

ONE LEGISLATOR AT LEAST RECKONS SOCIAL SECURITY AS TOWNSEND PLAN STOPPER

'They're Crying for Beefsteak,' He Said, 'and You've Got to Throw 'em Something'— Hence the Special Session Sentiment.

BY JAMES DOSS

The legislator sank somewhat limply into a chair, sighed and said yes, it looked very much as if there would have to be a special session because social security might be the only chance of stopping the Townsend Plan.

"You've got to do something to head off these Townsends," said the legislator, who shall be nameless because that may or may not be his public view and he wasn't talking for publication.

"They're crying for beefsteak," he said, "and you've got to throw 'em something."

"A state bun?" suggested a bystander.

"Well," grinned the legislator, "you'd better make it a bone, just to keep the allegory straight. Anyhow, something has to be done to head off these Townsends."

Whether or not the legislator really regards the social security program as "a bone to be tossed to the Townsends" is beside the point. What is important is that he put into words understandable to the man in the street the way many leaders of both parties evaluate social security and their fear of the fast-growing Townsend movement.

Political leaders, if they remain such for any length of time, do not have any ostrich-blood in their veins. They may refuse to recognize a political menace publicly, but never when they "let down their hair."

There apparently is little doubt that the Townsend pension plan vote is going to be an important factor in the next congressional elections.

The Townsend adherents are not at all backward in letting any one know that the movement will place its own tickets in the field wherever satisfactory assurances are not forthcoming from congressional candidates of the two major parties.

The Townsends can muster a lot of votes.

Jan. 1 probably will see the final touches given to the measure to amend George V. (Cap) Coffin, entitled but actual head of the Marion County Republican Party for years.

Some time ago a reform group within the party announced plans to force the resignation of Wayne Emmelman, county chairman and Coffin's lieutenant, and to reduce Cap's voice in future party councils to an occasional whisper.

Little has been said since, but the organization with which the reform group hopes to support Mr. Emmelman with John Bookwalter is said to be taking definite form.

Prospective announcement of E. Kirk McKinney for Governor still is hanging fire, but the candidacy of the Indiana manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corp. is taken for granted in political circles.

The state administration may be torn with political dissension over the Governor candidates in the administration, but its spokesmen, particularly in the Greenlee faction, already are "not fearing" Mr. McKinney's candidacy.

There is no doubt that the state administration factions have been trying to make extensive use of the big Marion County convention delegation which Mr. McKinney has controlled and presumably will control again next June.

In deprecating the McKinney candidacy, the Statehouse boys bring up a subject that is very distasteful to the VanNuy-McKinney group. That is the handling of the Marion County delegation in the last senatorial convention.

Ever since the nomination of now Senator Sherman Minton and the answers that preceded the ill-fated candidacy of the late Senator Reginald H. Sullivan, Mr. McKinney has been charged with poor handling of the delegation.

Marion County, it will be recalled, clung to Mr. Sullivan to the last, even when it was obvious that he hadn't a chance, and that convention strategy clearly called for trading.

Mr. McKinney's defenders declare that his apparently poor handling of the delegation was because of too deep a personal loyalty to Senator Frederick VanNuy, and that Mr. McKinney, like any good son of Marion, was carrying out his orders.

Now the McKinney "antis" are saying that the HOLC leader will not be able to control the 231 Marion County delegates in June in his own cause and that he will get fewer votes for the Governor nomination than Mayor Sullivan did for Senator.

STATE TO BEGIN PUBLIC SAFETY FIVE-YEAR PLAN

Campaign to Start Jan. 1 to Reduce Traffic Toll 35 Per Cent.

The Five-Year-Plan, a communism of spirit of safety-minded folk instead of the communism of a nation, will try to ride death from Indiana highways beginning Jan. 1 and continuing through 1940.

Under leadership of the accident prevention bureau of the Department of Safety and Donald P. Stiver, state safety director and police superintendent, Indiana is to participate in a nation-wide campaign to reduce vehicular traffic deaths 35 per cent within five years.

The National Safety Council, the Hoosier Motor Club, city accident prevention bureaus, and safety organizations, co-operating agencies, hope that a 7 per cent decrease in traffic deaths can be effected yearly.

Highway Patrol Inadequate

"Our highway patrol is woefully undermanned, but we hope to make the public accident-minded and thereby decrease the death toll in the state," Mr. Stiver said.

