

Girl Scouts Will Study Other Lands

World Knowledge Class Will Be Open to Senior Members.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Times Woman's Page Editor

SENIOR GIRL SCOUTS who enroll in the world knowledge and world interpreter class, to be conducted by Mrs. C. Severin Buschmann and Mrs. Harold D. Robinson, will have something of a continental education. Mrs. Buschmann knows what is appealing to the youthful curiosity, because for several seasons she has taken her own children to Paris where they attended school.

In arranging the subject matter of the class Mrs. Buschmann had the advantage of knowing how children were instructed in a foreign culture. The girls must acquire a background of the country geographically, knowledge of its culture, its folk dances and songs and its citizens of importance. The girls must know how to read and write the native languages, and in the course of the class will correspond with a native of the particular country being studied.

The badge to be awarded for attendance in the class requires study of one foreign country. The girls must acquire a background of the country geographically, knowledge of its culture, its folk dances and songs and its citizens of importance. The girls must know how to read and write the native languages, and in the course of the class will correspond with a native of the particular country being studied.

Requirements Listed
The Scouts will learn to identify the flags and Scout costumes in the 33 countries in which scouting has been established.

For a period of five weeks the girls will study for the world knowledge badge and for an additional five weeks will acquire knowledge for the interpreter badge. They will bring to the class pictures and material which they discover in magazines and newspapers, and will tie up their classroom studies with the Scout course. Most of the girls working for the badge will be enrolled in foreign language classes in school. Mrs. Buschmann and Mrs. Robinson will offer instruction in knowledge of France, Germany and Spain.

Daughters Will Enroll
Mrs. Buschmann's daughter Jody is a Girl Scout and will work for both badges. One of Mrs. Robinson's daughters, Joan, is a Scout and the younger daughter, Frances, is a member of the Brownies, a junior group of the Scouts. Jody and her brother, C. Severin Jr., continue their studies of French under a tutor when they are not enrolled in the French school.

Beginning of the new class on Feb. 6 will celebrate February, international month, the birth month of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, founders of the Scout movement.

Miss Dorothy Caton, 1642 Broadway, will be hostess for a meeting of Gamma Beta Chi Sorority at 8:15 tomorrow night.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

Put your problems in a letter to Jane Jordan who will do her best to help you solve them. Read your answer in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—My problem is such a hard one that in telling you just part of it I am afraid you will think I am telling one side only. I have been married to a man 23 years.

He is quite a lot older than I am, but I am the one who has had to see things his way and his people's way. When I object to him or his people he says, "If you don't want to do my way, just get out." You may say that is just what I should do, but it is so easy to say and so hard to do I am in love with my husband and he really does need me although he doesn't think so. His life has not been very pleasant for his people always have been more or less a burden. There is always some one around. We never have a minute together or a moment when I don't know what to do. I want some one to love and a companion. My home is just a shelter for him and his. I am losing interest in it and in life. I wish you could put a good column of advice in for husbands, wives, in-laws and children who interfere with some one's else happiness.

Answer—I am sorry but I do not see any light whatever on your problem. If for 23 years your husband has fancied himself as an old-fashioned, father families, absolute head of his own clan whose word is law and whose wife is his chattel, I do not see how he is to be changed.

He is the type of man who does not look to a woman for companionship. He neither needs nor wants her opinion or viewpoint, but looks with complete indifference upon her mental powers. It never occurs to him that she has any rights or that her peace and contentment is any of his concern. Doesn't he feed, clothe and shelter her? What more could a domestic woman want?

The amazing thing is that you love the man who for 23 years has left you to eat your heart out in loneliness. What are his redeeming features?

You have told me nothing of his faults and therefore given me no clue as to what sort of strategy could be used to make life a little pleasanter for you.

If your husband's family has been a constant and aggressive rival for his loyalty, I can see that you've had an exceptionally tough time of it. But since I know nothing of them or their characteristics, I can make no practical suggestions as to how you might handle them more wisely.

Perhaps you aren't assertive enough and have been a bad friend to yourself. I don't blame you for not wishing to go on your own, for after such a long period of persistent squashing you wouldn't find a career very much easier than your present lot.

I don't mean to discourage you completely, but I do feel that you must make some gain in personal independence if you are going to take up the cudgels against your husband, his family, or the working world. Why have you let this man and his people grind you down?

Dear Jane Jordan—We are two nice girls with two fellows. When we have dates with them they tell us about the wild girls they have had dates with and how much fun they had. We think they step out on us, but still we have dates with these fellows. We care for them very much and want to keep them. Should we start being "wild" or stay as sweet as we are?

Answer—In my opinion these two young men only are boasting. Boys who have so much success with girls do not find it necessary to be continually talking. They boast, not only to convince you two girls that they are irresistible, but to convince themselves.

Either of you would be very silly to change your manner of living to please a couple of immature young men. And indeed your change probably wouldn't please them at all. Your cue is to listen with rapid attention, and when they pause for breath, to murmur, "Yes, yes, go on!"

Club Will Meet

Members of Violet Demree Travel Club will meet Saturday with Mrs. Robert Workman, 3156 Grace-land. Mrs. Frank Reissner will review "Disraeli."

Entre Nous members will meet tonight with Miss Kathleen Klatz, 29 Parkway-av.

Regular meeting of the Sararag Club is scheduled for 8 tonight with Miss Barbara Strack, 525 Eugene-st.

