

Horsemen 'Go Social' at Dance

700 Attend Association's "Wild Oats" Ball at Columbia Club.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN Society Editor

ONCE a year the Indiana Saddle Horse Association "goes social"; opportunist, too, in the spring when members and friends are being attracted to the horse paths. The "Wild Oats" ball raises the funds for the association's annual fall roundup and provides the money for trophies at the horse shows it encourages.

More than 700 persons attended the party Saturday night at the Columbia Club.

When M. H. Fuller wasn't occupied taking tickets, he talked about two new mounts he and Mrs. Fuller bought in Lexington to add to their string at the Meridian Hills Riding Stables. They purchased two others in Indiana.

Miss Joan Metzger who won the senior class in last year's children's riding tournament at R. H. Brown Stables attended the dance while home for the spring vacation of Wheaton College. She was in a party with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Metzger.

Mrs. Test at Same Table
Mrs. Donald Test sat at the same table. Her white chiffon gown was traced with delicate blue flowers and green leaves. The flare flaring out at the knees was dark blue and the skirt was of the figured chiffon. The crushed dark blue sash joined a large flower marking the décolletage in back.

Mrs. Clayton O. Mogg, another member of the party, attended in a red crepe gown, with a peplum flaring over the hips in the manner of the cap sleeves.

The black and white stripes of Mrs. Paul Lee Hargitt's blouse slanted and joined in a seam down the front. The tiny bow in front terminated the band around the neck, which dipped into a V in back. Her skirt was black.

Mrs. Gregg Wears Black Net
Mrs. Charles Gregg, wife of the association president, was gowned in black net, figured in diamond patterns. The waistline was emphasized by large ashes of roses flowers.

Mrs. Robert Ferriday's black net gown was unusual, too, with tiny squares scattered over it. The sleeves were long and flowing.

Mrs. Maurice L. Mendenhall, wife of the association's first president, favored the new eyelet trim. Her black dinner suit was completed with a white eyelet blouse, with peplum and low pointed back. The short sleeves of the jacket were edged with the white eyelet material.

Meet at Athenaeum
Before Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wenner came to the dance they met Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Warden and Mr. and Mrs. Otto W. Eisenlohr at the Athenaeum.

A rustic fence marked off the entrance to the club foyer. Over the entrance to the ballroom was a checked gingham "horse blanket" with white felt horses' heads and the association name silhouetted against it. Penlights bearing the organization's initials draped the walls of the ballroom.

J. Perry Meek, ball chairman, and Mrs. Meek returned from a few days' visit at Turkey Run to attend.

LADYWOOD TEA ATTRACTS 300
Among the 300 guests attending the Athletic Association tea at Ladywood School yesterday were several out-of-town friends and relatives of the students.

They included the following: Mr. and Mrs. James Cameron, Keokuk, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cannon, Greencastle; Mrs. R. F. Cavenagh, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Farrell and G. M. Madden, Chicago; Mrs. M. C. Weber, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Duncan, Oak Park, Ill.; Mrs. E. F. Fisher, Mrs. Martha Gregory, O. F. Hamlin, Mrs. S. Mowat and daughter Doris, Detroit; F. A. Reitz and family, Evansville; Mrs. C. R. Ryan, Kokomo; J. R. Tolle and mother, Mattoon, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Meyers, Richmond, Indiana; and Joseph Meyers, Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Teeters, Hagerstown.

GIRL IS ENGAGED TO MINNESOTAN
Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McDorman have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary O. McDorman, to Stephen Arneson, St. Paul, Minn. The ceremony is to be read in April and the couple is to live in San Juan, Porto Rico.

Mrs. O. P. Livengood is to entertain with a party Wednesday for the bride-to-be and Mrs. Will H. Smith is to be hostess at a date to be announced later.

Mrs. R. G. Pettit and Mrs. J. V. Dillon entertained Friday night at the home of the former with a personal shower and bridge party for Miss McDorman.

600 TO ATTEND STEAK AFFAIR
More than 600 members are expected to attend the forty-second annual beefsteak dinner at the Columbia Club Thursday, John K. Ruckelshaus, entertainment chairman, announced today. The principal speech is to be made by Charles M. Newcomb.

The dinner is given in honor of members whose names have been on the club's books 25 years or more.

Mrs. H. S. Lockard and Mrs. Hamilton Row, 1415 N. Dearborn-st., are at the Barabon-Pleza in New York.

Orchestra Women Don Tuxedos for Concert Rehearsal

1 Miss Helen Dauner, Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra cellist, worries more about a shiny nose than a wing collar as she rehearses for tomorrow's concert. 2. But the collar is a decided interference for Miss Roberta Trent (right). Miss Louise Dauner watches her fellow musician attempt to solve the problem. 3. "Oh, for a man to unravel the mystery of a bow tie," laments Miss Mary Ann Kullmer (left) and Mrs. Alma Miller Lentz.