The drive, as approved by Mr. Stiver and outlined through the National Safety Council, is opposed to spasmodic safety campaigns as not bringing "permanent results."

The five-year campaign, largely educational, will include a broad program of engineering and enforcement activities.

New ways of appealing to the responsibility and teamwork of the motorist are to be sought.

Other aims are:

1. State-wide school safety programs.
2. Adoption of uniform laws with standard drivers' license legislation.
3. Adequate state highway patrols.
4. Standardization of accident reports.

Hope to Save 38,000 Lives

It is the hope of the National Safety Council that 38,000 lives can be saved during the operation of the Five-Year Plan.

Indorsing the campaign in behalf of the Hoosier Motor Club, Todd Stoops, club secretary-manager, urged more intelligent enforcement of traffic laws as one method of reducing fatalities.

"The actual patrolling of the streets by motorcycle patrolmen daily is beneficial in preventing accidents," Mr. Stoops said.

"Our club will give every possible co-operation," he added.

MUSSOLINI BRANDED AS 'SAWDUST CAESAR'

Local Ethiopian Native Speaks to Cosmopolitan Club.

Gabra Sadik Gachaw, Indianapolis, one of two native Ethiopians in this country, branded Mussolini as a "sawdust Caesar" before the Cosmopolitan Club in Cropley Auditorium last night.

League of Nations penalties and the determined resistance of Ethiopia may serve to keep Italian Fascism from Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom, Mr. Gachaw said.

Martin C. Clinton introduced the speaker. Dr. C. S. Kim, Cosmopolitan Club president, was temporary chairman. Dr. Frank E. C. Wickes presided. Miss Joy Dickens and Miss Jacqueline Wilson Uhlbrecht gave a music program. Miss Violet Muse was program chairman.

WHY NOT TRY GOD?

..BY MARY PICKFORD

To the power of thought Miss Pickford devoted her message yesterday. She dwells today upon the freedom it can bestow.

CHAPTER III

A VERY WISE MAN once said, "We see only our own thoughts and in some way or other they become externalized as our environment and experience, and so the world we seem to be experiencing without, is really the world we are seeing within. How could we possibly think one way and have experiences in the opposite direction?"

Isn't it wonderful to realize that no one in the whole world, no government, no bank, no other person, no anything, can interfere with what each of us chooses to think? Like a radio, each one of us may tune in the good and instantly shut off the bad, or let in the bad and switch off the good.

Nothing in the world can make you conscious of failure or unhappiness unless you think about it. Nothing in the world can harm you without your individual consent. Whatever we hold in thought automatically becomes real to us—externalizes itself in experience.

A very remarkable woman whom I know recently lost her husband. They had been very rich in love and extremely happy. When I saw her some weeks later she radiated a tranquillity and confidence which was inspiring. I asked how she had achieved it.

She said, "All the water in the world can not sink a ship unless it gets inside the ship. All the sorrow in the world can not sink a person unless it gets inside the mind. I have kept my mind so full of good thoughts, so full of thoughts for others, that there hasn't been any room for sorrow and self-pity to get in."

I HAVE been glad many times since then that she told me, because I have found that it works. Unlike most women, I have never been able to work out my intimate problems in private. I have to do it in front of the whole world, for the world knows what is happening to me professionally, domestically and personally almost as soon as I do myself. And so, in a way, I become at times more or less a target for flying rumors and counter-rumors, hasty judgments and thoughtless gossip.

But I've learned not to let it leak in. And the more difficult the problem the harder I try to find the God-element, or the good-element, in people and things, and the more I try to think about others as I would have them think about me.

Some years ago when Mr. Fairbanks and I were in China we were the guests of a delightful couple, a professor of archeology and his wife. One evening during dinner the husband spoke of taking us the next morning to see a famous gateway, one of the oldest and most beautiful things in China.

And his wife said, "Oh, don't take Mrs. Fairbanks there! The gateway is beautiful, but I never see it because of the filthy, dirty people that are always gathered there."

Each of them had their choice. He saw the great beauty and artistry of the gateway. She saw the ugliness and dirt of the human beings beneath it.

