

Small Boys to Play in Football Game Sharing Attention With Colleges

Orchard and School 66 Teams Scheduled to Clash Today at Butler Bowl to End Tie Situation.

THE Indiana-Purdue football game at Lafayette had a serious contender for interest today among two groups of parents. The Orchard school football team, captained by Bob Scott, and the Wildcat team from School 66, led by Herman W. Kothe Jr., were scheduled to meet this afternoon in the Butler bowl to play off a tie game.

Parents of members of both teams, other patrons of the schools, and the pupils reserved the afternoon to see the youthful players go out to break the tie score.

Anne Atkins and Evaline Hitz will be two sidelines with enthusiasm to spare. Anne and Evaline have been playing in the Orchard practice games, and it will be with no small amount of disappointment that they will be benched for the championship play. In the early days of football at the school, girls played as well as boys, but now they are ruled to the cheering sections for the games with neighborhood vacant lot teams and various packs of Wolf Cubs, junior organization of the Boy Scouts.

Any boy who wants to play at Orchard is invited to join the squad coached by Herbert Sweet and Gordon Thompson of the school staff. Smiley Chambers is the only third grader, and the other boys of the squad are Bud Bookwalter, John Dean, Bill Bailey, John Gould, Ben Hitz, Fred and John Holliday, brothers, and their cousin, Jim Holliday; Donald Jameson, Victor Jose, Perry Lesh, Ned Merrill, Roy Miller, John Osborne, Jerry Smith, Bill Wainwright and Charles Zerfas.

Elias C. Atkins, a former football star at Yale university, will be one of the fathers cheering for the Orchard team. John W. Atherton, member of the Butler board of directors, heard about the football games of Orchard at business men's luncheons attended by many of the boys' fathers. He had been following the team's games during the season and invited the boys to play off their final game in the bowl.

On young Kothe's team are Philip Thompson, Henry Tinney, Dick Lechry, Bob and Don King, Eugene Stauder, Jim Smith, Bonham and John Lathrop, Bob Hess, Jack Weber, Stanley Warner, Frank Lewis, Fred Maynard, Don Campbell, Harold Wyman and Richard Miller. This morning Herman was confident that his Wildcat cubs were to win.

The past season has been the most successful for Orchard since play began in 1925. The pupils have played any eleven with a total weight equalling theirs. The quarters are cut to 7½ minutes, half the regular time. The boys play entirely for fun and receive no letters or trophies for their achievements. Their sweaters are green and pants brown to carry out the school colors.

The boys have played during recesses and after school hours every day except Friday when the Wolf Cub pack meetings are held. High school boys in the neighborhoods have refereed the season's games on Thursday afternoons.

School Pageant Set
The pilgrim, traditionally featured in Thanksgiving pageants, will be replaced in the Orchard holiday pageant by the Indian. The pageant theme was chosen from the sacred corn ritual of the Indians at Zuni, N. M., visited on several occasions by Orchard pupils during the annual Children's Museum treks led by Hillis Howie, school director.

As far back as 1540, long before the pilgrims landed in America, the Spaniards described these ceremonies, in which the tribes played for plenty during all seasons of the year. The same rituals have been used for thousands of years, the boys have discovered in their studies.

Mr. Thompson has seen the Zuni dances and will direct the children. Mr. Sweet will direct production of prayer sticks and masks. The musical accompaniment is being planned by Frances Allen, and Miss Virginia Elliott will direct the staging. Coloring of the authentic costumes and settings will be chosen by Mrs. Edmund Schildknecht.

The children who will appear in the pageant, which will be open to the public, are Anne Atkins, Smiley Chambers, Wymond Angell, Lillian Fletcher, Lucy Holliday, Marjory Home, Donald Jameson, Fred Lesh, Mitchell McDermott, Roy Miller, Martha Ann Scott, Jane Sewell, Bill Van Landingham, Tom Wainwright and Winston Holliday.

DINNER SET AT ALGONQUIN CLUB
Riders of the Algonquin Riding Club will attend Thanksgiving dinner at 4:30 tomorrow at the clubhouse. Mrs. Evanson Earp, retiring entertainment committee chairman, will arrange the entertainment to include cards and games.

