

DORA MONROE SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK

Member of Pioneer Indiana Family Passes at Age of 72.

Mrs. Dora Griffith Monroe, 3741 Central-av, member of a pioneer Indiana family, died yesterday afternoon of heart disease, as she and her husband, Alexander R. Monroe, were driving north on Meridian-st.

Mrs. Monroe, who was 72, was a member of the D. A. R. and the Woman's Department Club.

Surviving are Mr. Monroe, retired president of the Newark Fire Insurance Co., and two daughters, Mrs. W. B. Day, New York, and Mrs. Bray Jones, Chicago.

Arrange Schoppe Rites

Funeral services for Leslie W. Schoppe, attorney, who died yesterday of heart disease in the Statehouse, are to be held at 2 tomorrow in the Husey & Titus Funeral Home, 951 N. Delaware-st. Burial is to be in Crown Hill. He was 51.

Mr. Schoppe, an insurance firm adjuster, had left the office of Harry McClain, State Insurance Commissioner, when he was stricken.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge, the Knights of Pythias, the Scottish Rite and the Shrine; the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, and the American, State and Indianapolis Bar Associations.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Cecile Schoppe; a daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Daniel, Indianapolis; a brother, Herman Schoppe, Pittsburgh, N. H., and his father, George Schoppe, Stewartstown, N. H.

Mrs. Helen Bowers Dies

Last rites for Mrs. Helen Irene Bowers, 4220 Sunset-av, who died last night after three weeks' illness, are to be held Saturday in the Flanner & Buchanan Funeral Home, 25 W. Fall Creek-pkwy. Burial is to be in Crown Hill.

Mrs. Bowers, who was 40, had lived in Indianapolis all her life. She was a member of Christ Episcopal Church and Osrie Mills Watkins Post, American Legion Auxiliary.

She was a Manual High School graduate. Surviving are the widower, Byron D. Bowers; two children, Marie, 10, and Susana, 5; her mother, Mrs. Marie Montieth; four sisters, Mrs. Margaret Aikins, Miss Dora Montieth, Miss Elizabeth Montieth and Miss Mary Montieth; a brother, Oscar Montieth, all of Indianapolis.

Mabee Rites Tomorrow

Services for Mrs. Rebecca Mabee, who died Tuesday night in the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Maley, 238 N. Walcott-st, are to be held at 2 tomorrow in the Conkle Funeral Home, 1934 W. Michigan-st. Burial is to be in Washington Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Maley was 79, and had lived in Indianapolis 15 years. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Maley and Richard Richwine, living near Clermont; five sons, Abe, Leslie, Al and Harry Maley, all of Indianapolis, and William Habebe, Noblesville; 13 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren.

THE LINEN STORE

EDUCATORS
Here Is a
SPECIAL EVENT
Especially Planned for You!

Dresses
Including
Every Imaginable
Dress
You
Could Wish for

$3.99

You Will Love Them
When You
See Them

NEWEST STYLES!
NEWEST COLORS!
NEWEST Materials!

Sizes:
12 to 20—38 to 52
LINEN STORE

AMAZING
Low Prices
on Our Complete Line of UNREDEEMED

- Musical Instruments
- Typewriters
- Machinist Tools
- Drafting Instruments
- Diamonds—Watches
- Men's Suits
- Shot Guns

See Our Windows!

GET OUR LOW PRICES
BEFORE YOU BUY!

CHICAGO JEWELRY CO.

111 East Washington Street
Former Goldstein Store Bldg.

ADDRESSES TEACHERS

FEDERAL LAND POLICY LAUDED

It Guards Public, Official Tells Lions Club.

"Poverty and the lack of economic security have more to do with regeneration of the mind than all the 'red' propaganda that can be poured out," William E. Sweet, former Governor of Colorado and now special assistant to Rexford Guy Tugwell, Resettlement Administrator, told Lions Club members at a luncheon at the Washington yesterday.

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

Government supervision of land utilization and cultivation is in no way a usurpation of the rights of the individual, he said. Instead, he termed it a strong protection against misleading claims made by large landowners concerning the value of properties they want to sell.

The Wisconsin zoning law was cited by Mr. Sweet as an example of progressive administration for the betterment of submarginal land conditions and the resettlement of "farmland refugees."

Mr. Sweet also spoke before members of the Real Estate Board today at a luncheon at the Washington yesterday.

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

"Give the people the full product of their toil, give them a sense of ownership in the land they till and the home that shelters them," Mr. Sweet said, "and we need have no fear for the future of our country and its institutions."

</