Ayres Presents Fabrics With Designs Inspired By Familiar Poets' Works

Riley's 'Southern Singer' and Longfellow's 'The Day Is Done' Among Sources of Motifs for Prints.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THE "Prints of the Poets," pure silk prints inspired by well-known poems by familiar poets, and mentioned in this column several months ago, have reached Indianapolis, and are being shown exclusively at the L. S. Ayres & Co. store. They will be of particular interest to Indianapolis women, since the three models shown here include a dress made from fabric inspired by a poem by James Whitcomb Riley.

It is from Riley's "Southern Singer," and the lines which have been used as inspiration for the fabric design are:

"You pause to let a creamy spray Of elder blossoms by the way." The dress is a brown, rust and lemon yellow print, showing the fragile elder blossoms in the print. It is made with a short bolero jacket, which buttons down the back. The jacket has long sleeves, and is worn over a dress with short sleeves and a shirred and corded neckline. The sleeves are laced up the shoulders with brown silk cord through rhinestone rings.

Longfellow's "The Day Is Done" has been used as inspiration for the fabric in another of the poetry dresses shown at Ayres. Taking the design from the lines:

"As a feather is wafted downward From an eagle in its flight," the dress is in a dull red, with a feather design scattered over it. It has a finger-tip length jacket, with border print in the same color forming the collar, and extending into a binding down the front. The dress shows the same design in a huge bow at the neckline and in triangular pockets. It has short cap sleeves.

Three tiers of accordion pleated shirring are used at the neckline of the dress inspired by the lines from Emerson: "And through the wild-pled snow drifts The warm rose buds below."

The same pleating which is used in the clown's collar is used on the sleeves of the jacket and the pockets. The belt of the dress is made of welded links of metal.

Wise Buying to Be Institute Topic

WASTEFUL buying by housewives, who are credited with spending about 85 per cent of the national income, will be the subject of a series of seven meetings sponsored by the Home Economics Department of the Ohio State University and the Franklin County Consumers' Council, to be known as the Consumers' Institute.

The meetings will attempt to help housewives to buy wisely, and three of the session will deal with the purchase of apparel. Lectures and demonstrations will be given by the Ohio State University School of Economics teaching staff, and more than 300 clubs and organizations will aid the movement.

On Feb. 27, qualities, fashions, durability and comfort of hosiery will be discussed, and on March 4 the buying of shoes will be studied.

English Queen Orders Red Apparel

QUEEN Mary has selected a new shade for her latest dresses, according to recent fashion dispatches. While the queen is not expected to set any particular fashions, women who have noted her preference for pastel and muted colors are learning of new red dresses she has selected with interest. The shade which the queen has chosen for her new costumes is a deep warm shade. Among the costumes she has ordered in this color is a cloth coat, trimmed with silver fox.

'As Thousands Jeer' Will Be Presented by the Players

Novel entertainment is in store for members of The Players and their guests at the Feb. 22 entertainment at the Woodstock club.

Dr. John Ray Newcomb is in charge of arrangements, which will include a series of skits to be presented in cabaret fashion and entitled, "As Thousands Jeer."

The entire program will be staged at the Woodstock Club, announces the committee, which includes Dr. Newcomb with Mr. and Mrs. Kurt F. Pantzer, chairman, and Mr. and Mrs. John K. Ruckelshaus, Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Wolff and Mr. and Mrs. Talcott Powell.

Parties are being arranged to attend the showing of "Continental Varieties" to come Saturday to English's under auspices of the Indianapolis League of Women Voters.

Mr. and Mrs. Kurt F. Pantzer have invited Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Sheerin, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kraemer, and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stokely to dinner at their home, 4525 N. Delaware-st, preceding the show.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Baur will entertain at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Tharp, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Dean and Frederick Burleigh. Mrs. Baur is co-chairman of the performance for the league.

Dinner guests for Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Holliday will be Edward Mayer, Messrs. and Mesdames W. Richardson Sinclair, Robert L. Scott Jr., Otto N. Prenzler and Perry O'Neal, Judge and Mrs. Russell J. Ryan also will entertain dinner guests.

Attending the theater in a Dutch treat party will be Misses Eunice Disette and Margaret L. Denny; Charles W. Moores and Alfred Randall, Ft. Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Atkins Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. George Fotheringham.

HAIR TROUBLES VANISH in this NEW and MODERN DANDERINE SPRAY

For a head so clean it feels clean and looks clean, just use a little Danderine daily.

It's no trouble now—no trouble at all—it's all done in ten seconds.

The handy Danderine Spray reaches every lock of hair and every inch of scalp quicker than you could pour a few drops from the bottle. But in a fine mist that makes no wet spots—doesn't run down the face and neck—doesn't even wet the fingers.

This fine, light spray of PRICE 75 CENTS

Danderine makes your head feel grand, makes hair look its best. Use it after the hair is brushed or arranged, for that sleek, lustrous, well-groomed look instead of a sticky dressing. Use it right after washing your head, if you have a particle of dandruff.

Your druggist has the new spray bottle right now; contains enough Danderine to last you for months this wasteful way. And costs seventy-five cents complete, spray top and all, ready for use.

Women You'll love it!

Use a Danderine spray before and after arranging hair; keeps it fragrantly fresh and clean, and smoothly in place; makes your waves last longer. Gives any hair a lustre, and that "cared-for" look.
