JULIETTA MUCK TRACT CHANGED INTO PARK LAND

Garden, Lawns Surround Pool at Insane Institution.

BY JERRY SHERIDAN

Seven acres of muck land surrounding a nearly dried-up spring have been turned into a natural park with a stone-rimmed pool, rock garden, sloping lawns and beautiful trees on grounds of the Marion County Insane Asylum at Julietta.

Clarence Wheatley, county commissioner, first conceived the idea more than a year ago and today, as it nears completion, he and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barrett, in charge of the institution, find that its beauty has exceeded their expectations.

The project was started last September, utilizing scrap building material. Mr. Wheatley said the work should be completed within a few months.

Pool 150 Feet Long

The pool, about 150 feet long and 40 feet wide, is of a curved, irregular shape. The stone rim and facing has been built from old street surfacing and stone curbing materials. In the middle is a star-shaped flower bed, also of stone, decorated at each point by an ornament carved by stoneworkers.

The sulphur spring was the starting point for the project. Mr. Wheatley said, with the garden laid out around it. The flow of water almost had stopped, when the garden was started, but now it has increased to supply water for the pool, overflowing into a second, smaller pond.

It is recalled that Indianapolis residents held picnics at Julietta years ago, when the sulphur spring and shady grounds were among the attractions. Originally called Sulphur Springs, the name was changed after application for a postoffice was refused. Another Sulphur Springs, Ind., already had the concession. Julietta was second choice.

Water Has Therapeutic Value

During the Civil War, a railroad was built through the land now occupied by the institution. The late John Kitley, former Marion County commissioner, recorded that the town prospered during the seventies. Residents of the district recognized the therapeutic value of the mineral water and often carried jugs and buckets of it to their homes.

The rock garden is part of a larger plan for occupational therapy being followed by both Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, who assign tasks to patients able to work.

More than 1200 truckloads of stone have been hauled into the garden and about 700 loads of dirt used to fill low spots. Elm trees have been planted.

A crushed rock walk is to circle the pool. Water from the spring has been harnessed to provide a miniature falls on one side. A small stone band stand has been built north of the pool.

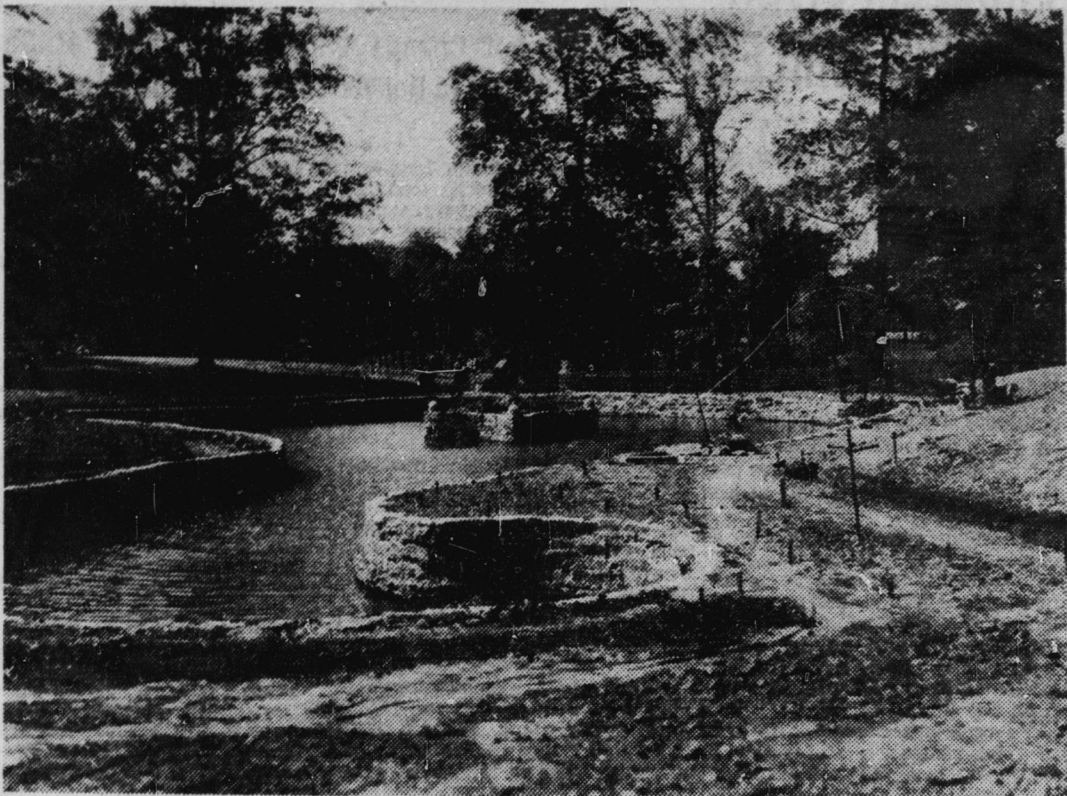

The institution itself is a business concern with a large commissary, bakery, 500-acre farm, dairy, laundry and carpenter shop.

Daily Patient Cost 41 Cents

Under Mr. Barrett's direction, the per capita cost of caring for the 350 patients has been lowered to 41 cents a day. This cost includes, he said, bid value of food raised on the farms. Expenses were $55,238.50 last year, but only about $2000 was paid out in cash. There are 85 head of cattle, 110 head of hogs and 10 draft horses on the grounds now. The building, a brick, ivy-covered structure, is furnished inside with cream and light green walls. Mr. Barrett said efforts to make patients as well as workers feel the responsibility of managing the institution have been successful.

Each year almost a score of patients are sent out to their homes, some cured, others improved, Mr. Barrett said.

ROCK GARDEN BEING BUILT WITH CASTOFF MATERIALS

A pool and rock garden being built as a PWA project at the Marion County Insane Asylum, Julietta, are shown above. All materials used in the project were cast off by road and street departments.

The project was sponsored by County Commissioner Clarence I. Wheatley and much of the work is being directed by Harry Barrett, institution superintendent.

POLICE CHARGE MAN WITH POSTAL THEFT

Accused Freed Last Week From Reformatory.

Leonard Smith, 24, of Pittsboro, who was released seven days ago from the Chillicothe (O.) reformatory, was under arrest today, accused of automobile theft and of robbing the Linton postoffice.

He was arrested yesterday afternoon at Clifton and 35th-sts after city police had pursued his car from Northwestern-av and Maple Road-blvd.

On the seat of the car, reported to have been stolen from W. E. Paul, Indiana Bureau of Motor Vehicles employee, police found a toy pistol and a book of money orders. Arresting officers quoted Smith as saying he bought the toy gun in Lebanon, and had intended to use it if necessary to get the money order blanks.

A postal clerk reported the money order blanks had been stolen from the Linton postoffice.
