

HOME BUILDERS TEACHER STARTS HIS THIRD YEAR

Bible Class Membership
Climbs to 400 Under Walter Caranahan.

Walter Caranahan begins his third year as teacher of the Home Builders' Bible Class of Irvington Methodist church Sunday morning.

When Mr. Caranahan began his teaching activities three years ago, the class had a membership of almost seventy-five. Under his inspirational leadership the class has grown until today its roster lists near two hundred couples.

Mr. Caranahan is head of the mathematics department of Shortridge high school.

The success of the home builders' class is due to the privilege young married couples have by attending all class lessons and social activities together.

The class is active in every department of church, providing many teachers and officers for other departments of the Sunday school, besides several members for the official board of the church.

The new officers of the home builders' class are: Richard Miller, president; Mrs. P. W. Ross, first vice-president; Edgar Rennoe, vice-president; Mrs. D. R. Lindner, secretary; Robert Carpenter, treasurer. The Rev. Guy O. Carpenter is pastor of the Irvington church.

Professor to Preach

The regular Sunday morning sermon at the University Park Christian church, Twenty-ninth street and Kenwood avenue, will be delivered by Dr. Arthur Holmes of the Butler university faculty. "The Graving Tools of God" will be the subject of Dr. Holmes' remarks.

He recently joined the Butler staff following ten years as head of the department of philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Holmes holds the professorship of psychology and philosophy of religion at Butler. Arrangements for Dr. Holmes' appearance were made by the Rev. James A. Tisley, pastor of the church.

BAN ON RANSOM REVIVED AGAIN BY STOLL CASE

Capital Thinks Little Support Will Be Found for Law, However.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The Stoll kidnapping today provoked new discussion of proposals to make it unlawful to pay ransom for return of an abducted person.

Proponents of such legislation contended it might help curb the wave of kidnappings. They argued that if criminals knew ransom could not be paid legally, there would be less incentive for abductions.

Other legal experts and criminologists, including several high department of justice officials, took a contrary view. They felt that such a law would be ignored completely by families of kidnapped persons; that no one with the money to pay would let a law stand in the way of his paying it to obtain return of a loved one.

They believed too, that such legislation would tend to break down the co-operation that families of kidnapped persons have given law enforcement agencies. It was felt efforts would be made to effect payments secretly, without notifying authorities.

England has a non-payment law. But it is conjectural how much it has to do with the small number of kidnappings there.

In the Stoll case, Director J. Edgar Hoover of the justice department division of investigation himself advised that the $50,000 ransom be paid. He directed arrangements under which serial numbers of the money were recorded and broadcast in the hope they would provide a trail to the accused kidnaper, Thomas H. Robinson Jr.

Officials explained payment of the ransom was advised because their first duty was to assist safe return of Mrs. Stoll. The record of the alleged kidnaper included serious assaults and a period of observation in the Tennessee insane asylum. They dared not close in on him as long as he held Mrs. Stoll's life in his hands.

Aromatic Turkish tobacco

On the sunny slopes of Smyrna... in the fertile fields of Macedonia... from the shores of the Black Sea... that's where the best kinds grow... the kinds used in making Chesterfields.

THERE are about as many kinds of Turkish tobacco as there are kinds of apples—but they all have a spicy aroma and flavor which seems to "season" a cigarette better than any other kind that grows.

The right Turkish is costly—but it adds something to Chesterfield's milder better taste.

When you go on your next cruise, stop at Smyrna and visit our tobacco factory. We think you will find it interesting.
