

History of Liquor Told in Booklet

Athletic Club Winshop
Offers Volume Helpful to Hostesses.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

MUCH of the romance and history of wines has been brought together in a booklet being distributed by the Indianapolis Athletic Club winshop. With the idea that a relish for social drinks is universal, the club has gathered together 111 recipes for cocktail mixtures along with the story of liquor's background, its proper service and definitions of the many blends.

Champagne, associated with commemoration of happy events, is described as closely woven with France, the land of its birth. The process of imprisoning minute bubbles in the golden liquid first was discovered by the genial cellarer, Dom Perignon, a monk of the famous Abbey d'Hautvillers, now the property of Moët & Chandon, established in 1743 and today owners of twice as many vineyards and cellars as any other firm.

Old Recipe Still Used

Monks also, the book tells, created two of the most famous liquors, French Benedictine and Chartreuse. Benedictine was created by Dom Bernard Vincelli, Benedictine Abbey of the camp founded in 655. The genuine, designated by the label, "D. O. M.," still is produced under the original recipe. Chartreuse was perfected by a Carthusian monk about 1757.

The book shatters the supposed tradition of a prescribed chart in the service of wines. History does not bear out the supposition that a host or hostess must follow a rule or suffer the penalty of society's ridicule. Of course, it is wise to accept the conventions founded on a knowledge and appreciation of the happiest combination of food and drink.

"Otherwise," the book advises, "let one's palate be one's guide."

Among the 111 recipes, cocktails and mixtures are standbys of pre-prohibition days, others are newer concoctions of another era and definitely associated with the Indianapolis Athletic Club.

Juniors to Attend Party

Indec Juniors are rummaging in the family attic, visiting costume shops and stirring up their originality in search of outfits for their mock party tomorrow night in the club rainbow room.

The rainbow room is the old ballroom dressed up in new colors. The light tan side walls have bands of rainbow shades near the cream ceiling. The pillars in the room are encased in rainbow paint and the cylindrical lights composed of three discs are bright with many colors.

The Juniors have a skating party in their books for their November social activity.

The regular club membership is to dance among traditional Halloween decorations at its supper party Saturday night. There then is to be a formal Christmas dance to anticipate for Dec. 23 to add to the holiday gaieties.

Practicing Ballet Positions Is a Help to Beauty-Minded Women

BY ALICIA HART

NEA Service Staff Writer

FROM the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo come steps in an exercise which, as far as they are concerned, means simply five basic positions of ballet dancing. However, to the beauty-minded woman, the five steps constitute a routine that will strengthen her knees and reduce weight on hips and thighs.

Remember, of course, that you can not expect to do these exercises correctly with feet in a straight line the first five times you try. On the fifth, for that matter. But if you will practice them daily until you do attain success, then keep on doing them each morning for weeks thereafter, you certainly will lose weight and your carriage will be 100 per cent better.

Here are the directions: Stand barefooted, or in heelless, soft bedroom slippers, before a long mirror. Be sure that your knees are pulled taut and straight. Press heels flat against the floor. With heels together, force toes outward until feet make a straight line.

Arch the right foot, extend it to the side about 12 inches, meanwhile pointing toes to the floor, then force the heel down again. In this second position, although legs are wide apart, feet should be turned outward exactly as they were in the first. Feel the muscles in your feet, hips and thighs stretch and pull. Don't bend forward. Keep hands on hips.

For step three, arch the right foot again, slide it back toward the left, stopping when the right heel is against the left instep. At this point, feet should be parallel. Hold the position a few seconds.

Now arch the right foot again, slide it directly forward so the ankles are in line and about 12 inches apart. The left foot should be turned straight outward to the left, the right one directly outward to the right.

Hold the fourth position for ten seconds, trying to force heels more and more outward. Then pull the right foot backward until its toes are pressing against the left heel. Repeat, extending the left foot in step two and leading with it—three, four and five.

It is, of course, more important to do these exercises with pressure than with speed. Practice them slowly and see that heels always are held downward.

HALLOWEEN DANCE DATE IS CHANGED

Halloween dance of the Indianapolis Maennerchor scheduled for Saturday night at the Academy of Music has been postponed until Saturday, Nov. 2.

Shopping Around with Dorothy

Is your Halloween party to be one of horrors? Will guests shiver and shake with skeletons and spooks? Or will your table be set in all the autumnal glory of a Harvest Moon? You'll need candles, and comic little hats, noisemakers, and games . . . so you'll want STEWART'S Balcony Shop to provide some original ideas. The most effective way to soften glaring white lights is to use long strands of shimmering cellophane that will sparkle as they're wafted in the air. Cellophane dolls with crackling curls make adorable favors. Then there are complete party sets with all the fixings . . . and kits which include 12 games so the weary hostess won't even have to wrack her brain once. Oh, I tell you—STEWART'S Party Plans are as gay and festive as the season! And their workshop is the haven of genius! (44 E. Washington St. On the balcony.)

Serve bon bons made like pumpkin faces and gum drop cats . . . they'll delight both youngsters and grown-ups.

You'll never believe the wondrous things that pack the shelves of a JAPANESE ART STORE . . . until you march yourself right in there and take a good look all around. The new shipment from Japan and China has arrived and is well worth seeing. Clever cigarette cases—10c to $1.27 East Ohio St. right next to the Hume-Mansur entrance.

"A touch of the right perfume . . . and a woman's viewpoint changes" . . . said Prince Matchabelli. And that right perfume might well be his exquisite "Duchess of York." What with all the fashions in orchestras and accents all gone British . . . why not a perfume inspired in England and dedicated to Her Grace, the Duchess of York? One whiff of this Matchabelli creation is like a "MAGNIFICENT MATCHABELLI" You'll find his distinguished line of toiletries at CHARLES MAYER & CO. And your favorite of his perfumes in a regal crown bottle for as little as one dollar.

Snuggle down into a new fur coat and enjoy this snappy weather. You are sure to be as smart as Vogue, if you wear one of their exclusive little racks . . . so your whole ensemble will reflect the famous fashion center—HILLMAN'S, 13 N. Illinois St.

Halloween was just made a lot more interesting. Let me point out some new ideas for your costumes . . . as well as your fashionable dress. The shops are bright and filled with interest. Do call or write me for further information. Shopping service is gratis—when you call.

Be a good mixer . . . have more parties . . . enjoy the aid of an electric mixer to prepare refreshments. I should say—make every meal a party by serving different and interesting looking foods. VONNEGUTS has a most complete selection of mixers from $6.95 up. And I took a good look at this $6.95 model to believe my own eyes. The whole thing is just as sturdy and substantial as anything ever shown by VONNEGUTS. In this group of modern aides-de-cuisine there is a mixer for every size family. You'll thank me for this tip from VONNEGUTS 2nd floor.

Start the Halloween meal with a jolly table stunt . . . to appease the wrath of evil spirits.

Sit for 20 or 30 minutes in a cozy studio corner of AYRES' Art Dept. and have your portrait done! It's quite entertaining to watch Helen Wetherbee's talented fingers reproduce your likeness in delicate pastel. Besides, it's a happy thought for a gift . . . or your own gallery. (AYRES' 5th floor.)

Fish has been called brain food . . . but it sounds more reasonable to believe that any good food should stimulate the mind. You eat well, then you think well . . . and quite naturally, you do well. Who do you suppose advances this thought? None other than WHEELER'S Restaurants where this slogan is preached and practiced. "Pay attention to what you eat, but more to where you eat it." See? Food that contains its full share of nutriment (as it always does at WHEELER'S) does more to promote good thinking . . . and your entire success in this world may depend on doing a good job of thinking. Now! This doesn't call for spinach . . . and really isn't deep, but, if you know, I believe you could figure the matter out perfectly . . . if you would make it a rule to eat at WHEELER'S Streamline Restaurants—8 W. Market St., and 139 N. Pennsylvania St.

Then there's always fortune telling with which to entertain your guests.

A dessert-bridge party in the Mt. Vernon Room will mean more to your guests . . . and more to you . . . because MARTHA WASHINGTON takes care of all arrangements. Southern hospitality and delicious refreshments . . . but a better call TA. 1827 for all details. (2301 N. Meridian St.)

RI-551 is the number. And just remember to mention, as often as you can, Dorothy
