FINNISH EXHIBIT REFLECTS LIFE OF INHABITANTS

10,000 Pieces Shown in Art Display on View at Blocks.

The every-day life of the Finnish people is reflected in the wood blocks, glassware and handicraft included in the Finnish industrial art exhibit which opened this morning at William H. Block & Co.

The exhibit of more than 10,000 individual pieces is traveling about the United States in the interest of better international understanding. It is to be at Block's through April 15, according to Louis Bonyhard, American director of the Finnish art exhibit in the United States. Ernest L. Knuti is exhibit conductor.

Finland regards its wood carvings most highly, Mr. Bonyhard explains. Each unit is carved from one solid block of wood and the figures are drawn from living models.

Hunting Scenes Shown

Included in the group of 100 pieces is work by Lepola, one of the foremost wood sculptors in Scandinavia. Hunting scenes and scenes from the Finnish Epos, the Kalevala are portrayed by the wood pictures.

The 600 pieces of crystal glassware are different in design and shape. Mr. Bonyhard explains: "Finland has a fine sand which makes the production of very fine glass possible. When touched the pieces have a silvery tone lasting 60 seconds."

Hand-woven textiles show both the old and the modern Finnish designs and some of the tapestries are from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The families living in the smaller towns and villages weave their own rugs for their homes. Samples of their handicraft and looms are on view.

2000 Pieces in Pottery Display

The pottery exhibit includes more than 2000 vases, bowls, jars, lunch-son and dinner sets and ovenware. According to Mr. Knuti, these articles were not designed for commercial trade but were created for the decoration of homes.

Every Finnish home has one or more old pewter piece, perhaps dating as far back as the fifteenth century. The modern and the old pieces are hand chased and finished with a sheen resembling sterling silver.

Laplanders' Skill Shown

Of particular interest to the young people are the handicraft pieces of the Laplanders. Included are shoes and lifelike copies of Lapland dogs from reindeer skin and horns.

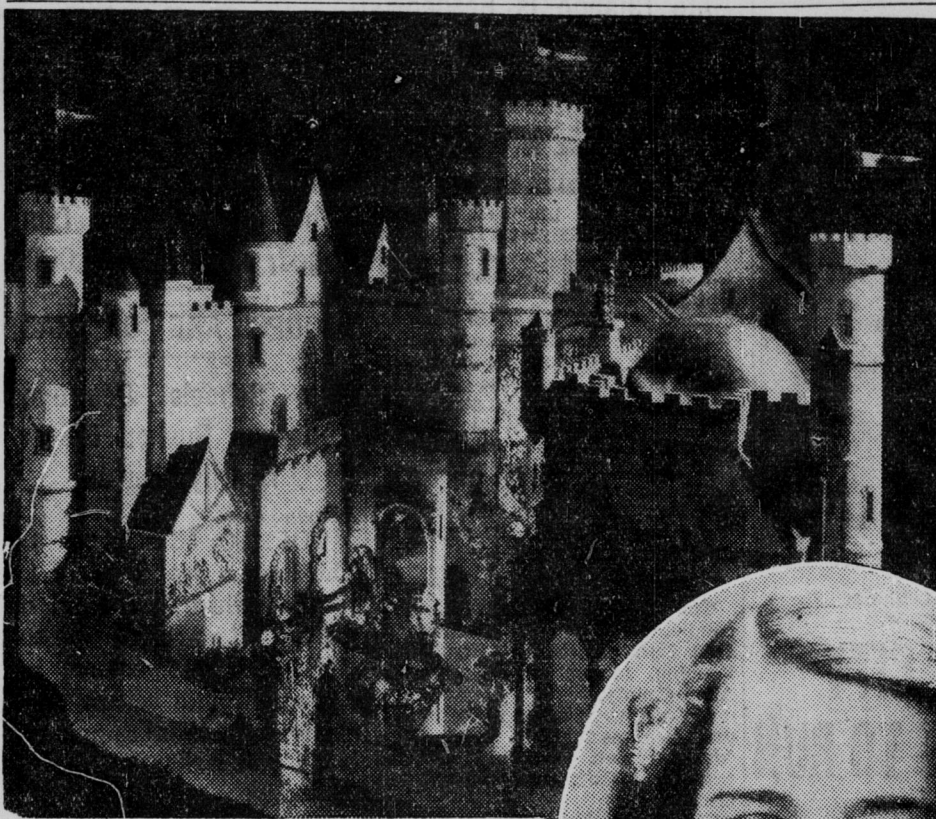

Forty-nine dolls dressed in costumes typical of various sections of the country also are shown.

The official opening at 2 is to be broadcast over Station WFBB. Preceding the formal opening a group of social and civic leaders is to be entertained at luncheon in Block's auditorium.

The exhibit started on tour in October and is to continue until June. It is to be shown next in Louisville, Ky., and Kansas City, Mo.

Townsend Club to Meet

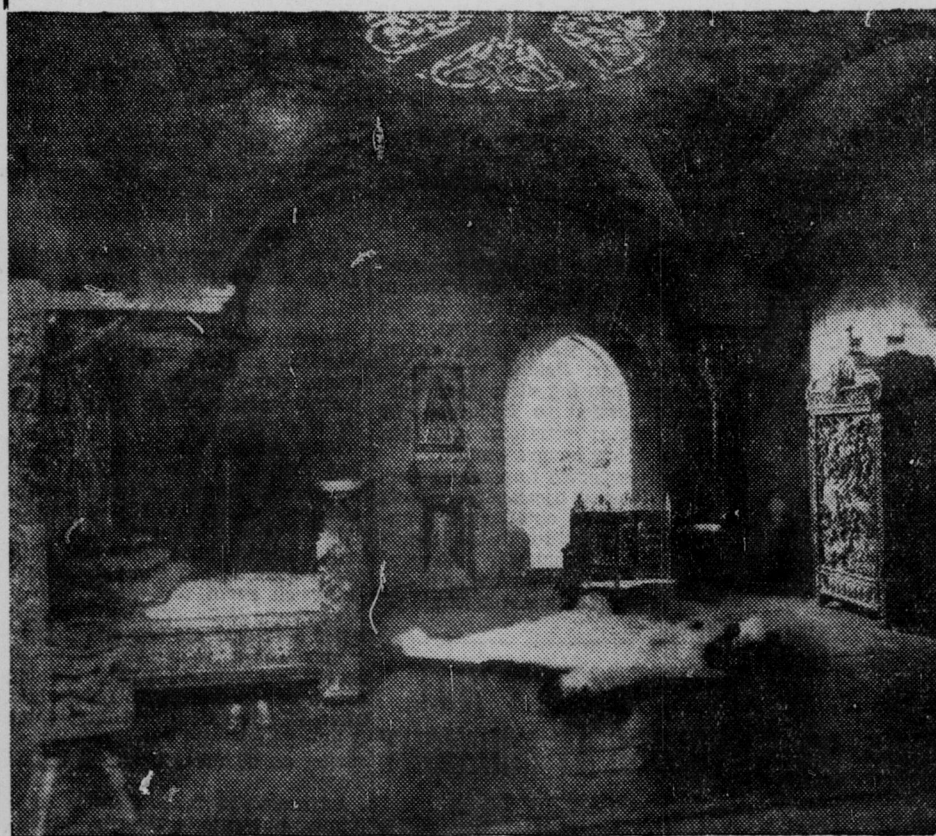

Northeastern Townsend Old Age Pension Club No. 10 is to meet at 7:30 tonight at Park-av and St. Clair-st.

Colleen Moore, who, with aid of world-famous artists, created this most exquisite and costly Doll House.

Young and old alike will marvel at the treasury of gold and precious stones resplendent with 2,000 miniature furnishings. A tiny organ with 100 keys each one-sixteenth of an inch wide. A diamond chandelier lit by electric bulbs no larger than seed pearls. Stamp-size books by famous authors, readable only through a magnifying glass. Gold inlaid floors, sparkling fountains, a museum in itself—nine feet square and twelve feet high. Today it stands truly as one of the wonders of the world. Too beautiful, too fantastic for words to describe. And the proceeds go to help crippled children everywhere.

BEDCHAMBER OF THE FAIRY PRINCE

Done in enamel, this room is furnished with a collection of Chinese Mesh Screens and golden tables and wardrobes of great antiquity. The Polar Bear Rug is made of an ermine skin. A Los Angeles taxidermist worked months to make the head and snarling realistic bear perfect.

DOCTORS OPEN DISEASE STUDY COURSES HERE

Dr. Ralph Major to Address Physicians at 8 Tonight.

Doctors from all sections of the state today enrolled in the post-graduate course being held under joint sponsorship of the Indiana State Medical Association and the Indiana University medical school, and attended opening classes at the Indiana University medical center.

Clinics in urology, obstetrics, pediatrics and gastro-intestinal diseases occupied the physicians this morning. The round of clinics and discussions is to continue throughout the afternoon.

Dr. Ralph Major, University of Kansas professor of medicine, is to speak at 8 this evening in the medical building auditorium on "Hippo-cratic Medicine." He is author of a widely used medical textbook and an authority on the history of medicine.

Tomorrow the following subjects are to be taken up: Dermatology, medicine, surgery, ear, nose, throat, urology, pediatrics, continued fevers, gynecology, benign lesions, treatment of functional uterine bleeding, headache as a symptom and a clinico-pathological conference. Dr. Max Minor Peet, professor of neuro-surgery at the University of Michigan, is to speak at 8 in the auditorium.

Dr. Peet has perfected an operation for the amelioration of persistent high blood pressure in young adults. By dividing certain autonomic nerves, a lower pressure is produced which may alleviate the patient and prevent complications from arising. Dr. Peet has been honored by schools in this country and abroad for his accomplishments. The Wednesday and Thursday afternoon and evening programs are to be sponsored by the Indiana State Medical Association.
