Pari-Mutuel Bill Backed by Agriculture Board

Approval Is Limited to Wagers on Horses; Extension to Include Dog Races to Be Opposed.

Passage of a pari-mutuel betting bill by the General Assembly which convened today was recommended yesterday by the State Board of Agriculture.

The board agreed to back a bill which would allow pari-mutuel betting on horse races only, but it would not support a measure which would include dog races.

The board will not introduce a bill of its own inasmuch as a measure already has been prepared, it is said. However, the board favors administration of the measure by a separate commission, and would like to be that commission.

Proceeds, under the indorsed plan, would be divided between the state and county fair associations.

Two former attempts to legalize pari-mutuel betting in Indiana have met failure in previous General Assemblies.

The annual reorganization of the agriculture board also was conducted yesterday.

E. S. Priddy, Warren, was elected president, succeeding Frank J. Claypool, Muncie. Charles Taylor, Booneville, was named vice-president.

The four members re-elected to the board are C. V. Foster, Carmel; O. R. Jenkins, Oregon; O. L. Reddish, Wayland, and Mr. Priddy, Harry Caldwell, Connersville, was elected to succeed Russell G. East, Richmond.

Mr. Priddy announced selection of the board's finance committee. They were Dick Heller, secretary to Lieut. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend, Mr. Claypool, Mr. Moore, Mr. Priddy and Mr. Townsend.

CURB ON LOCAL TAX UNIT URGED BY COMMISSION

Fails to Reach Agreement on Program for State Reforms.

After approving the pattern of a fiscal strait-jacket for Indiana's local taxing units which can be cast off only by approval of the voters at the polls, Gov. Paul V. McNutt's Commission on Tax Revision recessed on the eve of the convening of the 79th General Assembly without reaching an agreement on important state financing measures.

The commission will reassemble Friday, when, it is expected, state fiscal experts will lay before the members a complete picture of the budget-balancing problem.

Recommendations on gross income and personal income tax rates and consideration of a 3 per cent sales tax were deferred when Clarence A. Jackson, head of the Gross Income Tax Division, disclosed that Gov. McNutt believes the state's financial needs can be met without levying new or higher taxes.

By an 11-8 vote, the revisionists determined to recommend that the power of county tax adjustment boards to allow tax levies in excess of the $1 and $1.50 limits set for rural and urban units by certifying emergencies be discontinued, and that excess levies be allowed only after the people of the territory affected have voted in approval.

Also recommended is a proposal that issuance of bonds for public purposes be stopped for a two-year period, unless their issuance has been authorized by an election called for that purpose.

The commission's action came at the end of an all-day wrangle during which representative of real estate organizations sought to persuade the conference to adopt their recommendations for slashing $3,000,000 from the state's school expenses, levying a 3 per cent sales or excise tax to yield $24,850,000; a 1 per cent levy on all personal incomes in excess of $1,000 and a 10 per cent amusement tax which would have produced $1,250,000. Also sought by the real estate representatives was allocation of $6,500,000 of gasoline tax for road bond payments.

The commission acted quickly after it had been told that Gov. McNutt was seeking means of increasing the general fund by $3,500,000, without increasing the governmental expenditures over the sum spent last year.

Mr. Jackson informed the arguing delegates that the problem was one of allocation—not a question of new taxes or increased existing levies.

The problem before the commission was double-edged. If they recommended a further lowering of the taxing power of the local governmental units, the tax revenues of these units would be so reduced that Gov. McNutt could not recommend a reduction of the state's expenses by diminishing the proportion of revenues collected by the state and shared with the counties.

Albert Uhl, Indianapolis, representing the Indiana Real Estate Association on the Tax Revision Commission, concurred in the amended plan offered by former Rep. Wilfred Jessup, Richmond attorney, who represents the professional men of the state on the commission.

Indiana advocates of the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan, working from a state headquarters soon to be established here, will seek to induce the Legislature to memorialize Congress on behalf of Federal legislation putting the plan into effect.

This was learned today from E. J. Speake, state area manager for the plan, who said that the Townsend advocates would register with the Legislature as is required of all lobbying organizations. Mr. Speake also announced the opening of temporary Townsend headquarters at 130 Monument Circle.

"We are well pleased with the progress we are making here," he said, "and we expect to find many friends in the Legislature in addition to those several legislators who are actively interested in our plan. Several states already have memorialized Congress."

Mr. Speake added that organization meetings in recent days had attracted so many persons that halls were overcrowded.

Speakers at these meetings have stated that the plan would put $1,600,000,000 in circulation in the United States each month, approximately $6,000,000 of which would be put into circulation in Marion County. An official bulletin of the plan's advocates has described the plan this way:

"The National Government should enact legislation to the effect that all citizens of the United States—men and women—over the age of 60 years may retire on a pension of $200 a month on the following conditions:

(1) That they engage in no further labor, business or profession for gain.

(2) That their past life is free from habitual criminality.

(3) That they take oath to, and actually do, spend, within the confines of the United States, the entire amount of their pension."
