

BRITAIN WAITS FOR STRUGGLE WITH IL DUCE

Prepares for Battle With Italy Over Artery to East, Simms Says.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
Chicago-Herald Foreign Editor

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The war which Great Britain declared on Mussolini when he reached out to grab Ethiopia, and thereby imperiled the empire's short cut via Suez to the East, is still far from settled. The present lull is merely a truce.

Beaten on the League of Nations front, the British Bulldog has retired to England to lick his wounds, watch events and gather strength while preparing for the next, and perhaps decisive, struggle.

Such is the meaning of last night's terse announcement that Britain will refuse for the present to annul her pact with Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia for mutual assistance in the Mediterranean.

Bombers, not battleships, today command that watery expanse. Were Italy and Britain to come to grips over this vital British artery of commerce and war, Greece and Turkey, now aerial crossroads between Europe and Suez, might well decide the issue.

Loges Mediterranean

To defend Egypt, the Sudan, Kenya and her East African colonies, India, Hong Kong, the British East Indies and Australia, Britain must at all cost have safe access to the Mediterranean, Suez and the Red Sea.

Today she has lost such access. The Italian navy and the rapidly growing Italian air force make that route extremely hazardous. And now Rome has not only annexed Ethiopia, further endangering the Red Sea lane, but is reported to be contemplating an alliance with Berlin, Budapest and Vienna, strengthening her position in still another direction.

Plans are under way for building a great British naval base at Cape Town for use if and when the Suez short-cut is severed. That is merely an emergency measure. The solution will have to be found in the Mediterranean.

Mussolini Is Key

One solution is to bring Italy into a Mediterranean pact along with France, Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia. The terms of such a pact, dominated by Britain, would be of such a nature as to give that country maximum security in those waters.

If Il Duce remains stubborn, or his price is impossible to meet, Britain will have no alternative but to build up a Mediterranean coalition strong enough to take care of the Italian threat.

Thus the diplomatic game being played across the European board at this moment is hectic in the extreme. What the outcome will be nobody can foretell. Given another two years of peace in which to re-arm, Britain will be strong enough. If necessary, for a showdown—if by that time she has not won her game by diplomacy.

For somehow, she must have a new deal in the Mediterranean, cost what it may.

Ban Imposed

British Writer Is Barred From Communion After Parents Die.

By United Press

LONDON, July 14.—The Rt. Rev. George Kennedy Allen Bell, bishop of ancient Chichester, and James Bunting, 86-year-old movie scenario writer, were the central figures today in an incident for which scholars vainly sought a precedent in the recent history of the Church of England.

It was a formal ban, almost approximating one of excommunication, by the bishop on the young scenario writer, an application of one of the laws which the Bible says God gave to Moses and his people on Mount Sinai: Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

OPPRESSED by the threat of poverty, the Rev. William Henry Boyne Bunting, 70, and Mrs. Hilda Mary Bunting, 56, the young scenario writer's parents, committed suicide by gas, in a death pact, at their home at Camel's Dale, near Haslemere.

To its verdict a country coroner's jury attached a rider or postscript censuring young Bunting "for acting in a very callous manner" in not assisting his parents in their difficulties.

Bishop Bell then wrote Bunting:

"I desire you to take note that in view of the grave wrong indicated in the jury's rider which 'you have done to your neighbors and to the Church, you must not present yourself for Holy Communion at any church or other place of worship in the Diocese of Chichester until a further order is given.'

KERN ASSERTS MERIT SYSTEM PLAN TO STAND

No Immediate Change in City Setup Likely, Mayor Says.

By United Press

"The next school for police applicants probably will be predominantly Republican," Mayor Kern said today, asserting changes in the merit system are not likely to be made in the setup here before the next State Legislature meets.

The police force, Mayor Kern said, is to include about an equal number of men from each major political party before the year is over. After that, to maintain the bi-partisan aspect required by statute, the next school would include a majority of Republicans, it was explained.

The present system is to become a virtual civil service, he said, but the bi-partisan feature first must be eliminated.

"We do not anticipate immediate changes in the present system," Mayor Kern said, "for although we realize many of its defects, we also want more experience before we suggest permanent changes. I have decided, after conferring with W. Rowland Allen and other members of the merit commission, that a series of meetings with interested civic clubs, citizens and our Safety Board will be undertaken before the Legislature convenes."

Safety Board members also said they knew of no impending changes, affirming the mayor's statement that the bi-partisan clause prevented true merit system operation.

Mayor Kern said partisanship would enter the merit system picture so long as the bi-partisan clause remained. A true merit system for fire and police appointments may be easier in the future with improved economic conditions, he added.

Applications, he said, tend to decrease when business improves, allowing a larger percentage of those desiring appointments to take the training for either school.

Examination papers for 52 police applicants were being graded by Prof. J. J. Robinson, Indiana University, today. The training school, lasting several weeks, was completed this week and appointment recommendations are expected within the next few days, Chief Morrissey said.