Dance will be held at St. Ann's hall Tuesday night with Al. Andy and Doc providing the music. November committee will be in charge.

NOVEMBER BRIDE
Mrs. J. F. Shepperd, 328 Northern avenue, will be hostess for a meeting of the Hoosier Tourist Club at its regular meeting. The program will be presented by Mesdames F. W. Danner, J. J. Gilchrist and J. P. Aspinall.

"Interior Decoration" will be discussed by Mrs. Eleanor Miller at a meeting of the Late Book Club with Mesdames C. V. Rule, L. W. Hully and C. J. Renard, hostesses.

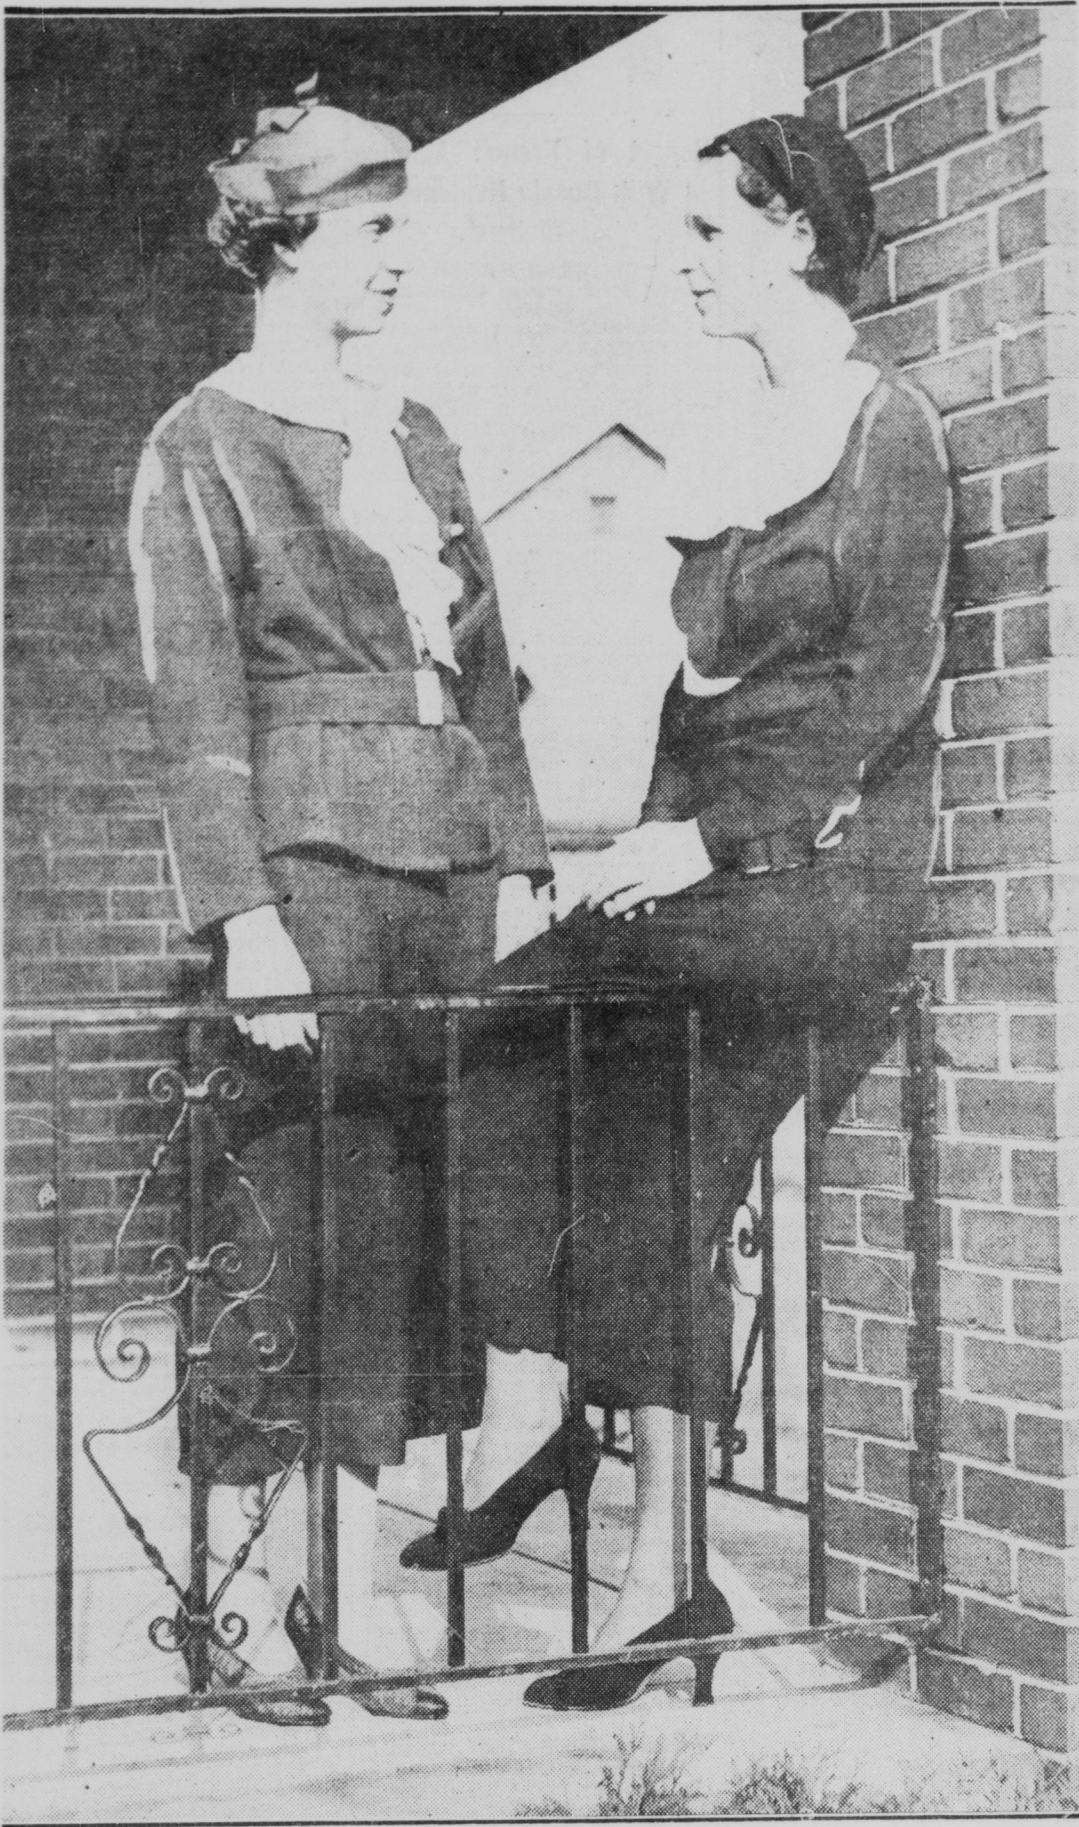

A book review of "Ann Vickers" by Mrs. Henry E. von Grimmerstein, will feature the regular meeting of the Anagnos group of Epsilon Sigma Omicron at the Severin.

Junior Sub-Deb Corner at Block's Presents New Hats and Scarfs in Sets

Small, Close-Fitting Turbans With Peaked Crowns, Rolled and Knotted Brims Made for Teen-Age Girls.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THE bright, loosely woven materials, inspired by the fabrics woven by peasants in foreign countries, have found their way to the Junior Sub-Deb hat corner in the William H. Block Company store in the perkier hat and scarf sets any girl in her teens ever wanted.

