PWA Workers 'Chip In' to Aid Aged Co-Laborer

$2.50 Donation Given to
Joseph McNorton, 60,
During Illness.

On a sheet of tablet paper Joseph McNorton wrote the following: "I want to take this opportunity to thank all the men working on the project at the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing on Franklin Road for their kindness and their donation during my recent illness."

Joseph McNorton is more than 60. He moved to Indianapolis 35 years ago from Greencastle, Ind., where he had been reared as an orphan by a farmer.

Depression Stopped Job

For a long time he was a night watchman in a coal yard, but the depression cut him out of that. Last winter he had a FERA job and worked for a month or so when the foreman told him the project was ended.

He went back to his home, 833 Bradshaw-st., and waited for the call he had been promised within a day or two. On Oct. 27 of this year he got the call.

He went to work on the PWA project he described in his note, and earned a pick and shovel. It rained nearly every day and eventually he caught a cold.

He had to leave the job, and went home, where his daughter cared for him together with his invalid wife. On Nov. 15 one of the men on the project stopped at his home.

They had been paid two days before and each pitched in to make up a little cash for Mr. McNorton. It was $2.50.

FOLLOW ONE CLEW IN POLICE MURDER

Anderson Detectives Hunt
Slayer of Patrolman.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 26.—Detectives today admitted that only one clew is known to exist to the mystery of the brutal murder early yesterday of Patrolman Frank (Pete) Levy, 58-year-old patrolman and father of 10 children.

Patrolman Levy was shot four times, once through the heart, by a total cost of $345,000, on the Purdue University campus, where he had been in a car parked in the residential section for more than two hours.

Investigating police admit that the motive for the parking in the residential section is the only clew to the identity of the slayer who opened fire as Patrolman Levy walked toward his car to make an investigation.

Because of the peculiar circumstances of the apparently pointless parking in a residential section, police are inclined to think that the gunman was a native of this city and not a wandering stranger.

PLAN MERGER OF RAIL FIRM DEPARTMENTS

Changes Are Announced and Are to Become Effective Dec. 1.

Merger of several departments of the Indianapolis Union Railway Co., Belt Railroad operators, with the Pennsylvania and Big Four Railroads is to be effected Dec. 1, it was reported today.

The motive power department and auditor's office is to be taken over by the Big Four, while the maintenance of the purchasing department and treasurer's office are to come under control of the Pennsylvania Railroad, it is said.

Operating Set-Up Stands

Operating department of the Union Railway will not be changed. The auditor's office will be in New York and the purchasing department in Chicago, it is reported.

Fred W. Reynolds, Big Four general superintendent, said the Big Four's master mechanic will have charge of the similar duties for the Union railway. Bert C. Byers, terminal manager, will remain in that position and be in charge of the master mechanic and maintenance of way and structure department.

The merger is to be effected, it is said, to bring about better supervision. No reduction in the personnel of the Union Railway is planned.

'De Lawd'

Harrison Might Not Have
Screened Well, Says
Roark Bradford.

Roark Bradford

BY M'CREARY HUSTON
ROARK BRADFORD popped into town and out again today, in fine fettle as the result of a Warner Brothers' check for his share of "The Green Pastures," which is about to go into production with Rex Ingram in the role of De Lawd.

With Mr. Bradford was his Indianapolis wife, the former Mary Rose Himler, who speaks enthusiastically of their 3-year-old son Richard, who has been going to school since the age of 17 months. The Bradfords now make their home in New Orleans.

"Marc Connelly himself is going to direct 'The Green Pastures,'" said Mr. Bradford. "All this talk about Max Reinhardt is the bunk. Marc will be the big white-man on the job and the entire cast will be Negroes. There have been reports that some white actors in black-face will be cast on account of their big names, but 'Pastures' does not make its appeal on big names and never did."

"I remarked that it was a pity Richard Harrison could not have lived to make the picture."

"It is a pity he could not live, of course," said Mr. Bradford, with his Southern drawl. "But he probably would not have screened well. The shade of his skin was not right for the camera."

THE author of the stories on which Connelly based "Pastures" was enthusiastic in exploding a rumor that he had not been well-treated in the original financial arrangements for the famous play.

"The agreement was made by lawyers for my publishers, Harper Brothers, and was more generous to me than the standard basic contract," Mr. Connelly said, and the producers have given me more than a square deal, even to a share in the Pulitzer Prize."

I asked him what he was doing now.

"I've completed the libretto for an opera and Jacques Wolf, composer, who writes those charming songs for Lawrence Tibbett, has the score about half done. The Theatre Guild is interested in producing it."

"Funny thing," Mary Rose chimed in. "They said Brad couldn't do a libretto. Well, he just took his book, 'John Henry,' and wrote one of the best librettos the operatic experts ever clapped an eye on."

"I suppose he studied some operatic librettos in advance," I suggested.

"Nary a one. He never saw a libretto in his life."

MR. CONNELLY now is casting "Pastures" in New York. He is trying to use as many of the original cast as possible, but some will have to be rejected on account of pigmentation. A certain kind of mulatto comes out of screening looking like an Indian.

The two authors, in finally letting the play go into films, made

FEAR OF COURT DECISIONS STIR NEW DEAL TALK

Constitutional Amendment
Plans Advocated to Save AAA.

