STRANGE TALES ABOUT SEGAL
ALWAYS GETTING INTO JAMS

NEW YORK, July 4.—I see by the papers that sterling sportsman, Mr. Harry Champ Segal, is back in trade dealing in domestic and imported cauliflowers.

His activities of the moment include the management of one David Crowley, a British featherweight, one Sandy McDonald, a local heavyweight, and one Leon Ketchell, the Carnera of Poland.

It has been some several years since Mr. Segal graced the prize rings with his debonair manner and mysterious powers. He used to be quite a figure in the manly art. He managed Charley Phil Rosenberg and, later, K. O. Phil Kaplan.

But Mr. Segal was always getting into jams due to his boyish enthusiasm which at times took him into strange channels, and finally he turned back on the prize-rings and entered the race horse business as an owner, intent upon improving the breed.

But here again Mr. Segal got into more jams. It just seemed people didn't understand him. There was the time, for instance, when the Jockey Club had him under investigation and before the investigation was completed he took it on the lam, as the boys say.

Well, he didn't exactly do this, but he deeded the ownership of all his out munchers over to his wife Mollie, so theoretically he was out of the business, and since the Jockey Club didn't have anything against Mollie it chivalrously called the investigation off.

It was a funny thing, that investigation. Some one claimed a goat named Don Pedro at Saratoga and immediately shipped him to Mr. Segal's stable at Aqueduct. The Don was a bay thing with white markings. It disappeared mysteriously for three weeks. When it showed up again it was a complete bay. All the white markings had been dyed. The Jockey Club thought this most queer and started to investigate.

The Jockey Club is cold and unemotional. It hasn't much artistic sense. Somehow the Jockey Club developed the vicious notion the horse had been dyed for sinister purposes, that maybe it has been racing at other tracks during its absence from Aqueduct under an alias. Anyway, the heat was on pretty hard and Mr. Segal quickly transferred all his horses to Mollie, all except old Don Pedro; he never started again, that I can recall.

I mentioned that Mr. Segal was always getting into jams in the prize rings, and he was. They suspended him and his fighter of the moment, Rosenberg, for life in Illinois. It was in connection with a fight with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, a great bantamweight in his day. Rosenberg was the bantamweight champion of the time. The fight never did take place. Mr. Segal was accused of using politics and "other influences" pertaining to the appointment of the referee.

THEN there was the time when Mr. Segal's champion turned in a phenomenal performance against the rugged Eddie Shea of Chicago at the old Velodrome. I say phenomenal because everybody in town seemed to know Rosenberg was going to knock out Shea and fight round-and-up to that time Shea had never been on the floor.

Shea's manager later told me that two hoodlums, well rodded up, walked into the room the night before the fight and threatened to pistol both him and his fighter with messy thoroughness if Shea didn't go into the waves in the fourth round. For some reason it had to be the fourth round.

BUT perhaps you can put this down as sheer fiction, typical of an adventure-starved yokel with a melodramatic mania; what probably happened was that when Shea and his manager found that everybody in town was betting on a fourth-round knockout, they decided to make it unanimous and not spoil anybody's fun, including their own. Mr. Segal was contributing his unique and extraordinary talents to the prize rings in the days when a fighter could win or lose on a foul and one of his fighters, K. O. Phil Kaplan, a middleweight, was peculiarly susceptible to fouls. Anyway he had a lot of them in his record.

Fouling was a racket in those days, and bets were made on a basis that if a foul occurred all bets were off. This was a soft touch for the sure thing boys. If they could win on the up and up they fought honestly; if they got into severe difficulties they fouled out. This protected the bets.

Big Jim Farley, now the Postmaster General, took the stand in court one day and accused Kaplan of deliberately fouling and the subsequent beating of Joe Louis' superman bubble, bid for a spot in the heavyweight picture. Lewis, who began training today for his 10-round against Max Marek of Chicago at Comiskey Park, July 10, is fed up with the peanut money he's cashed in on his light heavyweight belt and longs for a piece of a good purse.

The proposal has progressed past the idea stage. He said his hand-lers have posted a $2500 forfeit with the New York boxing commission in anticipation of a match with some topflight heavyweight, preferably NOT Joe Louis. "I'm in favor of letting a Louis match slide for awhile," Lewis said. "We've been negotiating with Max Baer, but almost any of the good ones are O. K. with me."

When the Phoenix Negro won the light heavyweight title from Bob Olin at St. Louis last winter, his crowd appeal boomed as he developed a new knockout kick in both fists. Only his title defense against Jack McAvoy of England paid off at the gate, however.

"There aren't many good light heavies in sight and pretty soon I won't have any to meet," he complained. "Al Gainer I fight very soon, and he is about the toughest left. The best ones, I can't get to. They're in London and Australia."

Lewis originally was to go through his third fight with Olin, but the former champion reported an illness prevented the match. Marek, a stout heavyweight prospect, was substituted and Lewis agreed, although objecting mildly. "Olin would have been easy. Now I got to train hard for this one. I didn't want to train too much until I get ready for Braddock again."

Out for Year?

HANK GREENBERG'S broken left wrist apparently is going to keep the big first sacker of the Detroit Tigers out of the game for the remainder of the year. On removing the old cast that had been placed on the break that occurred early this spring, following a fracture in the 1935 world series, medics found Greenberg's wrist imperfectly healed and were forced to encase it again. Here is forlorn-looking Hank with the new cast.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Max Schmeling took only one brown man out of Jimmy Braddock's life, Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis declared today, and that the brown man left is just the one to take over the heavyweight boxing crown.

"I beat Braddock when I was 18 years old," Lewis said. "I beat him again two years later, but they gave him the decision. He had just one more fight after that before he met Max Baer and he couldn't have got much better."

Thus another who once whipped the Cinderella man, encouraged by the Braddock comeback and the subsequent burning of Joe Louis' superman bubble, bid for a spot in the heavyweight picture. Lewis, who began training today for his 10-round against Max Marek of Chicago at Comiskey Park, July 10, is fed up with the peanut money he's cashed in on his light heavyweight belt and longs for a piece of a good purse.

Records Fall as Lash Wins Final Tryout

Tireless I. U. Ace Runs Far Ahead of Rivals in 10,000-Meter Event.

BY HENRY SUPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—A preview of next week's Olympic track and field tryouts in New York comes off in Palmer Stadium today with the nation's foremost athletes clashing in the forty-eighth annual national A. A. U. track and field championships.

More than 200 stars, including practically all men who will seek to extend Uncle Sam's track and field dominance in the Olympics this summer at Berlin, sought titles in 22 events.

One title was decided last night when tireless Don Lash of Indiana sped to victory in the 10,000-meter event, cracking a batch of records. Lash, who qualified for the Olympic team by winning, turned the distance in 31:06.9. He broke Tom McDonough's American citizen record of 31:24 made in 1932, and Jole Ray's championship mark of 31:28.4 set in 1932.

Others Far Behind
The men who finished far behind Lash—Elmo Pentti of the Millrose A. A., New York, who was second, and Stanley Wudyka, Philadelphia, third—also qualified for places on Uncle Sam's team.

Lash was timed for the intermediate distance of six miles in 30:09.8, bettering Hannes Kolehmainen's American record of 30:20.4 established in 1934 and W. J. Kramers' American citizen's standard of 30:43.4, set in 1912.

The defending champion, Tom Otley of the Penn. A. C., dropped out of the fifth mile.

Seven championship records were bettered in the A. A. U. junior championships held yesterday.

Beard Has Retired
Seventeen of the stars who won championships at Lincoln, Neb., last year will defend their laurels today. Four champions will default—one, Percy Beard, 110-meter high hurdle titleholder, has retired.

Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse, winner of the 400-meter, will pass up the meet to concentrate on the Olympic tryouts.

Eulace Peacock, 100-meter and broad jump winner, will not compete because of an injured leg. Although eliminated in the Olympic semi-final tryouts last week in Cambridge, Peacock hopes to be eligible for next week's tryouts by the American Olympic Committee, and still make the team.

Joe McCluskey of New York, 3000-meter steeplechase and 5000-meter run champion, will concentrate on the steeplechase.

In Case You Don't Find Those Elusive Bass, Here's How Big Ones Look on Stringer This Year

WELL, will you do any better over the week-end?
George Godwin, fire alarm dispatcher, who was captain of the Fire Department bowling team, says he had more strikes at Coldwater, Mich., this week than his keepers produced in the American Bowling Congress last spring.

Who wouldn't believe him after seeing the picture above in which Mr. and Mrs. Godwin display 20 pounds of bass? The largest of the six weighs four-and-one-half pounds. The fireman and his wife bagged the limit of bass, bluegills and crappies during five days of fishing at the anglers' paradise, Randall Lake at Narrows Park. The haul included 42 bass, 13 of which were more than three pounds. Flies, spinners and plugs were as good as live bait, according to Mr. Godwin, who said the fish were fighting for it.

Women in Olympic Final Tests Today

American Track and Field Aces to Be Named.
PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 4.—The women's track and field squad which will represent the United States in the Olympic Games at Berlin this summer will be decided today when more than 100 feminine stars compete in the finals at Brown Stadium.

The 100-meter dash stands out as one of the best events on the program. Miss Helen Stevenson of Fulton, Mo., and Miss Betty Robinson of Chicago, who won the Olympic event in 1928. The latter is staging a comeback following an injury in an airplane crash several years ago.

Miss Stevenson is aiming at another victory over Stella Walsh, who will represent Poland this year. She has covered the distance in 11.3, five-tenths of a second under the world record held by Miss Walsh. The first three finishers in each event will qualify for the team.

Redskins in Spot to Go Up—or Down

Pack Closely Bunched as Tribe, Colonels Start Rapid-Fire Series.

The Indianapolis Indians had a likely opportunity to make a rapid ascent—or descent—in the American Association standings when they squared off against the Colonels in a concerted four-game series at Louisville this afternoon.

The Redskins were scheduled to play the tail-enders a double-header this afternoon and two games tomorrow afternoon. In first place, the Tribe was only seven percentage points away from the third-place Millers. Six points below the Killers were the sixth-place Kansas City Blues.

Minneapolis swept from a fifth-place tie with the Indians into the third niche by whipping St. Paul, 5 to 4, in the only Association game played yesterday. The victory snapped a seven-game winning streak by the Saints and checked the second-place Tribe after they had swept a series with Milwaukee's top-notchers to pull into a tight battle for the league lead.

It was the only game played yesterday. Milwaukee's game with Kansas City was washed out. A double-header also was canceled at Columbus today, involving the Red Birds and Toledo. Kansas City was scheduled at Milwaukee and Minneapolis at St. Paul.

Attendance in Big Leagues Likely to Reach New Season High.

By United Press
NEW YORK, July 4.—Baseball attendance marks for the season were expected to be broken today with all major league teams celebrating Independence Day with doubleheaders.

Barring adverse weather the 16 games probably will draw more than the 200,456 persons who saw the double-barreled Memorial Day program.

Most of the teams enjoyed a day of rest yesterday. Only two games were played.

The world champion Detroit Tigers smothered a 6-to-5 decision over the St. Louis Browns for their seventh consecutive victory.

The Chicago White Sox topped the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 5.

TEE TIME

AMONG the "multitudes" thronging local golf courses today were 32 men bearing down especially hard at Sarah Shank. They were playing in the final matches of the city public links championship tournament. Favorites were Bill Reed Jr., Bobby Dale, Mike Pollack and Charles Boswell, who are scheduled to represent Indianapolis in the national public links competition on Long Island this month.

Second and third-round matches here are to be played tomorrow morning and afternoon at South Grove and Riverside.

The correct date for that Frankfort Country Club pro-amateur is July 13. That's a week from this Monday.

LOGANSPOUT celebrated its first hole-in-one of the season yesterday, but the ace was not scored by a local player. Joe Fennea, the dingo came down from Chicago to drop his tee drive into the 136-yard third hole at the Country Club.

A flag tourney is billed to start at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at South Grove.

Six Favorite Shells Cross Oars on Princeton's Artificial Lake.

By United Press
PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—Just before sundown today on the artificial lake given Princeton University by Andrew Carnegie at a cost of $4,000,000, six slim cedar shells will set forth in quest of the glory of representing the United States in the eight-oared shell event at the Olympic games in Berlin.

Two heats will be run at 2000 meters (13 yards short of a mile and a quarter) and the first two boats in each heat will qualify for final Sunday. Princeton, Washington and New York A. C. are entered in the first heat, and California, Navy and Pennsylvania in the second.

Washington, Princeton, Navy and California are favored to meet in Sunday's final. The winner may annex the Olympic title as the United States has dominated the eight-oared race since it was added to the Olympic program in 1920.

Grueling Speed Test
The race is a grueling speed test. The oarsmen go at a killing pace throughout. In 1928 Princeton, rowing at a beat of 44 strokes to the minute, broke the world record until the last 200 yards when one member of the crew collapsed and California came from behind to win.

Brief thumbnail sketches of the six shells follow:
Washington—Intercollegiate champion, Princeton, beaten by Washington at three miles and four miles. Smoothest stroking crew in race. Coach J. E. Bright has crew primed to win Olympic honors for third straight year. Blue tipped oars. Boat named "Husky Clipper."

Princeton—"Dark Horse"
California—Second choice. Beaten by Washington at three miles and four miles. Smoothest stroking crew in race. Coach J. E. Bright has crew primed to win Olympic honors for third straight year. Blue tipped oars. Boat named "California Clipper."

Navy—Eastern sprint champion. Fastest strong crew. Trained in secret on Severn River, Annapolis, arriving only a day before races. Gold and blue tipped oars. No name.

Princeton—Fastest starter. Apparently found self after poor season. Dark horse. Orange and black tipped oars. Boat named "John Schultz."

Strains Arm Muscle
By United Press
PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—A strained muscle suffered by Jack White, No. 5 oarsman in the University of Washington's eight-oared shell, today endangered the Huskies' chances of winning the final Olympic rowing tryouts.

The injury was in White's left arm and Coach Al Urickson professed no alarm, saying the strain was a minor one. Others, however, feared the Far Western mentor too optimistic.

Rex Mays Favored at Roby Speedway

Times Special
CHICAGO, July 4.—Rex Mays heads a list of some of the nation's fastest racing drivers in today's races at Roby speedway.

The heavy-footed Californian is to compete in a special match race with Babe Stapp, and is the favorite in the 50-mile feature event. Other pilots who competed in the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis and have entered are Shorty Cantion, Frank Briskot, Chet Miller, Mauri Rose, Ray Pitkey, George Barringer, George Connor, Wilbur Shaw and Frank McGurk. Four 10-mile events also are slated.
