ryan and his staff in their experiments.

LEGION INTERESTED IN

Walter Connolly Rises to Heights in Picture

ONE of the pictures I will put in my list of the ten best pictures of 1934 is Columbia's "Whom the Gods Destroy."

It is one of the most sensitively photographed and acted pictures we have had in many a moon. The theme is "dynamite" because it turns a highly talented and respected business man into a coward who is forced to change his name, identity and even his business to live down his shame.

The great ocean liner meets with an accident and sinks. In the terrible excitement that follows, Forrester, played by Walter Connolly, gives his life to a New York society woman. He turns to aiding the ship's officer in placing women and children in the lifeboats, keeping the men on the sinking ship.

A male passenger goes mad, attempts to knife Forrester in his desperate attempts to get into a lifeboat. The captain shoots down the lifeboat.

ROTARY ELECTS
NEW DIRECTORS;
REVUE STAGED

President's Term Saturated
in Program at Club Session.

The climax of the Indianapolis Rotary Club year was reached last night with election of officers and a musical extravaganza revue, "Jim's Jams," which satirized the term of James Duane Dungan as president.

New directors are Ray F. Cron, Arthur R. Baxter, Howard R. Johnson, Marshall D. Lupton, Ernest C. Ropkey, Curtis H. Roper, Guy A. Wainwright and J. H. Erlich. These directors will meet with the hold-over directors within a few days to elect officers.

A highlight of the revue, written by Dr. Arthur C. Burrell, directed by Ralph H. Edgerton and managed by Don A. Morrison, was a chorus of ten girls from Butler university and Shortridge high school under the direction of Miss Dorothy Jane Atkins and Miss Clemence Marie Dow.

Music was provided by Mrs. J. Harry Green and Mrs. S. E. Fenstermaker, soloists, and a ten-piece orchestra. Featured players in the revue cast were Walker W. Winslow as Mr. Dungan, F. Dungan, Staley as the medicine show man, Audley S. Dunham as the magician, Charles McCormick as Dr. McCormick, Stuart Dean as an old soldier, Edwin R. Hisey as a preacher, Don A. Morrison as "Mrs. Kathryn Turner Morrison," Paul Moffett as himself, Albert Worm as a visiting Rotarian, and Arthur R. Baxter as the bartender.

Harmonica players were C. D. Alexander, William Zeller, Ward Hunt Dean, Otto Krauss, J. Harry Green, Sidney E. Fenstermaker, Omar S. Hunt, Robert Kelly, Dr. Harry W. Parr, Charles F. Zwick and Dr. Marion E. Clark.

"Dancing nymphs" were Carleton W. Starkey, E. Park Akins, William T. Peacock and Frank H. Langens-kamp. The revue choruses included Winifred Ward, Katherine Lewis, Maize Tynner, Adelle Dunn, Marian Carter, Susan Shirk, Alton White, Mildred Grayson, Roberta Turner and Janet Shuman. Miss Dow and Miss Atkins gave solo dances.

The holdover directors are Arthur Conley Burrell, Luther L. Dickerson, Hal E. Howe, Roy Sahn, Raymond E. Slebert, Walker W. Winslow, William M. Zeller and James Duane Dungan.