BY HERBERT LITTLE
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Fear of Supreme Court decisions against several major parts of the New Deal, accentuated by the court's temporary order impounding rice processing taxes, led today to renewed consideration of possible legislation to restrict the Federal Court's present veto power.

Most of the open talk since the Schechter decision has involved a constitutional amendment, but some New Deal lawyers are privately advancing proposals for action by Congress.

Congress could by law take away from Federal District judges the power to rule on constitutionality of an act of Congress, it is suggested, under the power granted by the Constitution to determine the jurisdiction of subordinate Federal courts.

Retirement for Judges

Further, Congress by a retirement law for Supreme Court justices could bring about the retirement of some of the old-timers on the court who make up the dominant conservative bloc. The present retirement law is optional with the justices, and none of the four or five eligible justices has retired.

A third possibility is a law to require a vote of seven of the nine justices to hold an act of Congress invalid. This has been widely discussed, because the Constitution also gives Congress power to specify the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. But many fear that this might some day enable a small minority—three justices—to thwart a court veto of a tyrannical act of Congress.

A constitutional amendment authorizing social and economic legislation, such as is advocated by the American Federation of Labor, would face a difficult fight for ratification by the necessary 36 states, these lawyers believe. They point to the stalemate of the pending child labor amendment, which covers only the small feature of the national regulation which a real New Deal amendment might involve.

Dissenters Arouse Comment

The unusual action of Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo in dissenting yesterday from the temporary order of the court stopping the government's revenues from processing taxes aroused comment. Announced dissents are unusual except in formal, permanent decisions of the court. Some believed today that this may indicate a court schism has developed on AAA even before the arguments of the case.

The Hoosier textile processing-tax case, which with the Bankhead tax case is to be argued the week of Dec. 9, involves only the legality of taxes imposed before Aug. 24, when Congress amended the AAA law. The rice case, to be heard Dec. 16, involves the amended law.

AAA lawyers say the Supreme Court has before it only the propriety of lower court injunctive action, but the rice millers' brief directly attacks the new law's constitutionality. This brief directly challenges the validity of legislation designed to redistribute the national income as beyond the power of Congress.

An advance and royalty contract. They are receiving a rousing lump sum and a share of the gross.

Mary Rose has become her husband's secretary. She carries the money, pays the bills, copies his stories, sends them off, carries on his correspondence, and advises him in his business matters.

"All Brad has to do is to retire to the slave quarters every now and then and write a story," she explained.

The author of "How Come Christmas" and those other Negro tales which have delighted the nation reached for his ninth cup of breakfast coffee. "Yes, that's all; but try to do it."

The Bradfords left for Nashville, Tenn., this afternoon.

DEFENSE RESTS IN TAIT TRIAL; GOES TO JURY

State's Closing Argument
Made by Deputy Prosecutor.

State's Closing Argument
Made by Deputy Prosecutor.

The cases of James Flaherty, Donald Nye and Ernest Tait went to the jury at 11:35 this morning and the jurors immediately began deliberations.

The men are charged with burglary, and the state's case consisted almost entirely of signed confessions obtained by police from two of them, and admitted to evidence only after strenuous legal controversy.

Deputy Prosecutor Edward Brennan made the closing argument for the state followed by Special Judge James D. Ermonston's instructions.

The defense rested unexpectedly yesterday afternoon after presenting the testimony of Tait, his foster mother, Mrs. Anna Tait and a character witness, Ben Richardson, grocer of 1301 High-st. No testimony was offered in behalf of Nye and Flaherty.

A stir was caused when Tait charged from the witness stand that Kenneth Fowler, fugitive and alleged gangster, was a spectator at the trial.

Tait repudiated his alleged confession which named Nye and Flaherty as accomplices in various alleged crimes.

He explained gun shot wounds which he had received sometime before his arrest as the result of a hi-jacking brawl near East St. Louis. He admitted having been in the liquor business in Florida and the slot-machine business in and around Marion County.

Editors Shows Tie.

By United Press
NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A poll of rural and small-town sentiment throughout the country today indicated an almost even division of support between President Roosevelt and the Republican field. The test was made by the American Press and Publishers' Autocaster Service of New York, which polled country newspaper editors.

Figured on the basis of electoral college votes, Mr. Roosevelt and the Republicans were tied with 261 each, with Arizona, Delaware and Nevada not counted.

Popular votes in the straw ballot favored Mr. Roosevelt against the field by 119,387 to 104,851.

RABBIT ON BILL
FOR PRISONERS

Sheriff Announces Menu for Thanksgiving; Deputies Go Hunting.

Indications were today that the chief item on the Thanksgiving Day menu for county jail prisoners would be rabbit.

This was promised today by Sheriff Ray, who released one-half his deputies for a day's hunting on neighboring farms. Remaining deputies are to undertake a similar venture tomorrow. The deputies are doubling up in order to bring this item of food to the county jail Thanksgiving board.

Reserve deputies also are joining in the hunt and the sheriff has invited friends of the deputies to go along for the same purpose. Sheriff Ray has cautioned the deputies to gain permission of farmers before entering their land.

Suggestion that the prisoners go along to help forage for the big meal was overruled by the sheriff.
