MEN'S FASHIONS FROM LOCAL SHOPS

BY MARJORIE BINFORD WOODS

A DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE —For Men of Fashion

WHEN in the course of human events it becomes necessary for men to band together to denounce the insufferable evils of summer wear, prudence dictates that it is their right and duty to throw off such garments as are offensive in order to promote their general welfare, to insure domestic tranquility, and to gratify the pursuit of hot weather happiness.

The history of men's apparel is a history of morbid blacks and somber greys, of heavy worsteds and ultra conservatism, vested therein. All having in direct object the establishment of a clothes tyranny over free-thinking, heat-suffering men.

Therefore, independent men of today do declare that it is their inalienable right to be provided henceforth with cool, comfortable clothes that have zest, color and youth, that they may better secure the blessings of liberty to themselves.

We hold these truths to be self-evident as portrayed by the following articles:

Article I

ALL direct powers of the sun on these bathing dogs, herein, shall be null and void for fading representative colors of said Graybera sport shirt and burgundy checked trunks. (left, above) Time, place and manner of wearing side-slit, 4-pocket lounge shirt originated in South Africa where torrid zones demanded cool relief. To insure foot ease, newly patented wooden clogs with flexible in-steps shall be chosen for beach wear.

Votes for swimming in brief trunks, only, shall carry the wise majority who shall deem it practical to select bright colors with Latest-constructed waist bands and absorbent mustard-colored terry cloth bath robes for wear between plunges, thereof.

Article II

THE House of style decrees that spectator sportsmen shall assemble daytime wardrobes of gay coloring, such as the canary yellow nubbed silk, air-cooled polo shirt (right, above) worn with maroon foulard neckerchief. District checked, full draped sports coat of dawn gray, black and Texas blue plaid; imported Cambridge gray flannel trousers worn, as witnessed thereof, at Yale, Harvard and Princeton.

Full faith and credit shall be given sports shoes of bright colored linen, as ratified by style arbiters for men. The blue shoes (above), guaranteed to be cool, light weight and easily cleaned. Decried valid for country club wear all season. Wire belt qualifies itself by being 14 karat gold plate with blue stripe and black leather trim. Colors shall not be prosecuted by impeccably dressed men. Low tariff has been decreed for all provisions herein, to provide for the common defense.

The above constitution needs no amendments.

Good to Eat

I BOUGHT a perfectly delicious frying chicken at my market.

I wanted to try a new method of preparing chicken so this is what I did: I baked it, basting it with butter and boiling water. The recipe is from Fanny Farmer and a very easy one.

BAKED CHICKEN FOR 4
3 pounds frying chicken
salt, pepper, flour
1/2 cup butter
1/4 cup boiling water
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cream

Have your butcher clean and dress the chicken and cut it up for you so it's ready to use. Singe, wash and dry the pieces.

Place in a dripping pan or a large, flat casserole (I used the latter and served it right from the dish at the table) sprinkle with salt and pepper and dust or dredge it in flour.

Now use 1/4 cup of butter, break it up and "dot" the chicken pieces with it.

Bake 30 minutes in a hot oven, basting every five minutes with the other 1/4 cup of butter, melted and mixed with the 1/4 cup of boiling water.

The basting will make the chicken not only tender, but brown.

To make the gravy, pour off the butter in the dish into a saucepan and add to it 1 1/2 tablespoons of flour and gradually stir in the cream, seasoning well with salt and pepper.

Four thin cream gravy over the chicken and serve at once.

Cathedral candles are to light the altar, which is to be banked with palms and ferns. Mrs. Robert Millon, Delhi, is to play the organ; Miss Margaret Schofield is to sing, and Ivan Warble is to play the violin.

The bride, to be given in marriage by her father, is to wear white dotted swiss with a tulle veil falling from a halo of flowers. Her bouquet is to be white roses.

HOUSE OF SHADOWS

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Claire Fiedler sets out to drive to the lonely mountain home left her by her eccentric uncle, Lyman Fiedler. Claire is trying to decide whether to marry Nick Baum, to whom she owes money. She also hopes to find a valuable and mysterious jewel owned by her uncle and believed to be hidden in the house.

Her car is wrecked by a log across the road. Pat Magan, an old friend, and Bob Steele, young engineer, arrive on the scene and take Claire to the mountain house where Eb Spratt and his sister, Susie, are the caretakers.

The sinister atmosphere reports that the watchdog has been shot. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III
A MENACING chill seemed to grip the room, focusing upon Dan Dallas, who held the dead dog in his arms. Why should any one kill the watchdog? Why?

Susie was suddenly seemed closely connected with the log across the road. Evidently some one else was interested in the House of Long Shadows. Why?

In spite of Claire's effort to shake off the sinister impression, she felt a shudder of inexplicable terror.

Bob Steele looked at her anxiously and then said, "I think we'd better give things the once over, and the sooner we start the better."

"Trigger! The poor old dog!" Then she wiped her eyes. "Come on, Dan. Get a lantern and help me bury him. We'll dig a grave down in the aspen grove."

"If you don't mind, Miss Spratt, I think you'd better not do anything about the dog tonight. It might be just as well for you to stay inside until tomorrow," suggested Pat.

The woman turned with a surprised expression. "What do you mean? Of course it was an accident, just like the log falling down on the road. Probably some hunter took the dog for a wild animal."

"You're not so sure of that, Susie," answered Claire.

FOR a minute a look of fear showed on Susie's tear-streaked face. Then she shook her curly papers unbelievably. "Go on now, Claire. You'll be sayin' next that Eb and me ain't very good caretakers. You haven't found anything wrong, have you?"

"Not a thing, Susie, and I don't expect to," Claire assured her. "But I agree with Mr. Magan. You'd better not go out to bury the dog until morning."

"Just as you say, Claire," Susie's tone showed she was still unconvinced. "But that log just happened to fall down and it must have been a mistake about Trigger. I'm sure of that."

As the door closed behind Susie and the man, Bob Steele turned to Claire. "This game with the compelling eyes—you don't figure she'd lie to you, do you, Claire? She rather overdoes the protesting act."

"I've never known her to lie," Claire answered. "Susie's inclined to be flighty at times, but her brother keeps a firm hand on her. She's been with the family ever since she was a very young girl, except three years when she worked in the city. We've always trusted her implicitly."

Pat laughed. "Pull up, Bob. Faithful family retainers and all that stuff. No good trying to work up any case against them. Come on, let's shove off."

THE next hour was spent in going over every inch of the old house, much to Eb Spratt's disgust. In his opinion, night was the time for sleeping, not prowling up and down stairs to look for a shadow.

"It's bad for my rheumatism," he grumbled to Susie in the privacy of the kitchen, "this stayin' up 'til all hours just because a lot of youngsters don't know enough to go to bed. Why do they want to pick this time o' night to look the place over?"

The old clock in the library was striking midnight when finally the three young people decided to call a halt in the unsuccessful search.

Pat threw himself into a big chair and wiped his forehead. "Whew! I'll begin to sprout sebaceous myself if I stay here long. All this old-fashioned prouder, I'll bet if any one should try to horn in here, it would be some nut on the track of a carved walnut bedstead or something."

"Probably it's too dark to make it worth while looking around outside tonight, isn't it?" asked Bob.

"Goodness yes," answered Claire. "We'd better call it a day and get a fresh start in the morning."

House Plants Need Washing Once a Week

Removal of Dust, Dirt Held Necessary for Growth.

House plants should be washed regularly to remove all the dust and dirt that collect on the leaves. This allows the light and air to get to all the breathing pores in the leaves, so that they will be more thrifty.

In industrial cities where there is much dirt in the air it is advisable to wash the plants each week; where the air is cleaner, less frequent washing is necessary, and if the plants are set out of doors for the summer the natural rains will keep them clean.

Plants that are quite dirty may be cleaned with mild soap suds, followed by thorough rinsing with clear water.

Many housewives place their plants in the sink or bathtub and syringe them with a strong spray of water, which is excellent for the more rugged plants. At the same time the plant roots receive a thorough washing.

While cleaning the plant, all yellowed and dead leaves should be removed and any necessary staking, training of vines, or pinching of unwanted shoots may be taken care of.

Climbing vines, such as English Ivy, should likewise be kept clean. In order to give the leaves a rich glossy appearance they may be wiped with a cloth moistened with milk.

Any vegetable oil such as salad oil may also be used, but never apply furniture polish or any mineral oil, as it is harmful to the plant tissues.

Periodical cleaning of plants not only makes them thrive better, but the dirt is removed from their leaves, but it improves their appearance and helps keep insects and diseases under control. In fact, plants that are cleaned and cared for regularly are seldom infested with pests of any sort.

PAINTS and ferns decorated the altar, before which the Rev. John B. Ferguson read the ceremony. Mrs. James R. Loomis, organist, played during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Miriam Ransburg, maid of honor, wore turquoise blue chiffon and carried a bouquet of white roses. Walter Wagoner Jr. and Ed Ransburg were ushers. Gregg Ransburg was best man.

After a breakfast at Cifaldi's the couple left by motor for a trip to the north.

"What is it, Claire? What's happened?" He caught her and held her close with one arm when she stumbled against him, while he struck a match with the other hand and lighted a lamp that was on a table.

Gasping, she told him, clinging to him like a frightened child. "Shot at you!" His mouth set in a hard line.

"Yes, and there wasn't any sound."

"Probably a gun with a silencer. We didn't hear the shot that got the dog either. I'm going to get that devil or know the reason why! Claire, if anything had happened to you—" He looked down at her in a way that sent a warm thrill through her. For an instant she forgot her danger.

By this time the rest of the household had been aroused and Susie came running toward them, her face pale.

Dear Jane Jordan—About 10 years ago I was left alone with a stepson whom I raised and schooled and saw that he learned a good trade.

Now he earns very good money. I am a registered nurse and have worked years at my profession.

I remarried, a man much older than myself, a man of whom my son was very fond. He was very good to me before we were married, but he sure has been too good changed. He never has bought one thing for our home. I have bought it all I have to live in old places without lights, but I keep my home clean and tidy. I don't mind hardships but he has come cruel to me.

At my age I am not able to be a rich duty as a nurse.

As a wife and mother I feel I have done my part for both these men. When we go to buy our food he goes with me and will curse me and cause a scene in the store. This caused me to have a heart attack and I almost passed on. I am being taken care of by my doctor, but he goes with me and will curse me and cause a scene in the store. This caused me to have a heart attack and I almost passed on.
