to the general staff by its financial sub-committee. These were revised and consolidated into a preamble and five specific points. They were reported on reliable authority to be as follows:

Preamble — Prohibitions adopted are to apply not only against Italian government and persons and corporations on Italian soil, but also against third countries or persons or corporations in third countries acting as intermediaries for Italy.

Prohibit All Loans

1. Prohibition of loans to the Italian government, and subscriptions to loans floated by the Italian government.

2. Prohibition of bank credits to the Italian government.

3. Prohibition of loans to Italian public institutions, corporate bodies or persons, and prohibition of subscriptions to loans floated by the classes of persons and companies named.

4. Prohibition of the emission of shares to persons or corporate bodies on Italian soil.

5. Prohibition of all banks or other credits to private persons or corporate bodies on Italian soil or any continuance of execution of existing credit contracts.

Work on Key Products

League men believe that if everything goes according to plan they are going eventually to force Premier Benito Mussolini to abandon his African campaign.

Great Britain and France are working on a list of key products, essential to war making, of which they intend to deprive Italy.

It was predicted that weakening of the securities market on the New York Stock Exchange and other important financial centers might follow the application of the financial penalties.

It was anticipated that the penalties would bring removal of Italian issues from lists of shares quoted in the Paris and other stock exchanges in League states. Consequently it was believed there would be an increased tendency to dispose of such holdings on exchanges such as New York and Berlin, which would presumably continue to deal without restriction in Italian securities.

Experts believe also that the Italian government, which recently requested foreign securities held by Italians will soon begin to unload these in foreign markets. It is reported that the government already is disposing, or soon will dispose of more than 3,500,000,000 lire (283,850,000) in foreign securities hitherto owned by Italian citizens. It is assumed that a substantial part of these may be sold gradually on foreign exchanges.

Silent on Evacuation

By United Press

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Official quarters today were without news of a reported order to evacuate all British subjects in Addis Ababa. It was understood here that issuance of evacuation orders was entirely at the discretion of the British minister in Ethiopia, Sir Sidney Barton.

The Exchange Telegraph said all British subjects and foreigners under control of the Italian had been ordered to leave the city—women and children to leave immediately and men to do so on a moment's notice.

Aksum Surrenders to Italy's Northern Army

Holy City Taken Without Shot Being Fired by Either Side.

because the Italians realized the sacred character of Ethiopia's Rome or Mecca.

Now the first phase of the whole Italian campaign in the north is completed.

The Italian line runs from a point east of Adigrat to Aksum, through Aduwa. A rectangle of territory 60 miles wide and 25 miles deep on the northern frontier of Ethiopia is under complete Italian occupation.

Priests Submit to Italians

Priests of the Holy City, and heads of its 13 monasteries, submitted themselves today to Gen. Pietro Maravigna, commanding the Gavianian division of regulars which occupied Aduwa.

All Ethiopian soldiers had fled long since, apparently to the south. Ras Seyoum, commander-in-chief on the northern front, was reported retreating with 1000 men toward Rembien.

Italian commanders hope that the city's surrender, and the submission of priests and chieftains outside it, will be an example to others. It is hoped that subsidies will await them, on the British plan, to insure their loyalty.

Cry, "Avanti," Is Awaited

Now the word, "avanti"—forward—is awaited by the scores of thousands of victorious men on the northern front.

Along all the front of 60 miles the word "Avanti" alone is necessary to galvanize the vast military machine into instant action for a second mighty thrust.

Eleven days of the great labor of consolidation have followed the first advance of the Italian army. Road laborers have moved right behind the front line. Water supplies have been provided. There are food dumps, munitions dumps, dumps for oil and gasoline. A thousand motor trucks and more, countless mules, have brought tens of thousands of tons of supplies.

The men are gaunt from iron rations and have been resting and nursing their blistered feet.

The animals have open sores, galled from pack saddles.

Decision Up to Duce

But now the time is near when a new advance can start whenever Premier Benito Mussolini and Gen. Emilio de Bono, commander-in-chief of the East African armies, deem it advisable.

As both southern corners of the Italian rectangle of occupation are open to advance, it is likely that the forthcoming push will be along the caravan route to Makale, 50 miles south of Adigrat.

But 50 miles seems not the limit. It appears today that the army can go a hundred miles—or hundreds—forward without obstacles except those of nature and lack of roads passable to vehicles.

The submission of the Coptic Christian priests of the Aksum and Aduwa regions will have far reaching political importance. The Coptic clergy are the real rulers of Ethiopia. They have more actual power with the common people than has Emperor Haile Selassie, especially in the north.

Moslems Also Surrender

Now that the religious leaders of the holy city have submitted there will be repercussions throughout Ethiopia. The submission probably will be of great influence and encourage other submissions as the Italians advance. Not only did the Coptic Christian priests accept Italian domination, but leaders of the Moslem communities of both Aksum and Aduwa also surrendered.

The Italians deliberately avoided any military attack on Aksum, knowing it to be the seat of many religious institutions and monasteries, and desiring to avoid embittering the Coptic orders which had been aloof even before the Italian advance because of the fear that invasion would mean an influx of Roman Catholic influence.

Jewel Burglar Proves Ring Superstition True

Woman Watches Thief Take Her Valuables From Home.

Mrs. M. A. Horseman, 2010 N. Meridian-st., believes the superstition that it is unlucky to remove a wedding ring.

Because she laid her wedding ring and other jewelry on top of the radio before she retired she doesn't have them today. Police are searching for the burglar who took them. Mrs. Horseman awoke early yesterday morning to see a man near the bed in which she and her husband were sleeping. The burglar had one hand in his coat pocket.

Mrs. Horseman believed he had a gun and fearful of being shot if she made an outcry, lay watching him.

"I pulled my hand back very quietly, as it was hanging over the edge of the bed. I feared if he brushed against it he would realize he had awakened me and would shoot," she said today. "Suddenly he started for the bed and I couldn't keep still any longer. I called to Mr. Horseman, who jumped up, knocked over lamps and ran after the man. But he escaped through the kitchen window."

He took two rings, a watch valued at $285, and silverware, but left money spread out on a console table, and Mrs. Horseman's purse.

TIMES COOKING SCHOOL TO USE NEW EQUIPMENT

Modern Developments in Food Preparation to Be Demonstrated.

The modern kitchen should be planned as carefully as a scientific laboratory. Miss Ruth Chambers, Times Cooking School instructor, believes.

Miss Chambers, who is to open the annual Times Cooking School in Keith's Theater tomorrow for a three-day session, is prepared to acquaint women attending the classes with these new developments.

Preparing menus which she has arranged in a colorful food show, "Foods on Parade," Miss Chambers is to use modern electrical appliances and food materials which have taken their place in a modern world.

LEAGUE MOVES WORRYING U. S.

Geneva Too Gentle With Italy, Is Fear of American Leaders.

sell anything to it or buy anything from it. Or lend it money, or if economic sanctions do not quickly bring it to terms, then the League is supposed to resort to force.

League's Method Awkward

Throughout all this, the United States, in line with the Roosevelt-Davis doctrine, would remain strictly aloof. It would not necessarily help the League with its army or navy but it would refrain, at the same time, from helping the aggressor.

The League's method of going after Italy, however, is not exactly what might have been expected by a student of the covenant. Italy has been declared an "outlaw." An embargo on arms has been proclaimed against her. But, to date, that is nearly all.

Today, at Geneva, the sanctions committee is trying to proceed still further against Italy. The British plan calls for a boycott of Italian goods, depriving her, by degrees, of foreign exchange needed to purchase raw materials.

The French plan to penalize Italy is seen here as far more effective. The French proposed at Geneva that the sale of key materials to her be banned. But there again the United States would face difficulties.

Washington Is Jittery

The French propose an embargo on shipments of petroleum, iron, steel, coal, cotton and so forth. To forbid the sale of cotton, wheat and similar commodities would almost certainly spell trouble here.

So Washington is increasingly anxious. And, oddly enough, its anxiety arises less from the drastic nature of the League's actions than from their gentleness. Congress made it mandatory on the President to take a certain stand in the event of war.

Nothing was said, however, about boycotting Italian spaghetti, as the British would do, gradually to bankrupt Italy and thus make it impossible for them to buy from us. Congress foresaw more of an open-and-shut case.

TORTURE CASE IS STUDIED BY HIGHEST COURT

U. S. Justices Study Alleged Beating of Convicted Negro Killer.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The Supreme Court is expected to decide today whether it will take up a case involving charges of extreme torture in obtaining confessions of murder from three illiterate Negroes.

The three are Ed Brown, Henry Shields and Yank Ellington, now under sentence of death for the murder of Raymond Stewart, a farmer of Kemper County, Miss.

Stewart was slain in March, 1934. Within a week the three Negroes had been arrested, indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced. They appealed to the state supreme court. The convictions were affirmed in a majority ruling, but in a dissenting opinion, Justice Virgil A. Griffith said:

"It is sufficient to say that in pertinent respects the transcript reads more like pages torn from some medieval account than a record made within the confines of a modern civilization."

Hanged Twice, Beaten

In an affidavit describing the torture to which he was alleged to have been subjected, Ellington said he went to Stewart's house as soon as he heard of the murder to see if he could be of assistance. Soon after he returned to his own house, he said a deputy sheriff arrived and asked Ellington to return to the Stewart place.

Ellington swore that "he found a number of people there; that they began accusing him of having known something about the killing . . . and that the mob seized him, led by Dial . . . and that they hanged him by a rope to the limb of a tree for a while, and then let him down and tried to make him confess that he knew something about the killing. When he denied any knowledge of it they hanged him the second time. That in addition to hanging they tied him around a tree and gave him a severe whipping on his naked body . . ."

Ellington still declined to confess. The mob finally released him. Subsequently, Deputy Dial called again, saying he was going to take Ellington to Meridian for safe-keeping. On the way, according to the Negro's sworn statement, Dial "stopped by the roadside and accused him of lying . . . and that he made him strip his clothing off and took a leather strap, with a buckle on the end of it, and whipped him until he cut his body in strips."

Backs Cut by Straps

Under the lash, Ellington said, he finally begged for his life and said he would confess to anything Dial wanted.

Commenting on the treatment of the two other defendants, Justice Griffith said that they "were made to strip (in the jail) and they were laid over chairs and their backs were cut to pieces with a leather strap with buckles on it, and they were likewise made . . . definitely to understand that the whipping would be continued unless and until they confessed, and not only confessed, but confessed in every matter of detail as demanded . . ."

The confessions thus obtained, according to Justice Griffith, were admitted in evidence by the court and on this evidence conviction was obtained.
