whom Gov. Hoffman would certainly have deposed if he had proved errors in conduct of the Lindbergh case, may keep his job now but certainly has in the Governor an irreconcilable enemy. Warden Mark O. Kimberling, it is reported, was Gov. Hoffman's choice to succeed Col. Schwarzkopf. His future is in doubt now with Col. Schwarzkopf's.

Lindberghs to Stay Abroad

The Lindberghs are in England, exiled by the force of the Hauptmann case. Their plans never are made public, but it was understood that they probably will remain there a long time.

Hauptmann's own personal record was the only element with a definite end. Mrs. Hauptmann had not made funeral arrangements, but she was expected to seek as much privacy as possible. Since Hauptmann's body will be cremated, as he requested in his last few hours, there probably will be only a short religious ceremony at a mausoleum crypt.

Hauptmann advised his wife to remain in the United States, at least for a time. She did not reveal what she planned.

Wendel 'Kidnaping' Probed

By United Press

NEW YORK, April 4.—New York authorities laid a groundwork today for kidnaping charges against three or more men that may keep the name of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and the "unsolved" mysteries of the Lindbergh kidnaping, alive in the courts for many months. District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Kings County (Brooklyn) intimated that an investigation of the "confession" of Paul Wendel, disbarred Trenton attorney, that he kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., would create a scandal high in New Jersey politics.

There was indication that Federal Agents had entered the case.

He asked New Jersey authorities to send Wendel, still held without bail in Trenton under murder, kidnaping, and embezzlement charges, to New York City today to repeat his charges that his confession was extorted by torture. He also "invited" Chief Detective Ellis Parker of Burlington County, N. J., close friend of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, to come with Wendel to explain how Wendel came into his custody last week.

By United Press

NEW YORK, April 4.—Dr. John F. (Jafie) Condon, whose testimony played a major role in convicting Bruno Richard Hauptmann of kidnaping and murder, had "no comment" to make today on Hauptmann's execution.

The radio to which Condon usually listens almost constantly in evenings in his Bronx home, was turned off several hours last night before Hauptmann died. When the executioner threw the electric chair switch in Trenton, "Jafie" was immersed in a book in a deep arm chair in his pleasant living room.

A few minutes later a friend telephoned another member of the family that Hauptmann was dead. The educator to whom Hauptmann had sent word that "God will judge between us" sent out word that he would say nothing more about the case and a short time later lights in the house were extinguished.

Mrs. Hauptmann Secludes
Herself With Friends
After Ordeal.

By Robert Musel

NEW YORK, April 4.—Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann, made a widow by the electric chair, took refuge in the home of friends today to escape the morbid curiosity of the public.

With her was her baby Manfred, who will be taught that his father died a sacrificial offering to the cause for a solution of the Lindbergh mystery.

"Oh my poor Richard," she cried last night. "What will become of my Bub! (Manfred). . . God, why did you let them do this to an innocent man?"

Beats Bed in Agony

Then she sobbed—hoarse, throat-tearing sobs. She clenched her fists and beat the bed in agony. Her eyes were red and swollen and tears poured steadily down cheeks.

"I'm Proud of Him"

Her faith in his husband is unshaken, she said. "I know that he has passed away like a Christian who believes in his God and his Savior. He has not passed out of life as a kidnaper or murderer but as an honest man. I feel not ashamed but proud of him. I know the truth will be known and that his innocence will come to light. Therefore I can rest assured and be at peace with my God."

"Even at this time I know that the murderers who have put him as an innocent man to death will never find peace as long as they have not repented before man and before God."

"They have taken from me my faithful husband and a loving father from my child."

'My Son Is Martyr'

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press)

KAMENZ, Germany, April 4.—Old Frau Paulina Hauptmann sat red-eyed from weeping on the edge of her bed in her tiny home today, mumbling over and over: "My son is a martyr. The Americans had to find a scapegoat to blame for this terrible crime."

She fell silent for a time and then said: "My son is such a good man—he spoke of him as if he lived still. They should have known him. Then they would have been convinced of his innocence, just as I am convinced of it every day."

Lindberghs Silent

WEALD, England, April 4.—A village policeman, in plain clothes for the occasion, was the only person in sight early today, here where Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and their baby son Jon sought refuge.

Lights in Long Barn, the centuries old home which the Lindberghs have leased, went out before midnight. The village was in darkness when Hauptmann died, a little before 2 a. m. British time.

The scene above shows the path of destruction cut through part of the city of 7000 in habitants. At least 18 were known dead in Cordelle, with 500 injured and 1000 homeless. Property damage exceeded $1,000,000. Next greatest loss was at Greensboro, N. C., where 12 were killed and property damage passed $1,000,000. Other deaths were reported in South Carolina, Florida, and Alabama.

Heaviest damage in the tornado that struck Cordelle, was caused by destruction of two substantial brick school buildings. Ruins of one are shown above. Only the fact that the storm struck at dawn instead of later in the day prevented greater loss of life. More than 1500 students normally attend the two schools.
