

PROBERS LIST GIFTS TO FIGHT ON NEW DEAL

Relatively Small Group of Business Men Revealed as Chief Backers.

BY RUTH FINNEY
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A small group of business men, including two du Ponts, is financing most of the organizations that are actively opposing policies of the New Deal, Senate Lobby Committee records showed today.

Irene du Pont gave $10,000 to the Crusaders, Inc., $5000 of which was to finance broadcasts hostile to New Deal policies. He gave $85,750 to the American Liberty League, $100 to the Sentinels of the Republic, $50 to the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, sponsored by John Henry Kirby, and $1400 to the Minute Men and Women of Today.

Lamont du Pont gave $1000 to the Crusaders, $10,000 to the Liberty League, $1000 to the New York State Economic Council, $3000 to the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, $2000 to Repeal Associates, $5000 to the Farmers Independence Council, a consistent opponent of AAA; $1000 to the American Wild Life Institute, $500 to Women Investors of America, an organization active in opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn bill last year; $250 to the Council for Moderation, and $2000 to the Pennsylvania Protection Bureau.

A. B. Echols, an official of several du Pont companies, gave $75 to the Crusaders, and also contributions to other organizations hostile to the New Deal.

Others Listed by Probers

Others listed by the committee as contributing to two or more such organizations were H. M. Addinsell of Chase Harris Forbes Corp. and Cities Service Co.; George H. Baker, New York; Alfred E. Hamill, Chicago; George H. Houston of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Also Edward F. Hutton, formerly of General Foods; F. A. Merrick, president of Westinghouse Electric; E. M. Morris and John A. Morris, South Bend, Ind.; J. Howard Pew, president, Sun Oil Co.; Frank Purnell, president, Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.; John M. Schiff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors; J. H. Van Alstyne, president, Otis Elevator Co., and E. T. Weir, of Weirton Steel Co.

On another list of persons contributing to a fund to finance the Crusaders' current program of broadcasts were Henry M. Dawes, Walter C. Teagle, Eugene Grace, Irene Jackson Sloan, William S. Innis, Edwin L. Webster and many of those included in the earlier list.

Metcalf Largest Donor

The largest single contributor to the national fund was R. B. Metcalf of the Providence Metcalfs, who is New England manager for the Crusaders.

The committee pressed Fred G. Clark, national commander of the Crusaders, who does their broadcasting, to learn whether he had ever disclosed to his listeners that his broadcasts were being financed in large part by "Mr. du Pont and his gang."

Mr. Clark said he didn't think it was important, and didn't think the people cared. "People buy du Pont products," he said. "If they didn't like him they wouldn't do that."

Mr. Clark also argued that his organization was not trying to influence legislation, although excerpts from his broadcasts read into the record showed opposition to several New Deal measures.

Grilled on Utility Gifts

Committee members also read Mr. Clark a statement from one of his talks saying he had not received a dollar from any utility company, and would have returned it if he had.

"But you did receive $200 from Mr. Addinsell of Cities Service?" asked Senator Hugo L. Black, listing other donations from persons connected with the utility interests.

Mr. Clark insisted that he still believed his statement true, and Mr. Black told him that "any one familiar with public affairs knows power company contributions are made not by the companies themselves but by their officers because of regulations of state utility commissions."

Ball, Irwin Listed

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, April 9.—Hoosier contributors to the Crusaders included George Ball, Muncie manufacturer and Republican national committeeman, $6500; and Will G. Irwin, Columbus capitalist, $300.

It Wouldn't Be So Bad if All Dog Houses Were Like This

Former Bank's Quarters Leased by Welfare Body

Department to Move Into Space at 123 E. Market-st. About May 1, Baker Announces.

Marion County's Welfare Department is to move May 1 into the quarters formerly occupied by the J. F. Wild Bank, 123 E. Market-st., Joel A. Baker, county welfare director, announced today.

MUTINY CHARGES MAY FOLLOW MARINE PROBE

"Intolerable" Insubordination in Merchant Service Reported.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Commerce Department officials today scrutinized several hundred cases of minor insubordination aboard American merchant vessels with a view to relieving a situation described as becoming "intolerable."

Officials of the Steamboat Inspection Service were undecided as to procedure in the 500 cases reported during the last year. Charges of mutiny can be brought against insubordinate merchant sailors.

Joseph B. Weaver, director of the service, said the unprecedented insubordination among American sailors was interrupting service to an extent that was becoming "intolerable."

Socialist Leader to Speak

William Getzel, South Bend, organizer for the Socialist Party of Indiana, Inc., is to be the principal speaker at a meeting at 8 o'clock in 308 Holliday Building.

Approximately 10,000 feet of space is to be available in the building, now known as the 123 E. Market Building, leased at a yearly rental of $7200 from Mark D. Griffin, building manager, Mr. Baker said.

The lease was signed on behalf of the county by John S. Newhouse, Board of Commissioners president, Commissioner Dow W. Vorhies and Charles A. Grossart, county auditor.

Space outside of the Courthouse was sought at the suggestion of Circuit Judge Earl R. Cox, when he appointed the new county welfare board last week, in an effort to divorce the department from politics.

The board, composed of L. Ert Black, the Rev. Linn A. Tripp, F. O. Belzer, Mrs. Margaret Ruddell and Mrs. Marie E. Woolfing, is to administer old-age pensions, pensions for the blind, the Board of Children's Guardians Home and have charge of dependent children in the country.

The new offices will not be open before May 1 as Federal money to help pay the pensions and maintain the Guardians' Home will not be available until that time, the director stated.

That expression about being in the dog house probably will have to be changed. In fact, if all dog houses looked like the one shown above they probably would be pleasant places of relaxation until the storm passed.

Seriously, this is the architect's drawing of the proposed new city dog pound which is to cost $25,000. Great improvement is included in the building in comparison to the antiquated housing facilities now in use on Pendleton Pike.

As soon as the funds are appropriated, construction is expected to be started, and the City Council will have moved a step toward its construction.

STREET LIGHTING RATE IN HUNTINGTON SOARS

Works Board Boosts Price On Advice of New Official.

HUNTINGTON, April 9.—The street lighting rate in Huntington today was tripled by the Works Board.

Acting upon the recommendation of S. Perry Hull, new waterworks superintendent, the board increased the 1 1/4 cent street lighting rate to 4 cents per kilowatt hour.

The electric light department draws its revenues for this service from the street lighting fund.

Indiana Business Income Tops Farm Return, Claim

82 Per Cent Provided by Industry, 11 Per Cent by Agriculture, George Starr Declares.

Despite the fact that Indiana is considered a farming state, 82 per cent of the income in the state is derived from business, according to Prof. George Starr, Indiana University business research bureau director.

Prof. Starr made a breakdown on state income figures at a dinner of the Marketing Research Club at the Washington last night. Of the remaining 18 per cent of state income, 11 per cent come from agricultural pursuits, he said, and 7 per cent from professional and miscellaneous groups.

Other speakers were C. W. Barker, Indiana University professor of marketing, and Herman B. Wells, dean of the Indiana University school of business administration.

They stressed the need for more complete and accurate information that would enable business men to make charges as they are necessary. The university will assist in solving problems of groups and trade associations, lending its entire staff to the work, they asserted.

Allen H. Ware, Indianapolis, was elected president of the club, succeeding Harry B. Marsh, Hagerstown. Other officers named were Dr. M. G. Briedenstein, vice president, and Harry Brittain, secretary-treasurer.

KITCHEN PLANS ARE DESCRIBED TO ARCHITECTS

Home Building to Be Active During Next Five Years, Speaker Says.

State architects today are reflecting on the newest lighting trends and methods of designing kitchens after the third annual dinner of the Society of Architects, which was held in L. S. Ayres & Co.'s tearoom last night. Lee Burns is president of the society.

"Light is now a versatile medium, and two new devices, the vest-pocket light meter and the visibility meter, measure the exact amount of light required," Willard C. Brown of the General Electric Co., told the gathering, composed of architects and representatives of L. S. Ayres & Co.

"This exact measurement has never before been possible," Mr. Brown said, "and it means that our eyes are going to receive much better treatment in the future."

Calls Kitchen "Mechanical Room"

Mr. Brown illustrated his talk with a series of colored slides showing the contrast between new and old methods of lighting. He stressed particularly the need for making lighting units a functional part of building design and pointed out examples by means of slides.

I. W. Clark, of the Westinghouse Electric Co., followed Mr. Brown with a talk on kitchen planning. "The kitchen is a purely mechanical room," he said, "and has only three main divisions, the refrigeration unit, the cleaning unit or sink, and the stove unit. The housewife is kitchen-conscious, and a well-planned kitchen sells or rents a house."

Slides were used by Mr. Clark to illustrate the properly planned kitchen. He discussed four plans, the L, the U, the broken L and the individual center plans. The U type is the best of these, he said, but whichever plan is used, it is always

THIEVES LOOT HOMES OF CASH AND CLOTHES

Three Victims Report Losses Totalling Nearly $400.

Police searched today for thieves who looted three homes last night. Lowry Woodson, 54, reported an envelope containing $200 in cash and a check for $11.75 was stolen from a hiding place in his home, 130 Koehne-st.

A burglar carried off a traveling bag and $100 worth of clothes from 648 N. Sherman-dr. home of Mrs. Mura LeVally. Mrs. Eunice Bradway, 35, found her home, 4317 E. Washington-st., ransacked and an overnight bag, gold watch and some cigarette holders, with a total value of $50, missing.

BODY IS UNIDENTIFIED

Police Seek Relatives of Man Found Dead in Vacant House.

Police today sought to identify the body of a man found yesterday afternoon in a vacant house at 216 N. East-st. A name found on a voter registration card in his pocket was Judd or Judge Daniels, 65, of 128 N. New Jersey-st. The New Jersey-st. address also is a vacant house. Death apparently was due to natural causes. The body was in the city morgue.

necessary to place the sink between the refrigerator and the stove. He predicted that home building would be the best construction field for the next five years.

Charles Davis, Toastmaster
After dinner, the guests went through the Colleen Moore Doll House.

Charles Davis, Ayres' advertising manager, acted as toastmaster and chairman. Theodore B. Griffith, vice president of the store, spoke on the necessity for the store and architects to work in close cooperation to please the ultimate consumer.

Mr. Burns spoke briefly on the professional usefulness of the annual dinner and expressed the thanks of the society to Mr. Griffith and his associates for their cooperation.

About 41 persons, of whom 28 were architects, were present at the dinner.
