

U. S. PREDICTS HEAVY INCREASE IN MEAT PRICES

15 to 20 Per Cent Gain to Be Caused by Drought, Report Reveals.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Meat prices will rise 15 to 20 per cent next year, the department of agriculture indicated today.

Before the crest of the current upward swing of living costs is reached, ham that sells now for 26 cents a pound may cost 31 cents; 37-cent pork may go to 44 cents; frankfurters, 29 to 35 cents; chuck roast, a nickel more.

The drought is to blame. This calamity, described in a special report of the department as "the most widespread and devastating in its effects of any ever experienced in this country," will reduce the nation's meat animal population before 1935 to the smallest in more than thirty-five years.

Not only will cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry be drastically reduced in numbers but they will be much thinner.

Based on Farm Reports

The report was gathered from information supplied by farmers, stockmen and feed merchants in every section of the country. Its forty pages describe graphically the havoc which makes it necessary for livestock in drought territory to go on subsistence rations.

In making public the survey, Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, warned that if the present number of animals remains unchanged, livestock in states unaffected by the drought will be forced to "go on a diet."

Although the report omitted specific mention of prospective price increases, AAA economists foresaw a surge which would carry the level of retail meat costs 15 to 20 per cent higher. The rate of increase will be slower than recently, however, they said, recalling that prices already have risen 30 to 40 per cent above the first quarter of 1934.

Demand to Be Unchanged

Farmers are not expected to suffer from the anticipated decrease in consumption ordinarily accompanying higher prices. It was pointed out that the total national expenditures for meat products usually was about the same from year to year—that when there was an over-supply the consuming public took it at a decreased cost, reversing the procedure in seasons of shortage.

So little is the feed supply, the report said, that imports are inevitable. A shortage of 3,000,000 tons of feed grain and commercial feeds, "which, if basic livestock numbers are to be maintained, would have to be met by further adjustments in feeding or by importation," is indicated.

The survey disclosed that by early winter the number of meat animals will be only about 80 per cent of last year's supply. Marked reduction in slaughter was foretold.
