

Collection of Books on Medical History Claims Attention of City Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Russo Start New Group After Disposing of Another to Indiana State Library.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN Times Woman's Page Editor

A NEW collection of first editions has been started by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Russo. That is significant because when they begin concentrating on some subject, they are sure to gather a set of books covering the subject comprehensively.

This new collection is concerned with the history of medicine. The last one, sold to the state for its new library, dealt with Robert Dale Owen and the New Harmony settlement.

The adventure of seeking and finding a coveted book is only one of the joys of book collecting, both Mr. and Mrs. Russo say.

"There is so much human interest in the circumstances of the publication, discovery of the book or sometimes even the condition of the book," Mrs. Russo remarked.

She brought out one of the books which they found recently to add to the medical history collection. The book, "Trials of a Public Benefactor," as illustrated in the discussion of etherization by Dr. Nathan P. Rice, has on its flyleaf the penciled inscription of greeting by Dr. William T. G. Morton, the discoverer, to William H. Eddy, his attorney, who was assisting him in the legal details of patenting his discovery.

A Dr. Long, dentist, in Danielsville, Ga., had used ether for anaesthesia before Dr. Morton, but Dr. Morton moved to action by a Dr. Jackson had presented his discovery to the Nation's attention with the hope of making a great deal of money.

It resulted in the course of the verification of ether's new found use that Dr. Morton's and Mr. Eddy's dreams of becoming wealthy failed to materialize.

The book, detailing Dr. Morton's work apparently served as a solace to Mr. Eddy, for at the page where mention is made of the possibility of making a great deal of money from the discovery, the binding is broken as if the book had been opened there many times.

The passage in the text mentions Mr. Eddy; Dr. Rice wrote, "He (Dr. Morton) mentioned that a patent for the discovery was about to be taken out, from which a great deal of money would be made."

It is the first year for the award. The local unit was founded in 1933.

Butler Chapter of Spurs Wins National Award

Miss Dorothy Dunbar, president of Spurs, sophomore honorary organization for women at Butler University, has been notified that the local chapter has received the national cup for maintaining the best chapter record for the past school year.

The award is based on the number of activities in which each unit of the organization participates and will be passed on to winning chapters each year.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Let this column be your channel of self-expression. Put your problems, opinions, thoughts and questions in a letter to Jane Jordan today.

Dear Jane Jordan—For one reason or another I stayed disgustingly sober New Year's Eve and didn't have a date. I dropped in a little inn, popular with Butler and Shortridge students about 1 o'clock and ordered a beer.

Every one around me was in a more or less drunken condition. I was the only sober one in the place—I whose reputation as a drunk is well known. I noticed a 15-year-old girl of my acquaintance surrounded by a group of punks in different stages of intoxication.

She looked like she needed help so I stepped up and pulled her away and boy she was a sight! Her coat collar was ripped completely off and her dress wasn't in much better condition. It was the usual story. The sight of that 15-year-old kid made me sick.

I don't know just how to remedy this thing of kids who should still be in bloomers getting pie-eyed but some one should find one. I don't know if you see any sense in this letter or not. It's just my thoughts and ideas of that night.

Answer—If there is anything more depressing than a sober person's view of a bunch of drunkards, I do not know what it is. Probably if any one of the group you watched had been sober, his reactions would have been the same as yours. I have no doubt that all these young people were as decent as you are, and just as puritanical in their convictions.

Otherwise, they would not have felt the necessity to paralyze their inhibitions with alcohol in order to defy their conscious beliefs. Now that you are in a thoughtful mood about the modern scene, perhaps you can figure out why these young people seek to divert themselves of all personal responsibility through inebriation. Why do they feel unequal to the load of consciousness they carry? What are the social causes of wholesale drinking?

I do not think there is any particular cause for congratulation on the fact that you drink only when alone. It merely means that you have a different type of inhibition to paralyze. At bottom it is not so much respect for the girls that deters you so much as the fact that you have less to struggle against in their presence than you have when alone.

You figure it out, and if you (or other readers) come to any interesting conclusions, put them in a letter. Dear Jane Jordan—As a sophomore in college, 18 years old, I seem to fall for every pretty face I see.

Youth of Today Expects Decorum and Dignity to Mark Elders' Behavior

Boy or Girl Willing to Endure Frowns on Own Unconventional Acts, But Rebel Against Parents Who Imitate.

BY GRETTA PALMER Times Special Writer

"THE young of today," said the young college professor, "are a hide-bound and narrow-minded lot." He was very angry. The difficulty, it seemed, arose when he appeared in his freshman English class, nonchalantly carrying a copy of "Ulysses" under his arm, and undertook to discuss its contents with the students.

"Yet I know," said the chagrined young man, "that at least half of them have devoured the book and shown no false modesty in discussing it among themselves."

And that, one gathered, was the real cause of the professor's unbecoming wrath. For all his comparative youth he was in the position of an official member of the older generation.

Much of the lack of understanding that prevails between the generations nowadays may be traced to the fact that parents refuse to accept their appointed role as conservative pillars of society. The mother who punctuates her conversation with the latest flapper slang, the father who asks to be treated like one of the boys—these characters are essentially shocking to the young, who have a strong sense of decorum under it all.

The boy who has had too much to drink expects to take off his shoes at the front door and sneak up to bed without arousing the family. He even prefers that his parents should make this necessary by their proper disapproval of his behavior.

It is hard for the modern parents, who are eager to hang onto their own youth, to prevent themselves from aping the manners of the young. It is difficult for them to admit the gap between the generations and to realize that the last thing their children ask of them is that they play the role of conspirators in their mischief.

Expect Standards of Older Folk

The glibdest and wildest young man will win a little if he hears a preacher tell a really dirty story—as a few misguided clergymen discovered in the war. The girl whose flirtatiousness is the scandal of the neighborhood will still prefer that her mother refrain from hennaed hair and décollete.

The modern parent has a hard problem to face, a hard course to steer between the intolerant tyranny of the Wimpole Street father and the condonation of his children's naughtier conduct. Yet he can save his youngsters embarrassment only if he recognizes their wish that he should hold some of their actions in a proper parental disapproval.

Snails Appear Today on Menu at Indianapolis Athletic Club

A bit of southern France will be introduced on the menu at the Indianapolis Athletic Club today as "Escargots Bourguignone." And if you're not up on your French, "escargots" are nothing more than snails—not the common variety one sees around these parts, but nice, large juicy ones imported from one of the largest snail packing houses in France.
