KARABELL GIVEN OATH OF OFFICE

New Municipal Judge Sworn in by Dewey Myers;
Tries First Case.

Charles J. Karabell was administered the oath of office as Municipal Judge by his colleague, Municipal Judge Dewey Myers, in Municipal Court 4 yesterday.

Judge Myers spoke briefly saying that he was confident that the new judge would be a credit to the bench since he was known as a friend of the police as well as a friend of the people of Indianapolis.

After receiving the oath of office, Judge Karabell was presented with a handsome ebony gavel, the gift of a group of his friends. He then began the trial of his first case.

The case was that of Clarence Greenough, 2138 N. Alabama-st., arrested on the complaint of his father on a charge of drunkenness and vagrancy. Judge Karabell heard the testimony and after the father had pleaded for leniency, he dismissed the charges when Greenough had promised to turn over a new leaf for the new year.

The courtroom was decorated with flowers which will be sent to the Veterans' Hospital. A basket of apples which had been sent to the new jurist were distributed among the well-wishers who had come to see him take office and also among the typical New Year's crowd of prisoners.

KERN INSTALLED AS MAYOR, CITY HALL IS PACKED

Thousands Hear Him Pledge
Administration to Follow
Sullivan Principles.

Mayor John W. Kern began his duties as mayor of Indianapolis today after having been inducted formally into his office yesterday noon at a brief but impressive inaugural ceremony at City Hall.

The first three floors of the building were packed with friends and well-wishers of the new administration who heard Mayor Kern pledge himself to carry on the principles of "honesty, efficiency, courage and economy" of his predecessor, Reginald H. Sullivan.

After the new mayor had received the oath of office from his brother, William C. Kern, deputy prosecutor under County Prosecutor Herbert M. Spencer, members of his official family were sworn in by Circuit Judge Earl R. Cox. The inauguration ceremony took place on a small rostrum on the main floor of City Hall. The building was gaily decorated with flags and bunting with Christmas lanterns remaining to add a seasonal note.

Judge Cox administered the oath to two groups, one composed of the new City Clerk, Daniel J. O'Neill Jr., and the members of the new City Council. The second group included the Works Board, Safety Board, and the heads of the various city departments.

Kern, Sullivan Speak

The only speeches of the day were given by the retiring and incoming mayors. Former Mayor Sullivan presented his successor with a large key to the city and expressed his confidence in the new mayor and his administration and predicted that they would make a great record in giving good government to the citizens of Indianapolis.

Mayor Kern paid eloquent tribute to Mayor Sullivan and those who had worked under him and declared that they filled their offices magnificently.

"I take office with a deep and humble sense of the responsibilities involved," he said, "and I shall strive to measure up to the precedent Mayor Sullivan has set for me."

"The last election was a mandate from the people to continue the honest, efficient, courageous and economic government they have had under the last administration. I shall try to be loyal to them and to the principles of the Democratic party. I am deeply touched by the number of friends who have turned up for this ceremony and I hope to have your friendship and loyalty throughout my administration."

"God bless you and a Happy New Year!"

Reception Held

At the close of the ceremonies, Mayor Kern held a public reception and greeted more than 1000 friends in the mayor's office. With him at the reception were his widow, Mrs. John W. Kern Sr., widow of the former United States Senator; his wife and 6-year-old son, John W. Kern III; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Kern, and his secretary, Joseph B. Tynan.

The office was banked with flowers sent by admirers of the new mayor and his predecessor. These were later to patients at City Hospital.

While the reception was in progress, the Safety Board held its first meeting and made many changes in the personnel of the Police and Fire Departments.

At the same time, the newly elected City Council held its first meeting and unanimously elected Edward B. Raub as president of the Council. Mr. Raub, who is Indianapolis Life Insurance Co. president, held the same office in 1928-29 during the administration of ex-Mayor L. E. Slack. Committee members for the coming year also were chosen.

Members of the Finance Committee are Ross H. Wallace, Dr. Theodore Cable, Mrs. Nannette Dowd, Adolph Fritz and Silas J. Carr.

Works Group Named

Public Works Committee members will be Dr. Cable, Mr. Wallace, Mr. Carr, Mr. Oren and Mr. Schumacher.

Committee on Public Safety: Mr. Carr, Mrs. Dowd, Mr. Wallace, Mr. Oren and Mr. Schumacher.

NEW CITY, COUNTY OFFICIALS BEGIN WORK

New city and county officials today settled down to the routine of their offices, following formal ceremonies held yesterday. Mayor John W. Kern is shown (upper) as he was presented with a huge "key to the city" by Reginald H. Sullivan, the retiring mayor. Prosecutor Herbert M. Spencer posed with his father, William W. Spencer (lower) following inaugural ceremonies. Everett Agnew, a friend, is in the background.

142,000 Readers Listed by City Library in 1934

Social Subjects and Problems Most Popular Books, Lengthy Report for Year Discloses.

A 50-page report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, has brought a resolution of commendation to City Librarian L. L. Dickerson and staff from the School Board.

Through in its review and definite in proposed corrections, the report covers all pertinent library facts. Its contents, extending over 11 chapters, include discussion of readers and their literary tastes, the local book supply, building needs, school and teacher service and a financial summary.

The report reveals that 142,000 persons, 39 per cent of the city's population, are registered readers. Of these, 96,000 are adults and 46,000 children. Since depression years, readers have increased annually, the report states, and more particularly have become library patrons.

Books pertaining to social subjects and problems have become extremely popular, the report sets forth, and housewives and unemployed young women borrow the greatest number of books, dealing with every phase of human knowledge.

