

At-the-Door Book Rental Successful

Avocation Brings Profit to Mrs. Pearson, Miss Pearson.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

TAKING a tip from Mahomet and his excursion to the mountain, Mrs. John Pearson Jr. and Miss Peggy Pearson have formed an extraordinary rental library service. For their friends who believe they haven't the time to make trips to a library for books, they have established the Pearson-Cum-To-You Library.

On word from their friends, Mrs. Pearson or Miss Pearson stop in with their book lists, give hints on the popular current books and deliver them to the patrons' doorsteps. The young librarians deliver books on Mondays and Fridays.

After Miss Pearson completed studies at Briarcliff Junior College, she continued her reading, which had appealed strongly to her during her pursuit of a degree in literature. The idea came to her that she could develop this pleasurable pastime into a business. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Pearson, said she would welcome a hobby to fill in the hours when she wasn't busy running her household, assisting in the Christiana Aid Society activities and making the social rounds.

Buy Book Supply

Together they began buying books which they considered had the most appeal to general readers. The word "rental" was dropped, and they were ready to come to their friends' homes with the late books, which "somehow they just hadn't gotten around to reading."

Their venture has been more successful than they had expected and after a few weeks has been added to their library.

Mrs. Pearson and her husband, Miss Pearson Sr., had arranged a trip to Florida. They appeared to a friend, Miss Betty Reed, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jewett Reed.

"Won't you take over our library while we're away?" they queried. Miss Reed didn't hesitate to accept.

So while the Pearsons are in Florida, Miss Reed is to be the Pearson-Cum-To-You staff. She is to make the rounds on Mondays and Fridays.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas have turned their backs on winter weather and are enjoying the sunshine at Naples, Fla.

While Mr. and Mrs. Skiles Test are traveling through South America, they expect to drop in on Meredith Nicholson Sr., minister to Venezuela, and Mrs. Nicholson at Caracas. The Nicholsons, still at heart true Hoosiers, are now at the Lincoln Hotel, first-hand news about their friends.

The prestige granted her as a Governor's wife hasn't deprived Mrs. Paul V. McNutt of the ability to be impressed by state occasions. She came back from her visit at the White House thrilled by the privileges of being assigned to the Lincoln Room as a house guest.

"I couldn't sleep in the presence of so much historic grandeur," she admitted.

Mrs. Robert Allison, Evanston, Ill., is in town visiting Mrs. Perry Hahn and enjoying reunions with her friends of the days when she lived here.

Mrs. Addison Miller has returned to her home in Columbus, O., after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Owens.

A party of Indianapolis folk waved their adieux to the States today and set sail on a cruise to South America. Mrs. Nathan Graham, Mrs. Hortense Raub Burpee, Miss Estelle Burpee, Miss Jane Weldon and Charles Raub formed the family party setting forth for adventure in the tropic land.

Mrs. James Nelson and her daughter, Julia Jean, are biding their time in California until time to sail to Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Matson have picked Arizona and California as their mid-winter vacation playground. On their trip they intend to visit Mrs. Matson's sister, Mrs. Montgomery Lasley of Beverly Hills, Cal.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bogert Schofield Will Entertain at Propylaeum

Guests attending the Propylaeum's monthly Sunday night buffet supper are to be entertained by Mrs. Elizabeth Bogert Schofield's presentation, "Impersonations."

Several parties are to be among the 150 guests and members expected to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Carpenter are to entertain in honor of Miss Marian Olive and her fiancé, John O.

Calvin, Fortville. With them are to be Miss Olive's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar W. Olive; Mr. and Mrs. George S. Olive, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Olive and Scott Olive.

Among others to entertain guests are Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDermott, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Seaton, Mrs. John W. Kern Sr., Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Foltz, Mrs. Edson T. Wood Sr. and Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Taylor.

Tomorrow's sessions are to include a dinner at 1 at the Lincoln, followed by a welcoming address by Miss Isadore O'Hara, and talks by the Rev. Clement Bosler of St. John's church, and the Rev. August R. Fussenegger, diocesan director of charities.

Horse and Cutter Take Librarians on Rounds

"Giddyap" is the urgent command of Mrs. John Pearson Jr. (right) to the hesitant "Dobbin" drawing the cutter. Mrs. Pearson and her sister-in-law, Miss Peggy Pearson, rented the sleigh from Meridian Hills Riding Stables for the afternoon to deliver books from their "Pearson-Cum-To-You" library.

Oil, Cream Helps Keep Nails Nice Every woman who takes pride in her hands is using nail oil or cream, says Ruth Murrin, director of Good Housekeeping Institute.

Products to keep the cuticle soft and pliable have been available for years, but only recently have women become interested in preparations that will keep the nails strong and healthy. Bright polishes called attention to brittleness, breaking, ridging, and other defects, and oil proved helpful to correct them.

Nail oil or cream may be rubbed in or used with an orange stick. But it should not be used just before applying liquid polish, because if you don't get it off—and usually you can not—the polish will not stick. Any way, it is the matrix or root of the nail you want to reach, and applying oil around the cuticle will do more good than simply rubbing it into the nail itself.

MY DAY

By Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON—This morning I was reading the galley proof of the first few chapters of a book called "The Woman Speaker," by Eudora Ramsey Richardson, sent me by Mrs. Geline Bowman, honorary president of the National Professional and Business Women's Clubs. This book, which I hope will be published before long so that women in general can obtain it, brought to my mind certain things we need to think about at the present.

We have been passing laws and taking action in order to meet an emergency. As usually happens in such cases, very few of us have sat down and figured out whether we want to keep on indefinitely with these emergency measures, or whether we want to work toward more final results.

Take the concrete problem of unemployment, which as a by-product has produced discrimination against women, a tendency which we have seen grow in other nations to its natural climax of restricting women in all the fields which for years they have labored to enter. In Germany, I understand, highly trained scientific women are told their minds are of no use to their country, that only their ability to bear children and run a house economically and efficiently is of any real value.

We feel like saying, "it can't happen here," but unless we face the fact that this is a by-product of the great question now before us, we may wake up to find that we have gone the way of other nations which were unable to solve this situation.

Has every human who desires it the right to work? Should not the best brains of our country work on this problem? There are three fundamentals for human happiness—work which will produce at least a minimum of material security, love and faith. These things must be made possible for all human beings, men and women alike.

A. A. U. W. Meeting to Consider Problems of Motion Pictures Motion pictures are to hold the interest of American Association of University Women Monday, with a public meeting devoted to a discussion of screen problems to be held at 2:30 in Crosey Auditorium.

Groups of members are to attend the showing of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Monday night, which has been designated A. A. U. W. night.

P. W. Holaday, Shortridge High School, is to speak at the afternoon meeting on "What Children Learn from Motion Pictures." He is to be introduced by Virgil Stinebaugh, director of Indianapolis junior high schools and member of the board of school commissioners.

Mrs. Walter P. Morton is to review work of the organization's motion picture group and outline future plans. Mrs. John H. Waldo, motion picture group chairman, is to preside.

Guests to Attend Honor guests are to include Mesdames L. G. Hughes, Edward J. Thompson, John Lewis, Carl W. Foltz and N. Taylor Todd.

Mrs. Marvin E. Curle is general arrangements chairman. Guests are to be registered by Mesdames T. Victor Keene, Paul H. Beard, Paul R. Summers, Walter P. Morton and Charles O. McCormick.