THERE is a great deal in life that is fine and beautiful which we refuse to see. We keep our eyes glued on the dangers, the difficulties, the unpleasant things. We soak ourselves in them. They finally occupy our thoughts and these thoughts are manifested in human experience. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

That is what you will find and prove if you will just try it. Of course you have heard it many times. Perhaps you thought it was only a nice sounding sentiment. Do you realize that it means that whatever is happening to you or to me at this very minute is absolutely the result of what each of us has been putting into our minds, what each of us has been thinking for years? And do you realize that what will happen tomorrow will be the result, in a great degree, of what you are thinking today? You and I can not possibly escape the result of our thoughts.

So our concern is not really with external things at all, these things being secondary, but with our thoughts.

Let's go into the laboratory of our minds and see about all this.

THE first thing you find is—I am.

All right. How do you know you are?

Because you can think about it. The moment you can't think about it you have no consciousness of existence and so, you just are not. Then what is the primary fact of existence? Why, thought, of course. The power of thinking. Take that away and man is nothing. Your mind knows that you are and that makes you. Your thinking is the medium through which everything comes to you.

Then, thought is the most vital and essential thing about man; that which connects each of us with this wonderful, precious gift of life.

Then oughtn't thinking to come first? Oughtn't it to be the power? Doesn't it seem rather silly to believe that this great force, this one necessary force, is just something that can be ruled by the body, by conditions, and by outside beliefs, and that we can't individually do anything about it?

We've put the cart before the horse, not only in this, but in most of our theories of existence. Thought is the great power of the universe—not body, nor matter, nor conditions.

CHURCHES JOIN SEAL CAMPAIGN

City Ministers Will Urge Congregations to Help Red Cross.

Use of the 1935 tuberculosis Christmas Seals is to be urged in city churches tomorrow as ministers of all denominations join in indorsing the sale in Indianapolis and Marion County.

Dr. Ernest N. Evans, executive secretary of the Indianapolis Church Federation; Rabbi Morris M. Feuerlicht and the Rt. Rev. Joseph E. Ritter, bishop of the Indianapolis diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, are members of the Christmas Seal committee of which Eli Lilly is general chairman.

"Tuberculosis is preventable, yet more people between the ages of 15 and 45 die from it than any other disease," the Rev. John B. Ferguson, president of the Indianapolis Ministers' Association, points out in a letter received today by pastors of all Protestant churches in Marion County. The letter also is signed by the Rev. Carleton W. Atwater and the Rev. John A. Farr.

Horoscopes? Horrors!

That's How the Federal Trade Commission Looks on the Admiral's Great Device.

BY FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Love is grand and stars are nice, too, but the New Deal announced today they don't mix, no matter what the astrologers claim.

The government said—and thereby let itself in for a lot of trouble—that horoscopes aren't any better than ouija boards or tea leaves for telling who's going to marry who, and whether you're going on a long journey to meet a dark man with curly hair and money.

This official pronouncement came from the Federal Trade Commission, which sits in a rattle trap frame building on Constitution avenue and dives into all sorts of commercial enterprises, including the manufacture of bald spot eliminators, instantaneous fat reducers, guaranteed cough drops and, of course, studies of the stars.

AN inland sailor and heavenly expert, Admiral George D. Arnold of Chicago, started the government wheels grinding when he advertised for sale horoscopes for $10, $15, $20 and $35, according to grade.

"Every scientist or astronomer will concede the fact that the planets have a vibration which can be recognized by us on earth," the admiral wrote. The five commissioners said "Sez you."

Admiral Arnold added that his 46-page book of scientific astrological directions "will regulate your life each hour of the day" and that it can tell you: 1. Whom to marry. 2. Your financial prospects. 3. When to seek employment. 4. When to seek favors or loans. 5. When to push love affairs.

"WHY take a chance on wrecking the home, or losing the love of your husband by not knowing what to do, when to do, or how to do?" the admiral asked. The commissioners pondered this a long time, but decided eventually to make such chance taking mandatory upon every man, woman and child in the nation.

They sent a long list of promises of things he'd quit doing to the admiral and said for him to sign it. He did. Among other rights he signed away was one of inferring that people who didn't buy his books "may be reduced to poverty, misery, unhappiness or discontent, or can not be successful, or will encounter obstacles, or take a chance of wrecking the home, or losing the love of any one, or will continue in a state of uncertainty, or will fool himself, or will pay the price of failure."

With that sentence off its chest, the commission turned to more earthly matters, such as sets of books which are the equivalent of a college education, strawberry jam sans strawberries, while-you-sleep nose reshapers, and butter produced without benefit of cows.
