SEEK WOMAN IN HIJACKING CASE

Police Charge Her Car Was Used in Whisky Theft
From Truck.

The thievery-from-moving-trucks racket, widely prevalent in Indianapolis recently, moved into the hijacking field late yesterday, and today police were exceedingly anxious to question a south side woman as to what she was doing with her automobile just before darkness set in last night.

The Indianapolis Southern Motor Express, 1410 South Capitol avenue, was the victim of yesterday's foray by the truck thieves. As has been their practice, one of the thieves jumped on the rear of the truck and started tossing out merchandise to others.

This time, however, the merchandise was whisky and the accomplices, instead of being planted along the way, were following in a car driven by a woman. The thievery was discovered by the truck's driver, who gave chase when the thieves fled. They got away with only one case of whisky, valued at $25.

The license plates on the car were issued to a south side woman, for whom police are searching.

CEREMONY TO MARK PAVEMENT OPENING

Pennsylvania Street to Be Scene of Rejoicing.

Celebration of the official opening of the newly-paved stretch of Pennsylvania street between St. Clair and Sixteenth streets will be held tonight at Eleventh and Pennsylvania streets.

Merchants and residents who live on the street will hold an open-air carnival, and members of the works board and city engineering staff will speak.

A greeting from Mayor Reginald H. Sullivan, who now is attending the general Episcopalian convention in Atlantic City, N. J., will be read from the speakers' platform.

A bicycle parade at 7:30, which will assemble at St. Clair street, will be a feature of the festivities. Prizes will be awarded for the best and most oddly decorated bicycles.

ARMY MOTORIZATION IS URGED BY SPEAKER

U. S. Must Spend Reasonable Amount, He Says.

Necessity of the United States spending a "reasonable amount" on motorized vehicles in order not to be unprepared for war was stressed by Major L. H. Campbell Jr., ordnance department, Rock Island arsenal, who spoke to the Indiana section, Society of Automotive Engineers, at the Athenaeum last night.

Major Campbell discussed developments in motorization and mechanization of the nation's fighting force before about 300 persons.

NOBEL WINNERS HELP DEDICATE LILLY BUILDING

Laboratories Open for Public
Inspection Following Ceremonies.

The impressive, new laboratories of Eli Lilly & Co. were open for public inspection today following formal dedication ceremonies yesterday in which leading scientists of this and other countries, including two Nobel prize winners, participated.

The new laboratory and its subsidiary buildings are located on South Alabama street opposite the Lilly company's main plant. Nearby, there is a replica of the little laboratory in which the company had its beginnings late in the last century.

The Nobel prize winners on yesterday's list of speakers, who were heard at the dedicatory services, at a luncheon which followed and at a banquet last night in the Indianapolis Athletic Club, were Dr. Irving Langmuir, Schenectady, N. Y., General Electric associate research director, and Sir Frederick Banting, University of Toronto medical faculty member.

They, along with the other distinguished figures in medicine and chemistry, were guests of Eli Lilly, company president, and Josiah K. Lilly, directors' board chairman.

Little Known Chemical

Sir Henry also spoke of the function of acetylcholine, the chemical little known to the public, which carries messages from nerves to muscles in small spurts hundreds of times a second.

Other speakers besides Dr. Langmuir, who discussed the "Unpredictable Results of Research," and Sir Frederick, who spoke of his work in discovering insulin and the cooperation given by the Lilly laboratories in its development commercially, included:

The Lillys, Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, Harvard university; Dr. G. H. A. Clowes, Lilly research bureau director; Dr. George R. Minot, Harvard university; Dr. Carl Voegtlin, Washington, United States health service; Dr. George H. Whipple, Rochester university, Rochester, N. Y., and Dr. Frank R. Lillie, University of Chicago.

SPURNED BY MATE IN COURT, WOMAN DIES

Reconciliation Refused by Husband, Wife's Heart Fails.

GARY, Ind., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Goldie Morris' petition for separate maintenance from Henry H. Morris was granted. Her attorney stepped to the bench of Judge Philip Ridgely.

"What my client wants more than money is a reconciliation," he told the judge.

Judge Ridgely looked across the courtroom at Morris. Decisively, the husband shook his head. Mrs. Morris gasped, sank in her chair. She had died of heart failure.
