

State Women Golfers Play at Local Club

Arrangements and Social Affairs Managed by Members.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN
Society Editor

Bright colored umbrellas dot the fairways at the Indianapolis Country club this week while state women golfers play for the Indiana championship. Caddies carry the women's club bags thrown over their shoulders and the gayly striped umbrellas tilted over the players' heads.

The oversize umbrellas easily shade two players. Mrs. Richard Sims plays with one of these sunshades protecting her from intense heat. She has Miss Peggy Hoover, Fort Wayne, one of the entrants, as her house guest during the tournament.

Mrs. Carl McCaskey assisted the starters, keeping records of the players as they teed off for their matches. Brown and white strips shaped into a diamond pattern over the yellow background of her sport dress, designed without sleeves.

Miss Dorothy Gustafson, South Bend, a contender for the championship title, played her first match in a white linen skirt, buttoned down the side. Several buttons were left unfastened to allow for long strides across the course. Her loosely knit yellow sweater was sleeveless. A yellow ribbon held back her blond hair, a soft contrast to her mellow tan. Miss Hoover of the Fort Wayne Orchard Ridge Country Club played in blue and white printed culottes, cut with a low sunback. She had a scarf protecting her blond hair from the breeze.

Mrs. John G. Williams, beginning golfer at the Indianapolis Country Club, was one of the spectators. She had a brown and white scarf tied under the stitched collar of her tan golfing dress.

Mrs. H. C. Piel, who usually plays in tournaments, was on the sidelines with an infant on her knee. Playing hostess to visitors, she wore a white pebble crepe sports dress, with a blue, white and red striped belt matching the colors in the kerchief tied around her neck.

Mrs. V. M. Ray, another onlooker, sat under the shade net of the eighteenth green watching players finish. White buttons fastened her turquoise blue linen down the front, and four white pockets had turquoise flaps held down by white buttons. A turquoise ribbon banded her white hat.

Mrs. John Heidt's white linen dress was trimmed with red heart shaped buttons. She and Mrs. John Wardrobe were among the spectators.

Mrs. William G. Sparks, entertainment committee member, assisted with registration. She is making arrangements for a dinner-dance at the club Thursday night to honor players.

Garbo Sets Style

Even before the present epidemic of low-heeled shoes for daytime wear spread to society belles, working girls, and most movie queens, Greta Garbo flaunted flats for daytime and evening occasions.

Women Golfers Defy Heat to Vie for State Championship

Women golfers in the women's state golf tournament at the Indianapolis Country Club this week, have a foil for the sun's merciless rays. Upper left, Miss Peggy Hoover, Fort Wayne, and Mrs. Jake Delker, Pleasant Run Golf Club, walk across the fairway carrying an umbrella.

Popularity Lies in Ready Smile, Kindly Manners

BY ALICIA HART
Times Special Writer

Healthy, smiling, vivacious faces always are the most attractive. Now that pretty clothes, subtle makeup and feminine coiffures outline masculine, strictly tailored get-ups, pretty smiles are even more attention-getting.

Naturally, you can't look your prettiest unless you feel well. Sleep regularly, eat sensibly and exercise moderately if you would radiate energy, have clear eyes and skin and shining hair.

Your diet and the amount of sleep you get have more effect on your disposition than you perhaps realize. You simply aren't pretty when the corners of your mouth turn down and bad temper lines show across your forehead.

You know, of course, that you don't look your best on the days when the world looks black indeed and you sit slumped forward worrying and fretting about it.

The perennial Pollyanna who always sees the brightest side of things may be a bore sometimes, but, generally, she is prettier than her sisters who sulk or fly into tempers too often.

One good way to cultivate real beauty (the placid brow and pleasant mouth variety) is to think about others more than you do about yourself.

The girl who never listens when her friends are talking, is selfish with her time and seldom reads the daily papers and good books is almost never considered attractive by any one besides herself.

At any social gathering you have to contribute something more than your presence.

No one, except possibly your mother and one best friend, is anxious to hear the minute details of your daily doings. To be thought pretty and to be popular you have to be a truly interested listener and a calm, restful person to have around.

Watch Is Viewed Essential Need in Present-Day Life

Time is the essence of our lives. Time has been speeded up so that most of us live in a whirl.

In order to meet the demands of a daily date book, our engagement calendar demands accuracy whether one is a society matron or debutante, a telephone operator, stenographer, or the president of a large corporation.

Watches are necessities. Some of them beautiful and glamorous, some of them simple and beautiful—most of them light and on the wrist for convenience—but watches they are. Rich or poor, high or low, the office boy or the chairman of the board, watches—watches—watches. The office boy has to be on time and the chairman of the board never would have been given his position if he had not been.

Take time to shop for your watches and see the latest developments—watches for decoration as well as utility, watches in bags, in little cases to be carried in the feminine purse; watches richly jeweled, enameled, carved of crystal and of platinum and gold and silver and other metals—all of them guaranteed to keep time.

Order lies in lives so full that these little gadgets are like watchmen to keep them on the right track. What would we do without them? And why not be up to date?

A new watch should be purchased like a new car, for line, for style, for its decorative value as well as its utility.

There is NOTHING OLD FASHIONED About the New Modern ICE REFRIGERATOR

The new, air-conditioned ice refrigerator is a revelation in new beauty, new efficiency and new economy. While reducing ice consumption, it keeps foods garden-fresh in an atmosphere of moist, ever-changing air. Food odors and gases are absorbed by the flowing water film and carried down the drain. Foods are not robbed of their own natural moisture, don't shrivel, shrink or soften. What you save in preventing food spoilage and shrinkage will make your new, modern ice refrigerator pay its own way.
