

JUDGE RULES COUNTY MUST PAY PENSIONS

Cox Declares Council Shall Provide Funds for 645
Aged Applicants.

The County Council must provide funds for 645 unpaid old-age pensioners, under a ruling by Circuit Judge Earl R. Cox.

County Attorney John Linder and counsel for Elmer J. Hoover, 2452 N. Harding-st., who asks the court to mandate the Council to appropriate funds for the pensions still unpaid although approved July 1, agreed that the law was mandatory.

Sheldon Key, county pension investigator, testified that the cost for the 645 pensioners at a monthly rate of $11.26 would be $7286 a month.

Asks Payment as of Jan. 1, 1934. Although Mr. Hoover asks that the pensions be paid as of Jan. 1, 1934, when the applications were made, Judge Cox indicated that he believed they should be paid as of July 1, 1935, the approval date.

Informed that the 1934 council had cut the old-age pension budget below operating costs, Judge Cox said, "The council was bull-headed and wouldn't appropriate money the law says is due."

John Newhouse, County Commissioner and member of the 1934 council, testified that this year he refused to sign the pension budget request of $425,000. The current budget is $325,000.

Suspected "Irregularities." "Why didn't you sign the budget?" Judge Cox asked.

"I thought there were some irregularities, because the other commissioners, Ernest K. Marker and Dow Vorhies, disagreed with me on the salary for the county attorney."

"In other words, you got mad because of the attorney's salary and put the 'X' on everything else," Judge Cox replied.

County Auditor Charles A. Grossart said he did not know how the Council would be able to raise the additional pension funds.

HOOVERVILLE HOMES YIELD TO PROGRESS

Recovery Program to Evict Depression Refugees.

Squatters in Hooverville and Curtisville collected their chickens and rabbits today and prepared to move.

These 200 people weren't surprised when a delegation of city officials, headed by Mayor Kern, told them Works Progress Administration workers soon would dig away the banks on which their hovels of tin and scrap wood were located.

When they were told that city officials would look the other way while they rebuilt their shanties on White River between Raymond and Morris-sts., they were pleased.

A few of the settlers who had spent a great deal of time putting in board walks and tin coal chutes to their houses, explained what a great amount of work it took to collect scraps and build homes.

TIMES SCHOOL TO OFFER NEW COOKING IDEAS

Three-Day Course to Begin
Tuesday at Keith's Theater.

Winter menus are expected to improve after Indianapolis women take advantage of new ideas in cookery which will be advanced in The Indianapolis Times cooking school.

The school is to open Oct. 15 in Keith's Theater for a three-day session. It is to be conducted by Miss Ruth Chambers, who has had charge of two previous schools sponsored by The Times.

Designating the school as "Foods on Parade," Miss Chambers is to present menus and recipes in a new and colorful way, yet backed by as scientific knowledge as that found in college home economics courses. Last year 1300 local women attended the opening session, and increasing numbers filled the theater in the second and third day classes.

Various local food authorities and home economics organizations joined in support of the school, and probably will attend it in groups this year.

Every Indianapolis woman is eligible for enrollment. Local merchants are to co-operate and modern household equipment and products will be used.

LOW-PRICED PLANE TO COME, AIR CHIEF SAYS

End of Commerce Bureau Drive for $700 Ship Announced.

The era of low-priced airplanes is still in the future, but eventually will come, John Geisse, Washington, chief of the development section of the Federal Bureau of Air Commerce, told the Indianapolis Aero Club at the Lincoln last night.

The bureau's campaign for a $700 safety airplane with ease of handling features has ended, he said, and stated that planes developed this year in the campaign would sell above that, some as high as $4000.
