stand and hefted each section of the ladder.

"It looks like a music instrument," he told Mr. Reilly.

Q—Did you take this ladder in an automobile from the Bronx to Hopewell, N. J.? A—I never took a ladder in an automobile.

Q—Did you at any time have this ladder on Col. Lindbergh's estate? A—No.

NEVER OWNED CHISEL

Q—Your house had an attic? A—Yes.

Q—How many families lived there? A—Three.

Q—How many rooms did you have on the second floor? A—Four.

Q—There has been exhibited here a board a witness says was taken from your house. Did you remove that board? A—I did not.

Mr. Reilly handed Hauptmann the chisel found outside Lindbergh's home.

Q—On March 1, 1932, did you leave this chisel on Col. Lindbergh's estate at Hopewell? A—This chisel was never in my possession.

Q—You mean you never owned it? A—I never owned it.

Q—Carpenters can buy chisels from supply houses, can't they? Anybody can buy a chisel, can't they? A—As long as they can pay for it, it's all right.

Q—I direct your attention to another section of the Bronx, known as St. Raymond's cemetery. Were you ever there in your life? A—I was there about six years ago. I passed the cemetery going over to Long Island Sound.

Q—Were you in St. Raymond's Cemetery April 1 or 2, 1932? (When the ransom was paid). A—No, I was not.

Q—That is the night you had the musical in your house? A—Yes.

Q—What time did it start? A—About 7 or 8.

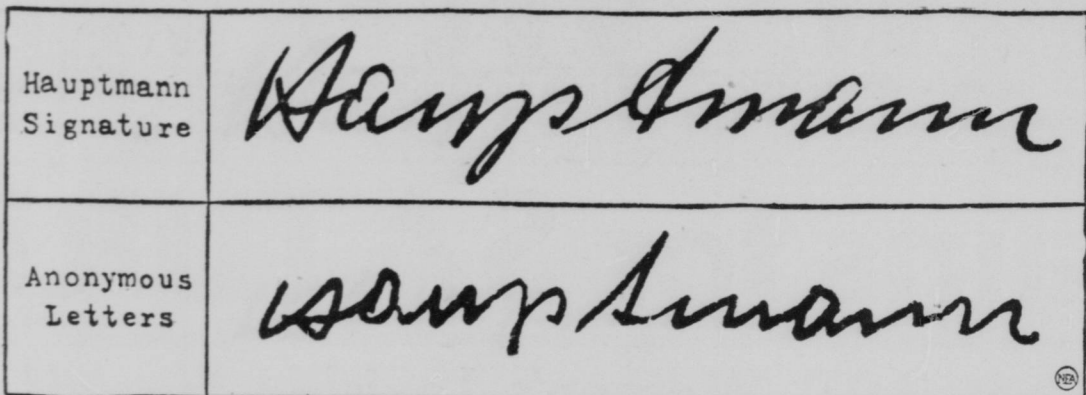

Q—Did you go out that night? A—I went out about 11 o'clock to a store with Kloppenberg and Fisch.

WIFE VISITED GERMANY

Q—Can you give your best recollection of whether you dealt in the market with Fisch through the Mott Co.—Carlton Mott? A—No.

Q—It has been testified that Jan. 16, 1928, your wife had a balance of $411.56 in the bank and that was changed to a joint account for

RANSOM NOTES YIELD HAUPTMANN'S NAME

Did Bruno Hauptmann inadvertently sign the Lindbergh ransom notes? Through handwriting expert James Seller of Los Angeles, the state presented the above comparison to prove that Hauptmann did. At top is an authentic Hauptmann signature; below, a signature prepared by combining letters cut from the ransom notes. Sellers insisted that the composite signature proves Hauptmann was author of the notes.

Anna and Richard, is that correct? A—Yes.

Q—Did you make a withdrawal from your bank account early in 1928? A—Yes, that must have been when my wife went to Europe.

Q—Did your wife go to Germany in May, 1928? A—Yes.

Q—I show you a deposit on Sept. 17, 1928, can you tell of what it was made up? A—I worked Saturdays and Sundays and had the money. I closed the account and deposited it in this bank.

Mr. Reilly gave his witness a photostatic copy of one of his bank balances.

Q—There were three withdrawals during 1928, totaling $435 in all. Please explain them. Hauptmann studied the copy. A—I really can't explain the withdrawals. I probably loaned some money and got it back later.

Q—In 1929 you were doing business with Steiner Rouse? A—No, with Carlton Mott.

ADMONISHED BY COURT

Q—You were constantly withdrawing and constantly depositing? A—Yes.

The court admonished Hauptmann that "you'll have to speak louder. We can't hear you."

Q—Now do you recall when it was you started your account in Steiner Rouse? A—In August, 1932.

Q—You say Fisch left two satchels and a shoebox with you. When was it that you discovered the money? A—Middle of August, 1934.

Q—What did you do with the money in the garage? A—I dried it off.

Hauptmann told the jury again about finding the money in a shoebox in the broom closet of the kitchen. It became wet from a leaky pipe there.

Hauptmann described the broom closet and the kitchen in detail.

PUT MONEY IN GARAGE

Q—Where did these pipes run? A—Up through the roof.

Q—Explain how the water got into the broom closet? A—Some of it came down through the roof.

Q—The water came down on the outside of the pipes from the roof? A—Yes.

Q—Did you see any marks from the pipes on the shoe box? A—I must explain. There was certain rods against the pipes. The water ran down these rods to the shoe box.

Q—How many months had this cardboard shoe box stayed in your closet? A—About eight months, maybe.

Q—What was the change in the box? A—It was falling apart.

Q—Tell us the condition of the money? A—It was wet and I carried it to the garage in a pail.

Q—Was it rolled up? A—It was wrapped up in brown paper. In three bundles. I took the money out of the box and took it to the garage in a tin pail.

Q—The garage was not attached to the house? A—No.

Q—What did you do with the money? A—I put it in a basket on a shelf up near the ceiling where nobody could see it.

Q—What was the condition of your account with Fisch when he sailed for Europe? A—When he sailed my account on the market was $12,000.

Q—Was that on margin? A—No, it was actual cash.

Q—How much of that $12,000 belonged to Fisch? A—About $2500.

SHARE THEIR LOSSES

Q—Did Fisch owe you money when he went to Europe? A—When he went he said I should sell some furs. I said I will take $2000 from my account and give it to you.

Q—How long was that before Fisch sailed? A—Two or three weeks.

Q—Did you do that? A—Yes.

Hauptmann explained that he and Fisch went "half and half" on their losses in both their business ventures—stock market and the fur business.

Q—You knew Fisch was dead when you found this money? A—Yes.

Q—You remember Nov. 26, 1933, don't you? That's your birthday? A—Yes.

Q—Were you down at the Sheridan Square Theater on that night?

Did you give the cashier one of these bills folded up eight times for a ticket?

Mr. Wilentz objected and the question was not answered.

Q—Were you ever in that theater in your life? A—Never.

At this point noon recess was ordered.

LICENSING OF GIANT HOLDING FIRMS URGED

Federal Trade Commission Makes Suggestion in New Report.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Federal licensing of giant utility holding companies to protect the public from alleged power rate abuses and flotation of "watered" securities was suggested to the Senate today by the Federal Trade Commission.

The commission, in another report on its six-year investigation of scores of gas and electric companies, asserted laxity of state laws and present restrictions under Federal statutes make necessary a broad Federal control program.

The Commission is expected to outline a specific legislative program in its next report, probably Tuesday.

Under the suggestions today, Congress could employ special excise tax measures, the existing postal law and added Federal statutes to restrict the size and extent of utility holding concerns.

POLICE LEND A HAND IN CLOTHING DRIVE

With a sharp winter wind whistling around him, Traffic Officer Francis A. Logue grinned even more cheerfully than usual today.

He was thinking of the warmth which would be brought to needy families by the bundles of used clothing which he had collected at the busy corner of Pennsylvania and Market-sts.

The clothing was donated in response to an appeal by the Red Cross, with which police, firemen and Boy Scouts are co-operating.

'Give Me Liberty Or—'

Daughter Beer-ds Lion in His Den and Papa Almost Finishes Quotation.

WHAT frequently is referred to as the "younger generation" certainly can put parents on the spot, wittingly or unwittingly, as witness the case of a prominent state official.

This state official, who for the sake of anonymity, shall be known as Mr. X, was having luncheon with his daughter in a downtown hotel.

They ordered beer.

"What kind'll it be?" asked the waitress.

Father and daughter ordered the same kind, a brand that has had to stand considerable "heat" because of frequent reports that members of the State Administration were unduly interested in its promotion.

"Why, Dad," said daughter, "the girls laugh at me when I order that beer. They seem to think that you own stock in the company."

"Dad" har-umphed a couple of times, glanced around and admitted:

"Well-er-I wish I did."

It's an odds-on bet that daughter got a little fatherly talking to in the family occasion.

ARMS CHARGE IRKS BRITISH FOREIGN CHIEF

Compromises Suit Against Pastor, Issues Warning to Others.

By United Press

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Sir John Simon, foreign minister, today repudiated allegations that he was financially interested in armaments and announced that he would criminally prosecute any one who hereafter repeated the allegation.

Sir John made the statement through his attorney, Norman Burkett, in the course of the settlement of Mr. Simon's suit for slander against the Rev. J. Whitaker Bond, a Methodist minister of East Dereham.

Mr. Bond, addressing a church assembly last November, alleged that Sir John was opposed to a "peace ballot" of the League of Nations Union because "his money is invested in armaments firms."

Today Sir John consented to settlement without damages or costs when Mr. Bond wrote an apology, admitted he based his allegation merely on hearsay.