Symphony Director Is Adamant on Suit Order

Ferdinand Schaefer, Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra director, has been reading the women's fashion news.

He confessed as much when he suggested to the 18 women in his orchestra that they replace their black evening dresses with tuxedo suits.

"They are stylish," he suggested, when the women complained a little over sacrificing their femininity. The women musicians in choosing their new suits have shown that they know something about men's fashions.

They selected navy blue instead of black, and navy blue material for evening and tuxedo suits is the last minute decree for masculine style.

Navy blue is favored by tailors because it appears "black" than black "under artificial light."

Mr. Schaefer has promised a surprise for the women when they make their first appearance in their new attire tomorrow night at the concert at the Murat.

The feminine players admitted that the variety of the black evening dresses they have worn has distracted from a uniform appearance. For a long time Mr. Schaefer has disapproved of one player appearing in a long sleeved dress and another in short sleeves, with skirts of varying lengths.

The suits all are uniform length. And that pertains to the cello players. "They are too tight," they complain.

Mr. Schaefer consoles them, "You will become accustomed to them."

"The coats are tight," the violinists bemoan, "and wing collars are a nuisance."

Mr. Schaefer only smiles as he replies, "Men have the same problem."

TURNING GREEN

The Methodist Hospital surgical department has turned green—not from envy, jealousy or ptomaine poisoning. It's a spring fashion trend.

Sheets, table covers, surgeons' gowns, masks, walls, signs and ceilings are undergoing the color change. It started about a year ago when Mrs. Florence Sayce, surgical supervisor, returned from an inspection of eastern hospitals. "They all were using colors in the surgical wards—grays, blues, greens and blacks. It seems to have a good psychological effect."

"I never used to care for the color, but I'm certainly learning to like it," she confessed.

Pleasant Voice Sign of Charm, Writer Asserts

BY CYRENA VAN GORDON Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Star Written for NEA Service

HAVE you ever listened to your self talk—really listened?

It may be a shock, but try it. A well-modulated pleasant voice that enunciates distinctly and really has something to say is one of the invariable marks of charm and good breeding.

Both Katharine Cornell and Helen Hayes owe a large measure of their success as outstanding actresses to the rich, vibrant quality of their voices. Radio stars, with the exception of those who perform on some instrument, are almost entirely dependent upon their voices to put personality across to audiences. The warm friendliness of his voice is one of President Roosevelt's assets.

But, you do not have to be an actress, a radio star, or a public figure of any kind in order to need a pleasing voice. And you don't have to have a teacher to help you improve your tones. Your own ear, if you will give it a chance, will guide you in detecting and eliminating shrill and raucous sounds.

Have Something to Say
In conversation, the important thing is to have something to say—then to say it in a voice pleasantly modulated and in distinct and readily understood speech.

Don't mumble, don't hesitate and stammer. Don't make it necessary for your listeners to ask apologetically what you said. You are the one, under those circumstances, who should apologize. Say what you have to say clearly and quietly. It will be just as forceful, perhaps more so, than if you shout.

Reading your newspaper out loud to your family, if they will listen to you, is, incidentally, one of the best methods I know for improving your speaking voice. It gives you an opportunity to practice diction and clear enunciation. You might even try some of the time-honored tongue-twisters, such as "Peter Piper picked a peck of purple pip-pins," or "She sells sea shells."

If your conversation is limited to trivialities about your own or your neighbor's daily life, it is time for you to get some new interests. It isn't necessary to read Shakespeare, listen to Bach and go to picture galleries to be interesting.

There are interesting items about every person you meet; in every conversation you hear; in every paper, magazine and book you read; in fact, in every experience and interest in your life. It is your awareness of the fascinating things about you and your ability to recount them that will make you a good conversationalist.

One of the most interesting talkers I have ever known was bedridden. She never left her cottage on the edge of our town, and seldom her room, but she had such an avid interest in life that she brought to every conversation a lively play of anecdote and illuminating comment.

Being a good conversationalist implies being a good listener and having the ability to draw others out. Being a good listener is, in the opinion of many persons, more important to charm than being a good talker.

Pretense Is Error
Another thing, you never have to pretend that you know something you don't. You are sure to get into deep water if you do. And you are much more likely to charm beholders if you acknowledge your inexperience and say, "Won't you please tell me about it?"

In the "Clinging Vine," a play that had a run on Broadway a few seasons ago, the old-fashioned grandmother tells her business-girl granddaughter that she needs just three conversational adjuncts to prove attractive to men: "I don't know," "Do go on" and "Aren't you wonderful?"

Suitors require, I think, considerably more than these not-so-simple phrases in these modern, highly competitive days, but the point made by the old gentleman is important in social interest. You must really show an interest in the other person's activities and interests, give him (or her) a chance to display knowledge and air views. And you have to make them think that they are, indeed, "wonderful."

Irene Castle's "Orphanage"
Irene Castle, the famous dancer who introduced hairbobbing to respectable women, has to the nth degree the faculty of drawing out comparative strangers and letting them entertain themselves by simply letting them talk about things that interest them. She almost never discusses her own interests—not even her beloved dogs.

If you were to call at her canine orphanage in Deerfield, Ill., which she has christened "Orphanage of the Storm," you'll probably spend your time talking about your own favorite pooch and his tricks rather than about the 200 dogs she cares for in her institution.

Claudette Colbert is another glamorous individual who has a way of making anybody she comes in contact with feel that they are important and "wonderful." She smiles a great deal, nods encouragingly and knows how to ask leading questions. This charming young actress is a simple, unaffected person, with none of the airs of some popular stars. Her favorite mode of travel, incidentally, is on a tramp steamer where she can wear old clothes, read plenty of books and not have to be social.

COUPLE MARKS WEDDING DAY
Mr. and Mrs. J. Carl Hanby are receiving congratulations on their wedding anniversary. They entertained with a dinner in its observance Saturday night at the Marott.

MY DAY

By Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON—Saturday was gusty and windy and I spent the morning indoors. I had that delightful sense of complacency which comes to you when you have time to do things in a leisurely fashion, and there really is no need to do anything away from home.

Gov. Winant of the Social Security Board, and Gov. and Mrs. Lawrence Cramer of the Virgin Islands, came to lunch. Having been to the Virgin Islands it is interesting to hear of their progress. When I was there the people were so fearful of what the government was going to do, and now they seem so pleased with the results of what has been done.

More people are getting work, wages are a little higher, and as is always the case, living standards are going up with more economic security.

The hotel on St. Thomas, which I thought was going to be perfectly charming, has evidently turned out to be much as I had expected, for they tell me they have turned away more than 100 people this winter. It has a perfectly lovely view and was built around the old Beard Tower, which lends it a bit of romance. Some day I hope to go back and see for myself what has happened, for it is rather satisfying to view a problem of such a size in which results can be seen fairly soon.

I felt in sympathy with King Edward VIII the other day when he remarked that our civilization was a trifle topsy-turvy. What a comparison between the super-luxurious ship which will bring people across the Atlantic and the slums of Glasgow! The solution of so many problems lies too far in the future to face even a beginning.

Yesterday afternoon I walked down to the Lincoln Memorial and completely around its gallery so that I could view the Potomac in every direction. From there I went to the hospital to see Col. Howe, and then home to a quiet dinner and an evening of reading.

This morning the decision was made to start off on our journey southward. We leave at 1. My own part of this trip will be short. But I am very glad that conditions are so much improved that my husband is going to be able to get a brief holiday.

Peace Group Is to Meet
Meeting at the same time as the Young Women's Christian Association, business and professional groups throughout the United States and Canada, local women are to gather at the dinner hour tomorrow for a program on "A Will to Peace."

Following dinner at 6:30, a mock jury trial for peace is to be held with Miss Kathryn Bowley as prosecuting attorney, Miss Marian Davis as attorney for the defense, and Robert Lee Brokenburr as judge.

The following are to be witnesses: Misses Marjorie Hamilton, Maenell Hamlin, Corinne Allen, Isabelle Haessig, Winifred Koon and Mesdames Bertha Crump, Imogene Huddleston and Ethel Crawford.

The program committee is headed by Miss Nellie Sue Orr with Mrs. Louise Brown, Mrs. Crump and Miss Mildred Kellum, as assistants.

Linen Frock
Fine natural-colored Irish linen is used to make this simple sports frock with two rows of buttons down the front of the bodice and a belt of black patens. The fabric has a rough, homespun-like texture.

Bride-Elect Party Guest
Mrs. Edmund F. Riddell is to give a party Thursday for Miss Josephine Jackson, who is to be married to her son, Thomas, Pogle Riddell, Saturday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Miss Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond D. Jackson, also is to attend the party which Miss Mary Tobin and Miss Kathryn Lewis are to give tomorrow night at Miss Lewis' home. Miscellaneous gifts are to be presented to the bride-to-be by the guests.

The wedding party is to rehearse for the wedding at St. Paul's Episcopal Church Friday night. The wedding, at 10:30, is to be followed by a breakfast at the Columbia Club.

Among out-of-town guests to be present at the ceremony are Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Jackson, Michigan City; Emmett Jackson Jr., Miss Ann Berry, Miss Kathryn Farquhar and Donald Wilson, all of Greencastle, and Miss Ruth Akerman, Lebanon.