During the year, 3,451,000 books were circulated, while five years ago, it is shown, the number was 2,297,000, and ten years ago 1,552,500. More than 400,000 items, including books, magazines and endowments, have been donated to the library during the last five years, the report states. Important benefactors include the Julia Conner Thompson Memorial Collection, Raub states, and the Eliza G. Browning Memorial, a music collection from Mrs. Herbert M. Woolen and the Eli Lilly Company donations.

The library, it is shown, serves 20 branches, 91 schools, 39 stations and three hospitals.

TWO SUSPECTS NABBED IN TROLLEY HOLDUP

Boy, 15, Spots Auto Number Which Leads to Arrest.

Alertness of 15-year-old Paul Ashbey, 2400 Central-av., who observed an auto license number, resulted last night in the arrest of Fred Wooley, 25, of 2112 Newton-st., and the detention today of Ward Storms, 31, of 42 S. La Salle-st., following a streetcar holdup.

Two bandits, one of them armed, according to police, last night held up Kyle Link, 30, a motorman, at 20th and Olney-sts. They took $5 and a money-changer, then escaped in an auto parked nearby.

Following an investigation, police apprehended Wooley on a charge of vagrancy and today took Storms into custody for questioning.

FOUR SEATED IN JURY TO HEAR LINDBERGH CASE

Two Housewives, Machinist

upon the availability of the talesmen.

Time after time the prospective juror admitted he had formed such a strong opinion that no evidence, whatever its nature, could sway his judgment.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, trying to speed the selection of a jury, asked many questions himself, and occasionally exhibited annoyance at the talesmen's refusal to bend their judgment to the facts as they will be brought out by the state's 150 witnesses.

An hour and a half after Justice Trenchard brought his gavel down on the pine bench with a mild pat, and officially declared the trial open, only one juror had definitely been seated.

Col. Lindbergh sat within a few feet of Hauptmann, but not once did the two men exchange a glance. Col. Lindbergh hardly smiled once from the time he entered the court until noon recess.

He sat between Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf and a state detective, with his arms folded, looking straight ahead. Occasionally, Col. Lindbergh leaned slightly forward and suppressed his hand at one ear to hear the low-voiced envenement.

Hauptmann gazed straight to the front. He occasionally turned slightly and watched the prospective jurors, but not once did he look at Col. Lindbergh.

Hauptmann saw yesterday, for the last time in private conversation before he is found guilty or acquitted, the blond wife who has stuck by him from the moment of his arrest. There were tears in Anna Schoeffel Hauptmann's eyes when she left the jail. There were none in Hauptmann's.

The frantic preparations for the trial which have made Flemington an uproarious boom town, were replaced by an atmosphere of strange calm in the courthouse although the street outside boiled with people and excitement. Only the clattering of a hundred telegraph instruments which are to pour a million words a day into world news channels showed the importance of the case.

Detective to Testify

The most important witnesses, it is known, will be those whose names are the most prominent—Col. Lindbergh, and his wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh. Col. Lindbergh will establish the facts about events in his household on the blustery March night his child was stolen. His wife will tell how the infant, suffering from a cold, was put warmly to bed—and how the nursemaid, Miss Gow, made the horrifying discovery that the crib was empty.

Beyond that, it is believed, the tall aviator will be called upon only to cover the poignant moments when he identified the body of his son, after its discovery in a shallow grave in the hills near his home.

It is the minor characters of the drama who will provide the crowd's demand for sensation. Such a man, for example, as Joseph Perrone, who will take the stand to testify that Bruno Hauptmann paid him a dollar to take a kidnap note to the kindly old Bronx professor, Dr. Condon, who later gave the negotiator, Col. Lindbergh's $50,000.

Such a witness also, will be Arthur Johnson, the New York detective, who will spread on the court records—unless his testimony is excluded—the story of Hauptmann's early criminal career as the "bad boy of Kamenz," Germany as a burglar, highwayman and jail breaker.

Mystery Angles Expected

It is the defense which will provide all the "mystery angles." The state will attempt to strip the trial free from a hundred mysterious coincidences that have made the case an unparalleled criminal story.

The defense, on the other hand, will inject John Hughes Curtis of Norfolk, the imaginative boat builder who committed a cruel hoax on the Lindbergh family when he pretended he was in touch with the actual kidnapers of the baby.

Thief Steals $50 Typewriter

While Fred Krueger was working last night in the rear of the Walgreen Drug Co. warehouse, 10 N. Sage-st., a thief entered the front office and stole a typewriter valued at $50. Mr. Krueger, a Walgreen employee, told police today.

MITES SET FOR SLAYING VICTIM

Reynolds E. MacBeth to Be Buried Tomorrow in Crown Hill.

Services for Reynolds E. MacBeth, who was killed by an unidentified assailant New Year's eve as he was preparing to close his variety store at 822 N. Alabama-st., will be at 2:30 tomorrow in the Hisey & Titus Funeral Home, 951 N. Delaware-st. Burial will be in Crown Hill.

Mr. MacBeth, who was 42, was shot by a man who was seen by a woman hurrying from the store after the shooting. He was believed to have been in a nearby restaurant exhibiting a revolver just before the shooting.

Police believe he intended to rob Mr. MacBeth but lost his nerve after the shooting and fled.

A former clerk and a clerk who was off duty the night of the killing were investigated by police who said their activities that night were above suspicion.

Mr. MacBeth is survived by his widow, sisters, Mrs. Charles Huber, Allentown, Pa., and Mrs. Dewey McClaugh, Bensenville, Pa., and a brother, John-BacBeth, Aspers.

He fought overseas in the World War and was secretary of the Indianapolis Retail Hardware Assn.
