but made him Governor of California.

Latest figures on the count of ballots showed the former Socialist who turned Democrat to run for Governor was 170,802 behind Governor Merriam with 8,261 of the state's 10,721 precincts counted.

The figures were:
Merriam (Rep.), 813,530; Sinclair (Dem.), 642,728; Haight (Commonwealth-Progressive), 207,000; Merriam's plurality, 170,802.

For Lieutenant Governor—George Hatfield (Rep.), 706,087; Sheridan Downey (Sinclair Democrat), 602,475; Hatfield's majority, 103,612.
Mr. Sinclair rolled up a vote never approached before by a Democratic candidate for a state office. He did it in the face of non-support if not actual opposition from the Roosevelt administration and of active opposition from many of the leading regular Democrats in California. He built his own organization—a personal "machine"—and, although a political lone wolf, he headed a pack of voters which may number as many as three-quarters of a million when the count is complete.

The tremendous strength shown by Mr. Sinclair as a sort of outlaw Democrat in a normally strongly Republican state was certain evidence that:

A powerful mass of votes is ready to follow trends in economics and politics.
That a general renovation of party policies in California is demanded.

It also seems to assure a divided Democratic party in the state. Mr. Sinclair nominally will be the head of the Democratic organization but actually will be opposed by the old line Democrats. Yet he will head a personal organization probably more powerful than any the regular Democrats have built on the Pacific coast.

The demonstration of Sinclair strength also is considered certain to force important liberalizing of the Merriam-Republican policies.

While rolling up what was to many a startling vote for Sinclair, the California electorate also increased by one and probably by two the Democratic delegation in congress.

Sinclair, appearing at his headquarters at midnight, cheered his workers with a militant address. "This is only the first skirmish," he told the group. "Be of good cheer, we are going on with our plans to end poverty."

"He's right," cried an elderly man in workman's garb. "It's only a beginning. It's really a victory." Questioned by reporters, Mr. Sinclair discussed possibility of a lecture or vaudeville tour and then turned other questions with an expression of wonderment as to "how we can make a progressive out of Frank Merriam."

"We might get him to co-operate with us by keeping him scared," he commented. "We can hang the sword of recall over his head until he promises to do something for the people of this state."

TOWNSHIP TREND REVEALED IN MAP

Townships which showed a Republican trend in incomplete returns are shown in this Marion county map with white lines. All other townships were won by the Democrats.

