Message to Members

taxes to provide revenues to cover the added cost.

Mr. Roosevelt said that relief expenditures in the present fiscal year would approximate $3,500,000,000. His budget, he said, contemplated expenditure of an amount roughly equal to that total during the 1937 year.

"An appropriation in this amount would be within the limit set by the budget message," he said, "and would in effect provide for the third successive year a reduction in the deficit."

On this basis, he said, he would be justified in requesting a straight WPA appropriation of $2,000,000,000.

"I am, however, not asking this Congress to appropriate $2,000,000,000," he said.

"I am asking only for an appropriation of $1,500,000,000 to the Works Progress Administration. It will be their responsibility to provide work for the destitute unemployed."

No Federal Projects Out

The President made it clear that the whole of the appropriation should go to the Works Progress Administration that makes jobs at a yearly average of $650 a year per man, including "security" wages, and cost of project materials.

Mr. Roosevelt's message clearly ended possibility of new non-Federal public works, for which he allotted $330,000,000 under the current $4,880,000,000 program.

The New Deal, through its 1936-1937 plans, also abandoned slum-clearance and low-rent housing as a work-relief activity. At present, the Public Works Administration is constructing 48 housing projects with $120,000,000.

The President's recommendation for WPA came when the agency, directed by Harry L. Hopkins, was under heavy fire of criticism for alleged partisan politics. Only today, Mr. Hopkins issued a general letter to all state WPA directors banning political activity on all his projects.

Asks for "Blank Check"

The special message was in effect a request for a $1,500,000,000 "blank check" to be spent as Mr. Roosevelt directs through WPA.

Such a form of spending was successfully attacked in both the Senate and House when Congress decided not to appropriate regular government money to continue the Florida ship canal after it had been started with work-relief funds.

In asking the sum of $1,500,000,000 for WPA, Mr. Roosevelt made clear that he believed private industry would have to give jobs to considerable numbers of the idle if the cost was to be held within this limit.

He indicated some doubt as to whether private industry would be able to accomplish this aim without a broad national effort.

Urges Concerted Action

"Frankly," he said, "there is little evidence that large and small employers by individual and uncoordinated action can absorb large numbers of new employees. A vigorous effort on a national scale is necessary by voluntary, concerted action of private industry."

He pointed to the success of the NRA in encouraging re-employment and cited difficulties of achieving any similar success under present conditions.

His request together with those submitted to the Congress for the Civilian Conservation Corps and certain public works will, if acted upon favorably by the Congress, give security during the next fiscal year to those most in need, on condition, however, that private employers hire many of those now on relief rolls.

Repeats Tax Program

Coupled with his demand for relief funds, Mr. Roosevelt took occasion to reiterate his suggested plan of taxes for the purpose of balancing the budget except for relief expenditures.

He said that his statement "as to

VENIZELLOS DIES IN PARIS EXILE AT AGE OF 71

Greek Republican Chief Is Victim of Attack of Grippe.

By United Press

PARIS, March 18.—Eleutherios Venizelos, "The Lion of Crete," Greek republican leader for 40 years, died in exile today.

At 71, his country again a monarchy Venizelos' heart was unable to withstand the strain of a severe attack of grippe and he died at 8 a. m. (2 a. m. Indianapolis time.)

Only two wishes were communicated to those at his bedside—that his countrymen forget their differences and rally under King George for the good of the country, and that he be buried in this native Crete, whose blue waters he had wanted to see again.

Mme. Venizelos—the former Helen Schilizzi, heiress of a Greek family established in England when he married as a widower in 1921—and a son by his marriage were at his bedside, along with other relatives.

Arrangements were started to take his body to Crete for burial, as he wished.

proposals. They are helpless, however, to dominate the situation without the powerful support of Britain and must make the best bargain they can.

Long Arguments Forseen

The result is likely to be weeks of wrangling before a compromise can be worked out which will give France and Belgium adequate guarantees of their safety in place of the moribund Locarno Treaty, and at the same time satisfy German national pride with complete recognition of her sovereignty over German territory.

When that has been accomplished, negotiations for a general European peace agreement—perhaps the 25-year truce suggested by Hitler—may be begun.

The chief stumbling block in the current negotiations is the British proposal for a demilitarized zone on both sides of the border, to be policed by an international force, including British troops. That would mean French withdrawal from their beloved Maginot steel and concrete fortifications. To that the French will not agree.

However, the British insist that the proposal is only for a temporary period, during the course of the negotiations, and when new peace machinery is completed, the French can move back in. There is a bare possibility that the French may be persuaded to accept on that basis.
