

Sponsor of Show Opens Ticket Sale

Voters League Members
Active in Efforts for Martens' Offering.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

MEMBERS of the Indianapolis League of Women Voters who aren't engrossed in the proceedings of the Indiana General Assembly are budgeting their time so that a large per cent of their working hours are spent in selling tickets for the "Continental Varieties" which

Mrs. Nancy Martens will present under league auspices Saturday night.

Annually the league undertakes sponsorship of some outstanding stage presentation, and ticket selling this year has been facilitated by early favorable news of the performance of the stars of "Continental Varieties" in other cities. Lucienne Boyer, the Parisian songster, became the toast of New York in a night; Raphael, the concertina artist; Balleff, the commentator and master of ceremonies; the Iza Volpin continental quartet, and Escudero, the Spanish dancer, individually have won warm receptions.

Vincente Escudero, the dancer, is an artist whose spontaneity is traceable to his childhood experiences. His mother, like all Spanish mothers, thought first of teaching her son to dance just as all mothers eagerly urge the first word and step.

His boyhood was spent in Seville, where nobility as well as commoners joined in the great "feria" in April. During this season the broad campo or field beyond the city proper was filled with casetas, tiny cottages built with one side open to the wind and sun.

For three days all the citizens gathered to dance gaily the Sevillanas. Escudero was young and he danced to the tempo of the spirits of the merrymakers.

He learned, too, the gypsy dance, the flamenco. He often visited the Granada gypsies, who were cave-dwellers. He watched them turn, twist and glide in their wild dances; they wore crimson, yellow, lavender and red costumes with flowers behind their ears.

The loss of the dance of the six boys is another dancing tradition of Escudero's Spain. Centuries ago the Israelites danced before the ark of the covenant; later the custom was commemorated in Spain by the dancing choir boys before the high altar at Easter and Corpus Christi.

His youthful response to the dancing fever of his race stirred him to practice and study and today he is acclaimed a master of muscles and rhythms.

The league has issued invitations to members of the Indiana Assembly Women's Club for a tea on March 6 at the home of Mrs. Oscar Baur. Mrs. Arthur C. Shea has attended to all the details of arrangement.

She has invited Miss Margaret Denny, Miss Evelyn Chambers and Mrs. Walter S. Greenough to speak on the program. Mrs. Warren K. Mannon, chairman of the league's legislative steering committee, will preside. In the receiving line will be Mrs. Baur, Mrs. Meredith Nicholson Jr., Indiana's only woman assembly member; Mrs. Thomas D. Sheerin, acting president; Mrs. Greenough and Mrs. Mannon.

On Sunday afternoon founders of the Civic theater were entertained at a tea at the home of Mrs. James D. Peirce. Among those who called were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Kautz, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Politz; Miss Eldena Lauter and Mrs. Ida Strawn Baker.

Manners and Morals

—BY JANE JORDAN

Jane Jordan is a local woman employed by The Indianapolis Times to study your problems for you. Put your troubles in a letter and read your answer in this column. Please do not ask to have the answer printed without the letter.

Dear Jane Jordan—My daughter is interested in a young man 21 years old. She is 17. I will not let her have dates with him, although I do let her have dates with other young men the same age. The reason I won't let her have dates with this young man is that he doesn't have any job and I don't like the type of family he comes from, although I never have heard anything bad about him. I have reared my daughter to be refined, and I think she should wait until later in life to get interested in a boy. I prefer that she marry into a better family. She doesn't think she can ever love anybody else as well as she loves him. Should I let her have dates with him or not?

WORRIED.
Answer—You only increase the young man's attractions if you make him unobtainable. At 17 your daughter is trying to establish her independence and a prohibition from you will insult her dignity. Your objections only will make her the more determined to rely on her own judgment no matter how mistaken it is.