WOMAN, 89, HAPPY AS FIRST VOTE AIDS DEMOCRATIC PARTY

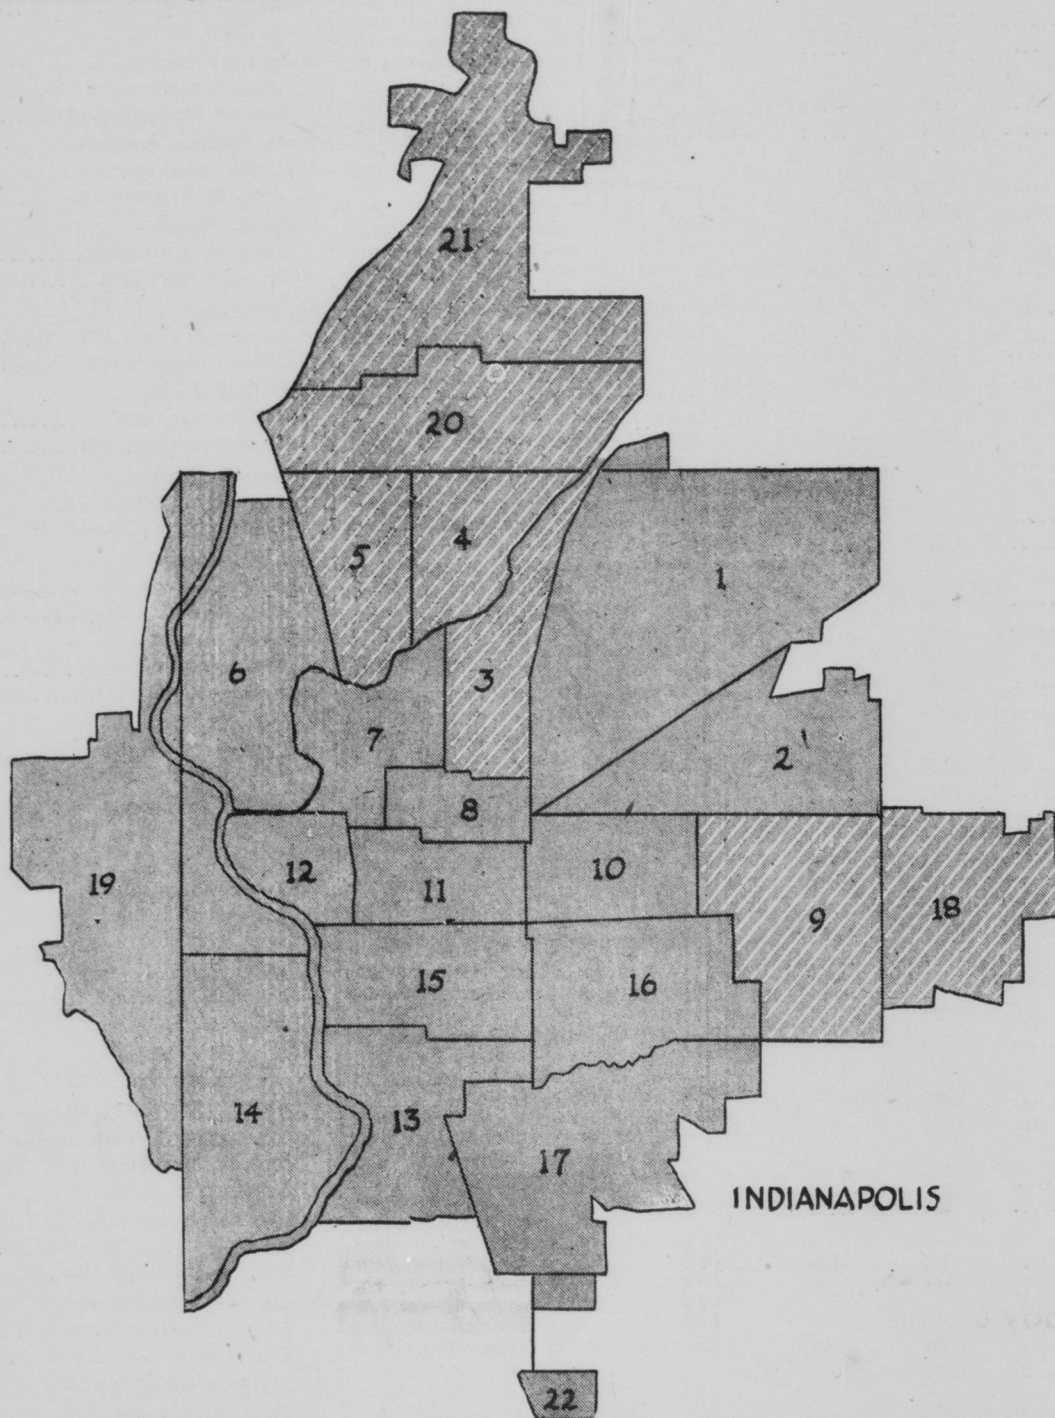

Success attended Mrs. Barbara Schmalz, 89, of 628 Holt road, in the first election in which she was interested enough to vote.

Mrs. Schmalz, who is descended from a long line of Democrats, cast her first vote yesterday. She voted the straight Democratic ticket, and today is rejoicing with her party in its victory.

Mrs. Schmalz is the mother of thirteen children. She was born in Wheeling, W. Va., moved to Ripley county when quite young, and has been a resident of Indiana for many years. She voted in the Fifteenth precinct of Wayne township.

Voting trend of the United States, based on incomplete returns by states, is indicated in this map. States showing white lines are those whose early returns showed Republican victory. All other states were conceded to have gone Democratic.

The white lines on wards shown on this Indianapolis map represent an indicated trend to a Republican majority in incomplete vote tabulations. All other wards appeared to have gone Democratic.

who did not care to be quoted for obvious reasons, estimated that the presence of Senator Robinson on the ticket "cost the Republican city and county ticket at least 10,000 votes."

Democrats staged a parade from downtown to the Democratic Club after it had become apparent that Judge Kern, son of the late United States Senator John W. Kern, had been elected.

The procession was partly disrupted on Washington street by a false alarm run which some Democrats attributed to "a sore-headed Republican."

law; each party nominates six members for city council and the nine receiving the highest number of votes are elected.

The Democratic council ticket apparently elected is Edward B. Raub, Ross H. Wallace, Nannette Dowd, Silas J. Carr, Adolph J. Fritz and Dr. Theodore Cable.

At 263 precincts, the vote for the Republican council ticket was: Carl H. Buddenbaum, 63,390; Edward R. Kealing, 63,336; Ralph F. Moore, 63,290; William A. Oren, 63,376; John A. Schumacher, 63,385; and Herman E. Bowers, 63,290. Democratic totals far exceeded these figures.

Daniel J. O'Neill, Democratic nominee for city clerk, was far ahead of Edward W. Noll, Republican, with a count of 73,388 to 63,133 at 304 precincts.

*The tabulation of the 1932 party election vote is based on unofficial compilation of the precinct and ward figures under the new ward setup in the county which added several wards. To arrive at the 1932 estimate, The Times has based its revision on the official secretary of state vote totals and rearranged them under the new ward outline.