The hats are small, close-fitting turbans, which are made with peaked crowns, and rolled and knotted brims. The scarfs are the long, fringed-end ones, which are just the thing to wear for winter sports, tucked inside the flattering fur collar of a coat, or peeping out between the double-breasted buttoned front of the tweed sports coats junior girls affect this season. The popularity of hat and scarf sets is acknowledged in the display of junior deb hats at Block's. One attractive set is in rust-colored velvet. The hat is a beret, decorated with a small, close-fitting turban, and a scarf of the same velvet. With this there is a triangular scarf of the same velvet. Others showing berets and triangular scarfs in sets are made of plaid corduroy, one particularly colorful showing a bright blue with black checks.

Rabbit wool has been used in sets which include gloves, scarf and turban. The turbans are made with an upstanding fold around the top of the crown, and these sets are in the warm winter colors which look well with browns and rusts.

For the sophisticated youngster, there is a close-fitting felt hat in rust, with a deep sharply upturned brim. The crown has an overlying of the same felt, the tied ends finished with ornamental gold tips.

Plaid woolen turbans and scarfs are shown for the juniors, too. These are finished with brightly colored quills at the side.

Ginger Rogers Wore Lace Wedding Gown

THE gown which Ginger Rogers, young RKO radio-film star, wore at her wedding recently to new Ayres in the Little Church of the Flowers, Hollywood, was as lovely as any of the costumes which she has been seen wearing in the movies. It was designed by Kiviette, and was of pale green Chantilly lace over a satin slip of the same color. With it she wore a hat designed by Lily Dache, made of quilted malmie. It was very wide, with a full veil at the back. The bride carried a bouquet of orchids and gardenias.

The gown was made with a fitted bodice, with jeweled buttons down the center front, and had long sleeves and a high round neck which was edged with a soft flounce of the lace. From the waistline down, the skirt, which showed a petuum, was made full.

The gowns worn by the maid of honor, Phyllis Fraser, and Janet Gaynor and Mary Brian, bridesmaids, all were in cocktail style, with slender skirts and jackets. Miss Fraser wore aquamarine crepe with jade velvet trimming. Janet Gaynor wore yellow crepe, trimmed in brown velvet, and Mary Brian was gowning in a soft French blue.

Madame Schiaparelli Among Best-Dressed

WHEN Adolphe Menjou was asked by a newspaper in the east to select whom he considered the ten best-dressed women in the world recently, he named Madame Schiaparelli, designer of women's clothing, among them.

Mr. Menjou made the explanatory statement, according to press dispatches, that he considered the designer "infinitely smarter than most of the women she dresses." Others whom he named among the ten were Kay Francis, Mrs. Harrison Williams, New York, named last spring by Paris experts as the best-dressed woman in America, and Joan Bennett.

Contract Bridge

This is the third of six hands by Aaron Frank. North bids diamonds and hearts. West finally buys the contract at three no trump. It was played by four of the greatest card players in the country. The contract was defeated three tricks by getting a squeeze on declarer. Try it, as South.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

BY W. E. M'KINNEY
Secretary American Bridge League

TODAY'S hand helped give Aaron Frank and his teammates their first national championship, as it was one of the important hands in the final of the knock-out team-of-four match which was played in New York against Mrs. Culbertson's team.

Mr. Frank and Jeff Glick, his partner, use the one-over-one, but do not open the bidding with a four-card major. They prefer to open with an artificial one club when they have an original bid, regardless of the club holding. When Mr. Glick in the North opened the bidding with one heart, Mr. Frank in the South knew that his partner had at least five hearts.

After East's over-call of one spade, Mr. Frank explained to me that his trump to two no trump might appear optimistic, but knowing that his partner had an original bid with a five-card heart suit and his hand contained almost an original bid, with a fit in hearts, he felt justified in inviting game.

Mr. Glick made a nice bid of three no trump, instead of giving Mr. Frank's reasoning on the hand. He said: "I decided that East held six spades, due to the fact that West

WEST's opening lead was the nine of spades. The jack was played from dummy. East covered with the queen and Mr. Frank played the five. East returned the king of spades and again Mr. Frank played low. East holding the trick East abandoned the spade suit and shifted to the four of clubs.

Now I want to give you Mr. Frank's reasoning on the hand. He said: "I decided that East held six spades, due to the fact that West
