

RACE BET BILL HELD BACK FOR BUDGET ACTION

Pastor Assails Measure at Hearing Before Ways
Committee.

A pari-mutuel bill, which will legalize Indiana horse race betting, will not be reported to the House of Representatives until the administration's budget bill is introduced. At a meeting last night of the Committee on Ways and Means opponents of the racing measures and one proponent were told that committee action would await the budget bill as the racing measures are of revenue-producing character. The Rev. Linn A. Tripp, social service director of the Indianapolis Church Federation, told the committee that the revenue produced by pari-mutuel machines and racing of horses in the state would be negligible compared to the setback it would give the morals of youth.

"Why, a committee from the statehouse, I see by The Indianapolis Times, has been dickerin' with the most outlandish race track organization in the United States," Mr. Tripp charged.

He referred to an exclusive story in The Times which told of Dick Heller, secretary to Lieut. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend, going to the Fairground race track at New Orleans and a proffer of $30,000 made there by race promoters for program concessions for a 60-day race meeting.

M. F. Barbour, representing the Harrison Kennel Club, Dearborn County, urged including dog racing in a pari-mutuel measure.

A group of business men and church leaders urged the two racing bills before the committee be killed on the grounds that it was state sanction of a vice—gambling.
