

SANDERS' TALK GIVES NO HINT OF AMBITIONS

Coolidge Secretary Talks to 300 Members of Local Bar.

BY JOHN MURPHY
Political prognosticators today were as much in the dark concerning the intentions or ambitions of Everett Sanders as they were yesterday. The former Coolidge secretary talked for 45 minutes last night to 300 members of the local Bar Association, but made only a few references that might be interpreted as bordering upon partisanship.

One of these came in the opening moments of his address, when he asserted there is much agitation in the country to deprive judges of the right to pass on constitutionality of laws. Concerning this Mr. Sanders said:

"We must have the judicial branch of the government to serve as umpire in matters of constitutionality, since neither the House nor the Senate will consider such questions, and since judges provide a restriction on Legislatures regarding the improper use of power."

Confines Self to Subject
Mr. Sanders confined most of the remainder of his speech to his subject, "Reminiscences of Official Life in Washington." Hubert Hickam, Bar Association president, presided.

The biggest task of a President, he said, is the selection of his official family. On some occasions, he said, the Senate has twisted its power of confirmation so that, in reality, it has made the appointments.

Mr. Sanders declared that Mr. Coolidge gave much thought to his appointments and was a firm believer in economy. He humorously recalled the release of Mr. Coolidge's "I do not choose to run," statement to newspaper men at Rapid City, S. D., in the summer of 1927.

The late President, Mr. Sanders said, locked all the correspondents in a room, personally handed each writer a slip of paper bearing the statement, forbade them the use of his telephone, and then nonchalantly opened the door and pointed to a telephone station half a mile away, to which the only access was on foot.

Reserve Was Characteristic
One of Mr. Coolidge's greatest characteristics was his reserve, he concluded.

"I think no President had greater reserve," he said. "His emphasis was in understatement rather than exaggeration. His sentences usually were short. Anglo-Saxon words had the preference. He had long been in a position of power before becoming President, and had become accustomed to having his words carry weight. He used his words to carry weight, and not as a vehicle of mere conversation. Most of his utterances were of his own composition."

Following the speech seven attorneys were elected to membership in the association. They were John M. Kelley, James A. Watson, Forrest A. Harness, Phillips A. Irwin, Thomas M. Scanlon, Albert M. Thayer and Joseph M. Howard.

LUCKY STRIKE CIGARETTES

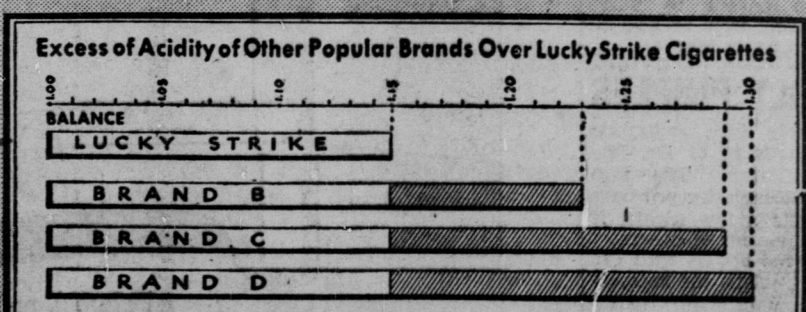

A LIGHT SMOKE OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

Although the constituents of cigarette paper are, in themselves, unsurpassed in purity and wholesomeness, it may, if crudely fabricated, contribute a marked degree of irritation to cigarette smoke. Cigarette paper not only envelops the tobacco in forming a cigarette, but through its physical properties may exercise a favorable or detrimental influence upon the products of combustion.

Paper for Lucky Strike Cigarettes is made under our own supervision. Samples of each lot of cigarette paper manufactured are subjected to the most rigid analysis before it is used in making Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

Luckies are less acid

Recent chemical tests show that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.
