

CLOSED BANK QUIZ PLEDGED BY HARRISON

Republican Candidate for Prosecutor Promises Probe.

A thorough investigation of all closed banks, with prosecution where fraud was indicated, was promised last night by William Henry Harrison, Republican prosecutor nominee, in a speech at 539 West Washington street.

"As I have gone through the city and county in the last thirty days I have been beset with questions from former depositors in its defunct banks," he said. "They want to know whether there is any hope of ever knowing the facts concerning the failure of these banks.

"The longer the facts are kept from them, the stronger is their conviction that the officials of these banks are guilty. They feel, and rightly so, that they are entitled to know the entire facts without further delay—to the end that the guilty be punished and the innocent be freed from the cloud of suspicion now resting over all those connected with these institutions.

"I have gone on record that, if elected, I will make an immediate and personal investigation of the remaining bank cases and will give the public the information to which they are entitled.

"I also have stated publicly that the prosecutor's office would not be used for political purposes nor would indictments be returned without just cause. I feel that the prosecutor should defend the innocent as well as prosecute the guilty.

"I know nothing of the evidence submitted in these cases nor am I passing on the guilt or innocence of any one connected with them. If, from my investigation, I should find no evidence connecting any individual with unlawful acts, I should take immediate steps to clear that individual's name from further suspicion.

"However, if I should find any evidence of guilt I would see that that party stood trial for such acts."

'Captain Hates the Sea' Is Comic 'Grand Hotel'

—BY WALTER D. HICKMAN

IF you have worried about the important question of whether grandfather went to sleep at night with his long beard under or outside the covers, then cease worrying.

The question has been answered for all times by Donald Meek in "The Captain Hates the Sea." Grandfather did both, according to Mr. Meek, and he even awakened at night to see that his long beard was outside the cover.

So Mr. Meek proves for once and for all that it was grandfather's desire to have the whiskers outside the cover most of the time.

This desire of Mr. Meek to protect his long beard makes many a good comedy scene in "The Captain Hates the Sea." Mr. Meek gives a weird performance of a traveler on a great trans-Atlantic liner protecting his whiskers from the soup at dinner time, but Walter Connolly as the captain who hates the sea, sees to it that Mr. Meek's beard is "dunked" in the soup before the movie is over.

Donald Meek

"The Captain Hates the Sea" is a strange mixture of comedy, satire, drunkenness, death, wife beating, pathos and drama. Lewis Milestone spent a fortune on this one which he directed.

The captain (Connolly) wants to know what his passengers are doing and his tipsy steward, Leon Errol, sees to it that he knows shortly after anything unusual occurs.

John Gilbert does a fine job of the always soused author who goes to sea to get on the water wagon, but fails utterly. Errol is a knock-out with his comedy tricks.

Victor McLaglen is Schulte, a private detective who is not dumb, not even with dames or crooks. He plays 'em both. Ferd Keating makes the crook, Danny Checkett, an interesting, but a bad fellow.

Alison Skipworth loves to drink "horsebacks" and she causes the bartender to go crazy when she eats the lemon peel fourteen of fifteen times in one evening.

The photography is splendid and the direction careful but a little confusing at times.
