Back Yard Gardening

All Spare Time Should Be Utilized in Fight on Weeds and Insects

This is the sixth of a series of articles on gardening by budget.

BY PROF. C. H. NISSELY
Extension Horticulturist, N. J. College of Agriculture and Experiment Station, Rutgers University

THE more time you spend in the garden, the greater will be your return. There is always something to do in the garden: the season does not end until the ground freezes over.

First plan your garden on paper, drawing it to scale if possible. With the aid of best experience, a good seed catalog or a garden bulletin from your state agricultural college, you will have a lot of satisfaction in planning your garden, deciding on the varieties, distances and continuation of successive cropping, so that your fall garden may be as valuable, if not more so, than your spring or midsummer garden.

Cultivation is very important, not only in keeping down weeds, which compete with vegetables, but also in keeping the soil loose, and allowing air to gain access to the roots.

Cultivate the garden fairly deeply, but guard against cutting off feeding roots.

INSECTS must be controlled. The most effective material to use for insects which eat the leaves, or are located above ground, is a pyrethrum dust or liquid spray. Pyrethrum is not poisonous to human beings.

During prolonged dry weather, irrigation is very beneficial. Water in the soil is necessary to dissolve the nutrients and make them available for plant use. Without moisture plants can not grow.

Mulching the garden soil is recommended. A mulch is nothing more than a covering over the ground. It may consist of straw manure, salt hay, reed grass or even paper.

The mulch allows moisture to reach the plants during rainstorms and retards evaporation. It will discourage weeds and keep tomatoes, peppers and eggplants clean. Greater yields can be expected from mulched plants.

HARVEST peas, beans and other crops before they become too old and lose their good quality. After harvesting the peas and beans, spade under the tops. These tops provide organic material for the soil. A few days later, seeds or plants of a fall crop may be planted.

The gardener who has especially high-producing plants of tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, or other garden crop should save some of the seed.