The smart mother has won her daughter's confidence by the time the girl is 17. If this is the case the daughter will have the highest respect for her mother's opinion and will be considerably influenced by the older woman's view of her boy friends. I feel sure that such a mother would not refuse to let her daughter see any young man who took her fancy, but would nurse her through her attacks of puppy love with sympathy and understanding.

Besides you may be wrong about the young man. How do you know that he will not rise far above the level of his family? The fact that he has no job at 21 is hardly a valid objection. What are his potentialities?

Dear Jane Jordan—I have been married two years, but the last seven months my wife and I have been separated. Now we are back together, but in the meantime she broke her marriage vows once. She told me about it because she loves me, but it has hurt me so much I don't know what to do. Please give me some needed advice.

WAITING.

Answer—She told you about it because she wanted to hurt you. I haven't the slightest doubt that she loves you. Otherwise she wouldn't have taken the trouble to hurt you by an uncalculated confession. Now that you know everything, what of it?

Your wife no doubt, was very unhappy during the period of her separation from you. Her attempt to escape her memories of you in the arms of another man is understandable. When frustrated in love people are prone to snatch at sex as a sort of drug which promises forgetfulness. Now that her love life is stable again, she will have no need for narcotics.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 22 years old and am very much in love with a fellow with whom I have gone steady for six months. We have the same likes and dislikes, except on one matter. He is a Catholic; I am a Protestant. Religion wouldn't interfere with us until we had children. Naturally he would want them brought up his way and I would want them brought up my way. I'm sure that would cause trouble between us; yet it seems a shame to pass up love for it may never come again. I hope you can help me.

IN THE FOG.
Answer—I do not feel that I have the power to so much as budge religious prejudices and convictions. I understand the Protestant's objection to the arbitrary demand that children be brought up in the faith of the parent who is Catholic, but I do not believe it would lead me to give up a man whom I loved. In your place I think I should let the children go where the father chose and rely on my own training to correct what seemed illogical and mistaken in what they learned. For all I know this might cause trouble, too. Therefore, I fear that this problem is peculiarly your own and that no one can help you.

San Diego's Balboa Park Being Transformed Into Site for 1935 World's Fair

California Pacific International Exposition
Will Open May 29; Architecture
Will Be Strikingly Modern.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

OPERATING on a scale unrivaled even by the preparation for the World's Fair in Chicago last year, 3000 workers and tens of thousands of tons of mechanical equipment are busy transforming San Diego's picturesque Balboa Park into the international exposition scene on which southern California expects to play host to the world during the coming spring and summer.

While scores of draftsmen are still busy turning out designs for buildings carefully keyed in a modern adaptation of the early Spanish style of California architecture of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, huge quantities of mortar, brick and lumber already have been assembled on the fairground for the several hundred buildings which will be the chief centers of attraction of the California Pacific International Exposition. The exposition will open on May 29 and will be the west coast's first display of international hospitality in 21 years.

The Court of Pacific Relations, a scattered quadrangle of southern California type buildings which will house the official representatives of several dozen foreign nations, already has been completed and the commercial enclaves of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, China and many other nations are expected to move into the structures within the next month or six weeks.

Work on the international village which will offer the displays of Canada, Mexico, Japan, China, Siam, France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Czechoslovakia, England and Ireland, practically has been completed and awaits only the installation of the native fixtures and exhibits.

Palaces of electricity, transportation, education, foods, beverages, various arts and industries are being constructed along lines that will bring something new and sensational into the architectural world.

Native Architecture to Give Motif

AUTHORITIES of the State of California stress the fact that while many of the buildings will be modern in design, they will be based fundamentally on the native architecture of the Southwest. Every effort is being made to keep the exposition in complete unison and sympathy with the climate and flora of San Diego where it will be staged.

The general treatment of the buildings will be a simple ornamentation of broad expanses of plain surfaces with cascades of native flowers sweeping down from concealed troughs beneath the cornices.

The green and lavender of the trailing lantana have been harmonized with the basic colors of the Palace of Electricity, for instance, and the pink and red of the ivy geranium will be matched with the color of the Palace of Varied Arts exterior.

Prepare for 5,000,000 Visitors

SAN DIEGO, as the birthplace of west coast civilization, possesses the perfect historical background for this international exposition. It was in this harbor that the Spanish explorer, Cabrillo, in 1542, discovered California and opened the way for the colonization of the Pacific Coast. In San Diego Junipero Serra established the first of the missions, in 1769, which extended from San Diego in the south to Sonoma in the north. The first palm trees, the first mission, the first fort, and Ramona's marriage place will contribute to the historic background of the exposition.

Officials estimate that more than 5,000,000 persons will visit the fair between May and November of this year. It is pointed out that twenty years ago travel to the exposition city, except by rail, was only over primitive, sand covered roads, whereas the automobile highways now leading into San Diego from the north, south and east are considered among the finest on the continent.

I try to keep you posted . . . now it's your turn to post me—a little letter about your shopping problems. Just maybe I can help. For my notebook is filled with ideas . . . with lots more answers in the back of the book. Novelties, fashions, foods, suggestions for recreation, reminders and heaps of names and places. Write me . . . phone me . . . or, will I see you tonight at the Civic Ballet?

Betty

Buzzing around the shopping world, I took myself right into the COLONIAL FURNITURE CO. to do a bit of shop-hounding . . . what, what's this I saw? Gentlemen tagging the furniture, slashing the already low prices of the Month-end Clean-up . . . grand finale of the annual January Clearance. Some pieces are only one of a kind, some slightly reduced, other almost thrust upon you. Just the things you need and want at absurdly small prices. It's worth your tripping down to Meridian and Maryland (northeast corner to be specific), and see the staggering bargains at the COLONIAL.

Here's a tip from the inside . . . h-s-h-h! HILLMANS, that little shop of fashions that really sparkle with originality, will be staging one of their famous sales in just a day or two. Their regular prices range from $16.50 . . . but can't you hold off buying that new frock just a day or so? I'm told their sale prices will be under $10!! (13 N. Illinois St. is the magic address.)

Exceptionally clever . . . a little book for junior gardeners . . . including simple instructions and brief histories of the flowers.

Bless me . . . only two more days in the January Clearance at MAROTT'S SHOE STORE. And bless me again . . . for reminding you! And I'm not crying "Wolf, wolf" either. There will not be another sale for months at MAROTT'S. Their policy to carry only standard quality merchandise insures the goodness of the values when they do have a sale. And these inestimable values are in every department—footwear for men, women and children. Just fr instance . . . saw some darling mules and boudoir slippers, both leather and crepe kinds, on which you'll save more than you pay. You can almost shut your eyes when buying at MAROTT'S, though who would want to? Their shoes are as good to look at as they are good quality. MAROTT'S make it their business to be on their toes . . . foot ailments, shoe repairs . . . athletic type footwear . . . hosiery . . . cleaners . . . besides the very best in shoes themselves. Come on, we're flocking to MAROTT'S.

*A foot-note: For that spring street suit . . . choose shoes of gabardine and kidskin

Haven't you tried SO-AM MATE (mat-tay in Spanish)? That delightful, refreshing, delicately flavored beverage that has sustaining and nourishing qualities found in no other tea. It dates far back as 1600 in South America. Later the missionaries marveled at the wonderful endurance of the natives, the Indians. They found that they subsisted almost entirely on a golden green liquid brewed from the leaves of the Yerba Tree . . . a stimulating tea that also counteracted the ill effects of a continuous meat diet. South Americans drink this beverage from silver mates or gourds, as you see in the sketch . . . with the aid of a "bombilla," straw to you, which has a strainer at one end. A Hoosier style drip coffee pot is less colorful, but makes SO-AM MATE just as successfully. Try it. International Trading Co., 34 Union Trust Bldg. RL 2633.

So with these notes I close my trusty little memo book and hustle off to a favorite rendezvous. See you Thursday.

Au revoir,

Dorothy
