

Federal Plank Next Goal for Voters' League

State, National Groups
Urge Merit Pledge
by Democrats.

Indiana League of Women Voters is to join this week in the national league's drive for favorable consideration of its "public personnel" plank by the Democratic platform committee.

Mrs. Charles E. Cory, Lafayette, first vice-president of the state league, and Miss Evelyn Chambers, former league secretary, appeared before the resolutions committee Saturday in behalf of the plank.

If the Democrats accept the organization's suggestions, their platform pledge would be abolishment of the spoils system and in favor of appointments on merit to Federal, state and local offices.

National Policy Pushed

In addition the league is making specific recommendation for plank incorporation of "immediate legislation" to place first, second and third-class postmasters, deputy collectors of internal revenue and United States marshals under the civil service, and repeal laws discriminating against otherwise qualified persons for reasons of marital or economic status or residence.

The league's headquarters in Philadelphia, Democratic convention city, will be opened formally next Sunday at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, national president, announced today.

The Philadelphia League of Women Voters is to provide headquarters hostesses.

Active Democratic Worker

The National League is to be represented in Philadelphia by a special delegation, which is to include Mrs. LaFayette Brown, Boston, who in addition to being a director of the national league, is active in the Democratic party.

Miss Florence Kirilin, Washington, league's legislative secretary, also is to be a headquarters worker.

When Mrs. Brown presents the league's ideas to the 1936 platform drafters, she will be conforming to a 16-year-old policy of selection of a party member to appear before the body. It will be the third Democratic convention at which she has presented the league's plank.

Cleansing Lotion Listed as Main Need in Summer

BY ALICIA HART

THE beauty preparations that the business girl has kept in her desk all winter should be replaced right now with special summer items.

The time has come when lotions are more appealing than creams, when a bottle of cologne is a necessity and not merely something you pour on as you leave the office for a tea date.

Let a good cleansing lotion form the nucleus of your office makeup box for summer. This can very well be one of the excellent varieties which serve as powder bases as well as cleansers. Several times a day use the lotion to remove every trace of old makeup before you start to put on a fresh coat.

You probably need new rouge, too. If you are suntanned, try one of the copper rust tones, with lipstick to match, of course. Otherwise, pick a lighter, brighter shade than you wore during the winter months.

Unless your skin is tanned, you do not need to invest in a new face powder. The powder rule never varies. It always must match exactly the tone of your complexion.

Choose a summer hand cream that not only keeps hands smooth and white but which nourishes cuticle, hardened by sand and sun on the beach, golf clubs and tennis rackets. Use it frequently.

Then select a good cologne or toilet water. Before you go out to lunch, saturate a large cotton pad with the liquid and give your arms, elbows and neck a once-over. This makes you cooler and certainly a good deal cleaner.

In addition, plan to keep a fresh pair of washable white fabric gloves, a pair of extra stockings and a clean handkerchief in the office.

Having these on hand as you are dashing out for tea or a last-minute dinner date means the difference between looking your best and just so-so.

FLAVOR SURPRISES ARE AID TO MEALS

Every meal ought to have one flavor surprise to lift it out of the realm of the ordinary. Nothing steps up appetite or food enjoyment so much as a new taste sensation that "hits the spot."

Baked Bananas—Sprinkle liberally with either powdered cinnamon, clove, or mace, or a combination of all three, before baking.

White Sauce—Add ¼ teaspoon peppercorns, 2 whole cloves and ½ small onion to make it savory. Remove seasonings before serving.

Whipped Cream—Whip in ½ teaspoon cinnamon and 2 teaspoons powdered sugar when using cream to top puddings and pies.

Pot Cheese—Mix 2 tablespoons crushed caraway seeds into each cup of cheese. Season plentifully with salt and pepper. Eaten with rye bread this is a very Continental supper.

GROTTO AUXILIARY FACES FULL WEEK

Sahara Grotto Women's Auxiliary has a full schedule for this week.

The entertainment committee is to hold a regular meeting at the Grotto home at 8 tonight, and the ways and means committee is to be entertained at an informal luncheon at the home of Mrs. Blanche Wurz, 932 E. Market-st.

The regular auxiliary business meeting is to be held at the Grotto home at 8 Wednesday, and the decorating committee is to meet with Mrs. Mae Oliver, 66 S. Colorado-av. for a covered dish luncheon at 12:30 Friday.

The hospitality committee met with the members' husbands yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Beuchamp, at their camp for a picnic supper.

Young Women's Christian Association to Open Summer Camp Period Next Sunday

Recent improvements at Camp McCormick, located in McCormick's Creek State Park, are expected to draw a large number of campers from the Young Women's Christian Association this summer.

The organization is to have exclusive use of the camp from next Sunday to Aug. 2.

(2) (Left to right) Misses Lena Loschke, Shimer and Louise Krone try out one of the two new tennis courts near the camp.

Two Sessions Scheduled

The first camping session is to be for school girls, while the later session is to be for employed girls. The program has been scheduled according to ages and interests.

Included in the camp staff are Miss Rive Todd, camp manager and dietitian; Miss Kalina Mihaylovska, foreign counselor, and a trained nurse, Miss Jennie Birks, Y. W. C. A. camp director, is to be assisted by Miss Mildred Simmons, Terre Haute, Girl Reserve secretary.

The staff for younger girls includes Misses Rachel Cartwright, Shimer and Angeline Shanell.

Miss Louise E. Noble and Miss Helen Swoyer are to direct the employed girls' camp.

Grapes Improve Drink

Grape juice improves the flavor of ever-popular hot weather lemonade. Simply use one-third grape juice to two-thirds lemonade.

Home Remodernized to Conform With Furniture Acquired Earlier

Most home owners purchase furniture to suit the house but occasionally the house is remodeled after the furniture. In such cases, rooms must frequently be made to conform with the type of furnishings which are available.

If your room does not suit your furniture, funds may be obtained from a private financial institution which operates under the terms of the Modernization Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration to redecorate or modernize.

This was the problem of a home owner in Mississippi. The furniture, most of which had been in the family for generations, was Georgian, while the room itself was rather nondescript. The housewife decided to change the room completely.

Two bookshelves were built in the wall on either side of the fireplace. The tops were arched and the shelves went all the way to the floor. The molding of the shelves conformed to the columns of the mantel, which showed the Georgian influence. No mirror was hung over the mantel because the housewife planned to reserve the space for a family portrait.

The fireplace was black tile, which did not conflict with the colors used in the room's decorations.

A wallpaper in silver and gray stripes covered the walls. Against this neutral background the fine woods of the furniture stood out in bold relief. The woodwork was done in antique white.

The upholstery of the chairs was held to somber tones, gayety being introduced in the room through the use of flowers. Carpets, rugs and upholstery were in shades of gray, brown and white, with antique gold accessories.

Jane Advises Wife on Methods of Helping Discouraged Husband

Dear Jane Jordan: My husband graduated from college five years ago. It is a shame that in all this time he hasn't had a chance to use his brain at all but has earned his living by manual labor alone. Now I can't get him even to look for anything better in the way of a job. He has lost his ambition and says the country is going to the dogs. He won't go anywhere with me and doesn't care to see our friends any more. Whereas I am so capable and like to have a good time I hate to think about trouble all the time. Although I have no college education, I managed to get a job and earn a little more than he does. I haven't lost hope that good times will come back, but how can I encourage him? PEPPY.

Answer—Some people made the depression an alibi for not moving forward. As long as they can point to bad business conditions as an excuse for personal failure they will not develop the resourcefulness necessary to deal with the difficulty. They do not realize that the chances are that they would not have been a howling success in more prosperous times.

If you could persuade your husband that at least part of his trouble is internal and not external, he would have taken the first step in the correction of the problem. His one is to study his failure objectively and determine how much of it comes from a lack of initiative, and how much can be blamed on current conditions.

Some have weathered the storm. Why is he one who has not? An honest self-examination may reveal a romantic concept of success which hasn't borne the test of reality. It may reveal the unrecognized wish to retreat from a problem rather than to jump in and compete for success. Instead of being stimulated by your methods, he is only further discouraged. Let him wonder if he isn't acting like a child who has just discovered that there isn't any Santa Claus.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 18 and care very much for a boy of 21. Once in a while he brings me home from a dance, but won't ask for another date. I have heard that he thinks I am very nice, but too serious, just because I went steady with another fellow for eight months. He doesn't want a girl to run after him. What I want to know is how to let him know I care for him, but that I don't want to go steady again? How can I convince him that I am just out for a nice time? I am very careful not to let him know that I care for him until you tell me how I should go about it. K. M. L.

Answer—In other words, how can you throw him off his guard by pretending you are not a possessive female long enough to get him so interested he won't mind it? I suppose you can attract him best simply by being merry in his company and by pretending not to want any steady attachment. I don't see why you should show him that you care for him at all. Just treat him like any other casual friend. If he wants to be more to you than others let him indicate his attitude himself. In the meantime interest yourself in others. It will help you not to be tense in his presence.
