

YEGGS ERASE CLEWS AFTER LOOTING SAFE

Wipe Fingerprints From Strong Box; Get $215 at Kautz Store.

Yeggs, who forced an entrance into the Kautz Stationery Store, 116 N. Pennsylvania St., used a wet towel to wipe their finger prints off the safe, detectives said today.

Police reported the cracksmen jimmied a front door lock and took $15 from a cash drawer and $200 from the safe. Merchant Policeman John Louden discovered the front door standing open at midnight.

The office had been ransacked, and the towel was found near the safe.

POLICE HUNT DRIVER AND $8000 CARGO

Wife Requests Aid After Mate Telegraphs for Funds.

A trailer, its cargo of $8000 worth of merchandise and the driver, John S. Virt, 1225 N. Drexel Av., were objects of a police search today.

The merchandise was consigned from the Globe Cartage Co., here to Universal Carloading and Distributing Co., Chicago.

Mrs. Virt asked Indianapolis police for aid, when she received a telegram from her husband last night asking that money be sent to Pontiac, Ill.

Detectives communicated with Pontiac authorities, who found Mr. Virt at the telegraph office there. Mr. Virt, according to Pontiac officers, said he left the merchandise at three places.

While Pontiac police were investigating, Mr. Virt disappeared. They are holding the truck tractor.

POLLY MORAN HALTS ACTION ON DIVORCE

Filing to Be Delayed Until After Husband Is Arraigned.

By United Press HOLLYWOOD, July 16.—Polly Moran today delayed filing divorce charges against her husky husband, Martin Malone, once a coast inter-collegiate welterweight champion who objected with fists to being called "Mr. Moran," by visiting friends and officers.

The divorce, for which she ordered attorneys to prepare after Malone waved a gun at her, would wait until Mr. Malone faced charges brought on by allegedly berating her and soaking a police-man, the film comedienne said.

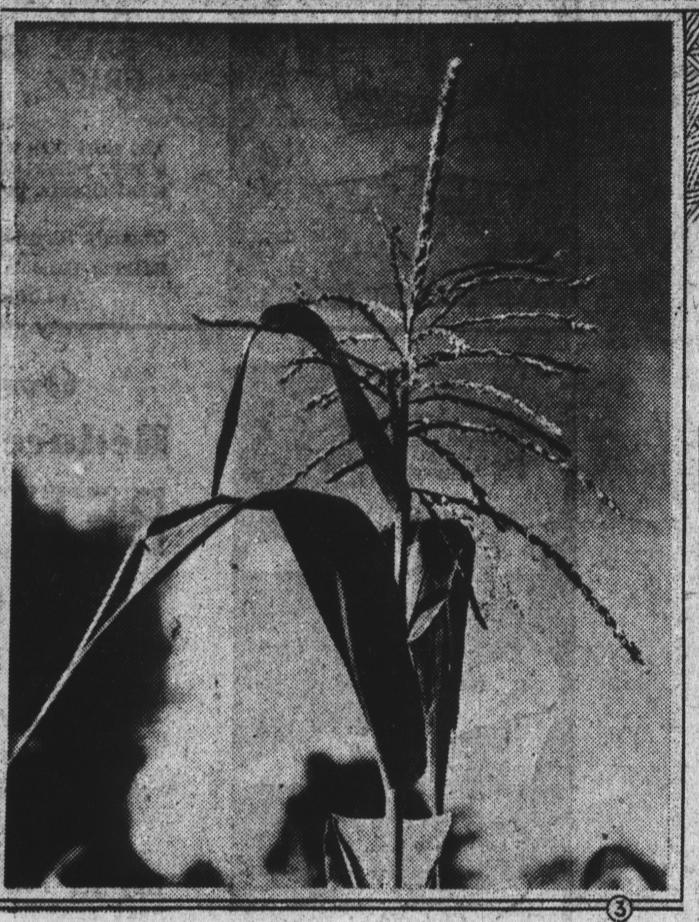

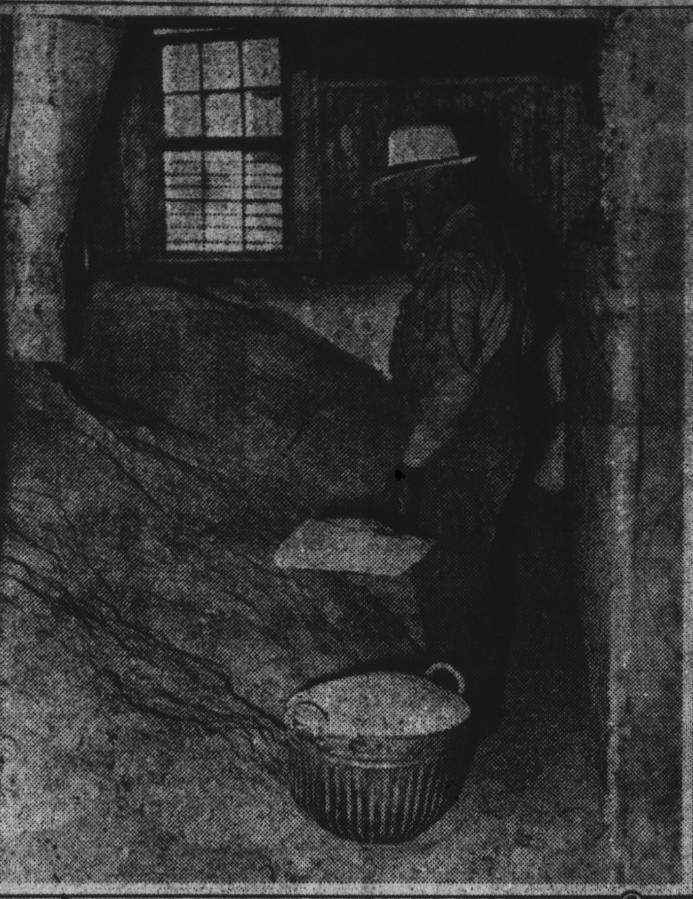

"There's no hurry," she added. "I think we're in for a trial and other matters and I decided to wait until the fuss is over."

The actress reported her husband became insolent while attending a party with some visiting Elks, here for their national convention, when some one called him "Mr. Moran." Malone took his wife home and she charged he began berating her and waving the gun at her. She shrieked for help. Neighbors called officers.

Rainbow Veterans Honor Landon

By United Press KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 16.—Rainbow Division veterans closed their eighteenth annual reunion here today by sending a motor caravan to Topeka to call on Gov. Alf M. Landon. Leland L. Whitney, Cleveland attorney, was elected president.

Drought Finesse May Fail Unless Soaking Rain Comes

This is a picture story of the drought on a Marion County farm. No. 1 shows immature corn, cut in the fields because it will not make corn, and ready to be fed to beef cattle, who are without fresh pastures. No. 2 shows H. M. Murphy, who farms the farm on R. R. No. 4, Box 525, shoveling winter feed into baskets preparatory to the evening feeding of his beef herd. No. 3 shows a beautiful tassel on corn, but indicates to the expert that that corn never will mature. The sun has cooked the life out of the pollen.

age puddle for a fresh drink. They were eating prepared meal, instead of grass.

"Last year," Mr. Murphy said, "I had a pretty good year. Last winter I sat around the fire and read. I even had four porterhouse steaks I got at Kingan's."

"This year," he said, "Well, there's my whole year's work. These cattle—they weigh $50 each now. I'll have them at $100 before I sell. I usually sell within the first two weeks in December. But they'll be sold before two months are out."

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

CLEAR 22 ROBBERIES

Pa. Police Hold Fair After Statements Admit Series of Crimes.

Times Special

LA PORTE, Ind., July 16.—State-memt police said they obtained from two men have solved a series of 22 robberies here extending over a period of three years.

The men held are Fred Barnhart, 34, La Porte, and Ira Berndt, 44, