

PRIMO'S GRIMACES FINALLY TAKE EFFECT, JOE OBSERVES

Neusel Shows Up Acting as Scared as Baer and Calls Quits After Fourth Round

Exactly 2834 Pounds of 'Beef' Fighters Try Out for 'White Hope' Trust, Statistician Williams Figures, and German Looks Worst of All.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—It was heavy weather at the Garden last night. Fourteen heavyweights of assorted sizes, shapes and scents were turned loose to graze in the new moon resin. It was a spectacle that could be described only as colossal and stupendous.

Some 12,000 patrons of the noble art of beef busting came away satisfied they had seen a considerable tonnage of animated beef (2834 1/2 pounds, all told, to be precise), but wondering if among the lot there existed one real good "white redeemer."

This was the first appearance of a herd of white hopes under one tent since shuffling Joe Louis trumped the whole heavyweight division, and the promotional purpose, aside from spinning the turnstiles, was to uncover a promising menace. But for the most part it would have been better if the gents had remained uncovered.

As a sort of bell cow (and it is to be hoped the word is not libelous to the bovine family) Mr. Carnera was stitched up at the seams and brought back to lead the parade. And to the surprise of everybody in the joint, he did some one he could whip. He made Walter Neusel of Germany quit in the fourth round. This was a surprise, not make Neusel the worst fighter in the world. Reservations are necessary. The world is large.

Old Satch hit the German with one of those swishing right handers of his, near the close of the fourth. The blow opened a deep gash over Neusel's right eye, from which blood gushed. He turned to the referee, mumbled something about German solidarity, and walked to his corner, which happened not to be the corner around which prosperity lurked.

Neusel came into the ring wearing an expression which seemed to indicate he had confused the identity of his opponent. He looked like Max Baer the night the magnificent screwball showed up for his appointment with Louis. He looked frightened. This was easily the greatest tribute that has ever been paid to Old Satch. It must be those awful grimaces of his are beginning to have effect.

To be fair about it, Neusel is the type of fighter Old Satch could always beat, a light hitting, non-aggressive man. Against this type the Primo of the Carners is strong enough to pull, manhandle and wrestle his way to victory. It is when he is facing an opponent who is not only able to tag him with a fair punch, but willing to try, that Old Satch goes into his picturesque panic—a manifestation of nervous frenzy that never has been equaled by man or beast. Or by Joe E. Brown for that matter.

It would be absurd to say that Carnera in beating Neusel, and beating him badly, showed anything to indicate he is an improved fighter. He hit Neusel with a dozen tremendous right-handers and yet he was unable to knock him off his feet. He looked just as startled, bewildered and panicky when Neusel made a threatening gesture (which was seldom) as he ever did. He made as many wild swings, went into as many Goldberger postures of futility, and seemed just as greatly un-co-ordinated as in the past. He is in short, still a gladiatorial caricature with the friendly instincts of a big dog who is being exploited by mercenary managers. You're right. Mercenary is redundant.

To come right out and say so, Old Satch and Neusel were just about the worst fighters on the card. They led the card because they had box office names. It was possible to build a faint sort of ballyhoo around them. There were four or five of the preliminary fighters who could have whipped either of them, and this is not saying there was anything spiritually exciting about the performances of said preliminaries.

The fight I liked best was the one in which Bob Pastor, late of New York University, beat Max Marek, late of Notre Dame, in six rounds. It could just as well have been called a draw. Both used to play football. It was the first time anybody ever saw football players in a huddle where there was any action. These young men stood brogan to brogan and traded rights and lefts for the full distance. Pastor, a tall 180-pounder, showed a nice right uppercut, the effect of which, in close, influenced the official jurists. Marek's best belt was a left hook. Incidentally, Marek beat Louis as an amateur, getting off the floor to do it. A man who gets off the floor after being hit by Louis is not supposed to be completely intelligent. The entrance requirements of Notre Dame must not be as high as I thought they were.

THE six-round semi-final between Tony Galento of New Jersey and Eddie Mader of New York was supposed to be hot stuff—in advance. Galento is built on the lines of a baby hippo, running to mauling curves here and there. Most of his hair is on his chest. His fights with his mouth open. The general effect is not flattering to the advanced biological results of the Darwinian theory. But when he hits, they stay hit. The trouble is he must have a set up to hit. Mader proved to be something more than a setup. He took advantage of Jumbo Jr.'s slowness and bar-room fighting technique at every turn and kicked the stuffing out of him. Which was a good turn, at that. He's been overfitted too long. Mader stands over 6 feet, weighs 185, is a youngster, has a bad habit of starting his punches from the rear end of the arena, but may have been the best fighter on the card for all that.

Irish Stem Late Manual Uprising to Win, 21-13

Shortridgers Rap Athenians; Tech Whips Frankfort; Ripple Ties; Continentals Lose.

By Dick Miller

Cathedral was given a scare by Manual yesterday afternoon when the Redskins tallied 13 points in the last quarter, but the Irish emerged victorious, 21-13, and today laid claim to a share of the all-city high school championship. The game was played on the Delavan Smith gridiron.

Shortridge crushed Crawfordsville beneath a last-half drive that netted 20 points at the Athenian city, and the Blue Devils remained undefeated today after six games. The final score was 27 to 12. The local eleven was on the short end of a 12-7 count at half time.

Technical, after trailing Frankfort, 7-0, at the end of the first quarter, took charge in the next two periods and tallied 20 points to triumph, 20-13. The game was played at Frankfort.

Broad Ripple had to tally a touchdown in the last period to tie with Westfield, 6-6, at the Rocket field. A chance to win the game was missed when McQueen's dropkick sailed wide.

Washington ran into plenty of trouble at Kirklin and was never in front. The Continentals trailed, 13-0, at the half time, and lost, 26-7. Crispus Attucks and Wendell Phillips staged a real thriller for the Attucks' homecoming fans. The game ended, 6-6, both teams missing the extra points.

Irish-Manual

Young Jack Corriden both helped Cathedral to victory and came nearly fumbling to defeat. After a scoreless first quarter young Corriden entered the fray and immediately streaked off between end and tackle for a sixty-five-yard jaunt to a touchdown. Bob Connor tossed a pass to Victor Lanahan for the extra point.

Before the period ended Joe Dienhart's charges had amassed 14 additional points. Paul Billman broke through and blocked one of Leonard Campbell's punts and the ball bounded back to the end zone for an automatic safety and two points.

The Irish received the kick and immediately set out for the goal line. McGilchey tallied and Corriden aided in the drive with long sweeps around end. The third touchdown came when Jim McNamara passed to Lanahan to carry the ball near to the goal line. Fox plunged over. Both tries for extra points by Art Waddle were wide.

The third quarter was scoreless. Then came the break for the Redskins in rapid manner. Manual forwards blocked a pass and Nahanias caught the oval and ran eighty-five yards to score. Jack Hiatt plunged for the extra point.

Corriden fumbled the ball on his own 10-yard line and Manual recovered. The Redskins cracked the line hard and Campbell scored, but Vestal Davis missed the kick for point.

S. H. S.-Crawfordsville

At Crawfordsville, Sando put the Blue Devils off to an early lead with a short buck for a touchdown. Caldwell raced seventy-five yards with the next kickoff for a Crawfordsville tally. The Athenians took the lead in the second quarter when Kendall tallied from the 1-yard line.

Coach Bob Nipper's boys staged a spirited rally in the last half. In addition to repulsing all Crawfordsville scoring attempts, the Blue cut loose with a 20-point offense. Lingeman scored on a ten-yard dash. Brown tallied from the 7-yard line after he made a long punt return. Scales reversed for an eleven-yard dash to the third touchdown. Wey booted three of the four extra points attempts.

Tech-Frankfort

Tech men passed the Frankfort team "dizzy," but looked at a few aerials themselves. Miner passed to McCreary to give Frankfort a first quarter lead. Stoshitch was on hand to seize a loose ball that Miner had batted out of Snyder's hands in the second quarter and scored, to tie the count at half time. Tech drove to a touchdown after receiving the third quarter kickoff.

As far as Hoosier fans are concerned, two games today are "extremely" important. Notre Dame and Ohio State at Columbus, Ohio and Butler-Wabash at the Bulldog bowl, are tops attractions.

In the Irish-Buckeye scrap, Andy Pilney is expected to cut a figure with his accurate right arm. Last week the former Chicago prep star tossed passes all around the Navy defense.

Jack White has been going into the fray for Wabash to carry out a similar passing assignment, and no small part of the Little Giant offense against Butler today is expected to be in the air.

It was homecoming at Butler and the leadership of the Indiana Intercollegiate Conference was at stake. Jim Wulle, former Cathedral star, who has been a mainstay in the Bulldog back field for the past two years, in both of which the locals have had top-notch elevens, is considered one of the best ball toters in Hoosierland.

Loop Lead at Stake in Tilt at Riverside

Yugoslaves, Soldiers Meet in One of Three Capital Games.

Three hard-fought contests are anticipated when teams in the Smith-Hassler-Sturm Capital City Football League renew their rivalry tomorrow afternoon. The Yugoslav eleven, formerly Holy Trinity, will meet Ft. Harrison at Riverside, the Leon Tailors will oppose the Pendleton Reformatory team at the Reformatory, and the Olympics will take on the P. R. Mallorys at Brookside No. 1.

Both Undefeated

The Soldiers and the Yugoslavs are unbeaten and will be battling for the loop lead. The Slavs boast an uncrossed goal line. Coach Brisk reports that no injuries have been incurred in practice this week and his team is in top shape for its most important game of the season. Coach Lankeau has been stressing tackling in the Fort drills. Scott and Myers, regulars last year, have been recalled for the fray.

Coach Painter's Lions will be out to break the Reformatory team's victory streak tomorrow morning and will go about the task with full strength in the field. The Pendleton warriors have been using their limit in practicing this week and announce their first string squad is ready to start intact.

Recruits Get Chance

The Mallory-Olympic tussle promises to be close as the loser will take "undisputed" possession of the league cellar.

Manager Heightchew of the Olympics has been busy preparing recruits to take over the duties of several regulars who were injured in last week's game. Mallory's offense has been clicking, but a weak defense has kept the squad from gaining a victory this season.

Franklin Bows to Purple Aces, 7-0

Baptists Eleven Loses Again by Single Touchdown.

By Times Special
EVANSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 2.—For the sixth consecutive time the Franklin College football team went down to defeat here yesterday by the margin of one touchdown or less. The Evansville College Purple Aces triumphed over the Blue and Gold by the score of 7-0.

Early in the game the Grizzlies threatened to score when they recovered a fumble on Evansville's own 20-yard line, but the Aces held for downs.

The rivals went into the final quarter deadlocked, 0-0.

Bill Slyker's charges cut loose with a forward, Keck to Pollard, who in turn lateraled to Johnson, and the net gain was 24 yards to the six. It took Johnson three tries at the line to get over for the touchdown. He contributed the extra point with a place kick.
