BY WALTER D. HICKMAN

THE literary market right now is flooded with books relative as to what just did happen when the government of the czars was overthrown in Russia and what has happened since in Soviet Russia.

So many writers merely have scratched the surface because they spent only a short time in Soviet Russia and say only what government officials wanted them as Others, clearly because of training and desire, have been for or against what has been going on in Russia. I have weighed carefully all of these propaganda writers and have dismissed them as

Of the many books I have read on the situation in Russia, there is only one book with which I have been completely satisfied was written from the "inside." That book is "I Live to Tell" by Jacob H. Rubin, recently published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company. It is a straightforward and, I believe, an uncolored recital of the Russian adventures of an American Socialist.

This recital may read like fiction, but Mr. Rubin has marshalled facts regarding his own treatment in Odessa while the White Army of Denikin was in power and when the Reds recaptured the Ukraine.

Mr. Rubin, who had fallen in love with Socialism in Milwaukee, entered Russia at the time General Schilling was commander of Odessa under the Denikin occupation to "organize a Russian-American Chamber of Commerce."

Mr. Rubin's private love for Socialism and his interest in big business at the same time may sound very conflicting, but these two gave added truth to his hundreds of experiences in Russia under the White Army, the Bolsheviks and the Soviets.

In Odessa, as payment for his work of organizing a Russian chamber of commerce he was jailed and for months became the prison companion of Reds who later held the highest places in the new government.

The chapters devoted to prison and trial conditions in Odessa before the Reds captured the city read like a nightmare. Here certainly are facts so terrible they must be true because it would be nearly impossible to dream of anything so terrible.

Mr. Rubin has dates, names, addresses and pages of conversation to back his experiences in his dreamed Utopia. The author gives a pitiful picture as he finally realizes that Soviet Russia, at least in the early stages, was farther away from Utopia than the south pole.

I WAS greatly concerned with his word-pictures of such individuals and leaders such as Emma Goldman, Alexander Bergman, John Reed, Denikin, General Schilling, Lenin, Trotsky, Tchicherin, Stalin and hundreds of others.

He was in elbow touch with Lenin and with Stalin and his conversations and pictures of these two are worth the price of the book.

Here is Soviet Russia from the inside in 1919-1920 and on his return in disguise in 1931. When he was able to "escape" from Russia the first time, it was just by the skin of his teeth and he faced death when he returned under another name in 1931.

Until I find something else, "I Live to Tell" will remain my guide on Russia as it is today and as it was at the beginning following the revolution.

Mr. Rubin goes on record by stating that John Reed told him "I want to tell you how terrible this all is. There is no freedom here, no justice, no opportunity, not even enough bread for the masses and no hope. I am horribly, horribly damned."

This, Mr. Rubin says, was told him by Reed in Moscow a short time before Reed died.

This book sells for $2.75 and is a challenge to all who are seriously interested in government.

WOMAN IS BURNED TO DEATH IN HOUSE FIRE

Clothing Ignited by Kerosene Flames; Home Destroyed.

Mrs. Annie Miller, 55, Negro, 1522 Miller street, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed her home last night. Kerosene thrown into a stove ignited her clothing and resulted in burns causing her death.

Earlier today an unheated hot water boiler in the home of J. R. McCullough, 21 North Oxford avenue, caused a fire that resulted in $150 damage to the home.

A cigarette was believed to have caused a fire that resulted in $150 damage to the home of Mrs. Mary C. Weiss, 2835 Central avenue.
