

LOCAL BARRYMORES, GARBOS IN COMEDY, 'IT HAPPENED IN INDIANAPOLIS,' TO MAKE DEBUT AT LOEW'S FRIDAY

1. In this scene from "It Happened in Indianapolis," The Times-Loew's local movie based on a high school story which is to open at Loew's Friday, Principal Dexter (Edward Green) is shown giving orders to his secretary (Miss Mildred Stevens). Shown at the left is Gene Dwyne, who has told the principal something naughty about John Maguire, who plays the hero role.

2. The fraternity initiation shown in this scene from the local movie was broken up when the principal sent for Mr. Maguire (center). He is shown receiving the summons with misgivings.

3. This looks natural. "It Happened in Indianapolis," like nearly all modern movies, ends like this. The boy is Mr. Maguire. The girl is Mary Paxton Young, Butler University student who plays the heroine.

Federal Players Score Hit in 'Campbells Are Coming'

Comedy Drama Could Be Made Into Something Worthy of Broadway; Acting Outstanding.

BY JOHN W. THOMPSON

Several hundred loyal theater-goers suffered (from the heat) through three acts of the warmest comedy drama the Federal Players have yet presented at Keith's last night.

True, most of the warmth from the natural atmosphere, but Robert Peel Noble really has himself a play in this dodged based on Meredith Nicholson's short story, which, with a tuck here, and a pleat there, could be made into something worthy of Broadway.

The plot opens with the Ward household, headed by Robert Fleming Ward and his son, John, both lawyers, in destitute circumstances. The mortgage (there's that thing again) is just about due, and Sister Helen can't have dates because she doesn't belong to the Country Club and Ma can't afford to sit at home and write articles on "Pollution of the Wabash River."

More Desk to Parlor

Forced out of their downtown office, Pa and John move their desk into the parlor, hang a shingle out the front. Then come news that the Campbells, the Walter Scott Campbells, millionaires, are coming to visit the Wards. Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Ward had once been back-fence cronies. So John and his young friend, David Trone, new editor of the "Kearneyville (Ind.) Ledger," devise the idea of playing up the visit of the Campbells to help the Wards out of financial difficulties.

Everything works out perfectly. It ends up with the old political boss, George Hovey, offering Robert Ward the prosecuting attorney job, because George wants to meet Campbell. Then just when all looks bright, there comes a telegram that the Campbells are not coming after all. And at the same moment, John and his girl friend, Oodles Hovey, crash her airplane into the Ward front porch.

Parker Is Santa Claus

That seems as if it should end the play. But on it goes, to show that Elwell Parker, who had been walking in and out of several scenes, was really a representative of the great Walter Scott Campbell. Then in the last scene, Mr. Parker acting like Santa Claus, parcels out jobs to David and John, sees Oodles take the latter and Helen, the former. One of the funniest spots of the play was in the last act when a lady newspaper photographer (Elsa Ewell) attempted to take a picture of Pa and Ma Ward. The scramble into which she got herself, camera and the household, was a joy to behold.

The Misses Betty Anne Brown and Alice Arnold were outstanding.

Many Costumes Made for Movie

Times Special

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—Rare velvet, rich embroideries and specially woven satins and laces were gathered for Katharine Hepburn's wardrobe for "Mary of Scotland," in which she co-stars with Fredric March.

The 12 costumes the actress wears were designed by Walter Plunkett, well-known designer, who was brought from New York. In addition to Miss Hepburn's 12 dresses, six costumes were designed for Queen Elizabeth, and 12 more for the four Marys who act as companions to Mary, Queen of Scotland.

Each of Miss Hepburn's gowns weighs at least 15 pounds and contains 12 to 15 yards of material.

Will Rogers Show Booked

'State Fair' Heads Apollo's July Schedule.

Proving that good films never grow old, the Apollo, to answer hundreds of requests, is to bring back "State Fair" for a week's run starting Friday, July 17.

The picture, starring the late Will Rogers, is considered by many to be the comedian's best screen offering. It is the story of a simple Iowa family and their preparations for the big fair. The plot includes several important episodes in the lives of various members of the family.

Others in the cast are Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory. During the other three weeks of the current month, the Apollo is to present a varied program, opening with "Public Enemy's Wife," starring Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay, which is to occupy the Apollo screen starting Friday. It is a G-man story in which the G-man falls in love with the gangster's wife, Cesar Romero and Robert Armstrong also are in the cast.

New Temple Film Out

Beginning Friday, July 24, the Apollo is to exploit the ever-faithful angel of the box-office, Shirley Temple, in her latest film, "Poor Little Rich Girl." In the cast of the little dancing star's new movie are Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley, Michael Whalen, Jane Darwell and Claude Gillingwater. When the Temple picture runs its course, the Apollo is to show "My Wife With Love," starring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy. This will be followed by "China Clipper," another Pat O'Brien vehicle.

WFBM to Bring Talk on Music

Robert Schmitz Also to Play on Radio Hour.

In one of what are now called his "conversation concerts," E. Robert Schmitz is to play and discuss Beethoven's music on his regular WFBM broadcast at 2 tomorrow.

Specifically, the program will seek to trace the growth of Beethoven's affection for the Countess Therese von Brunswick. Four first movements of famous sonatas are listed: Op. 27, known as the "Moonlight"; the "Appassionata," Op. 57, and the opening movements of Op. 78 and Op. 111.

In the first, Mr. Schmitz comments, there is "lovely music by a young genius more in love with the moon than with a woman." In the next two selections he finds the composer uttering a "charming falsehood," pouring out his heart to the countess, says Mr. Schmitz, in the first movement of the "Appassionata," and then dedicating it to her brother.

The final number, from Beethoven's last piano sonata, indicates to the performer genius mastered and directed by a triumphant will. Mr. Schmitz reacts seem to show again that with Beethoven, more than almost any composer, there are as many "programmatic" explanations as there are interpreters. (By J. T.)

Fred Stone Gets Hair Cut at Last

Times Special

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—Fred Stone says he feels almost normal length for the first time since he entered the movies.

Mr. Stone heads the cast of "Grand Jury," in which he plays the role of an everyday citizen. From the time he started work on "Alice Adams," his first film, until recently, Mr. Stone had been required to wear his locks long to the point of almost covering up his ears.
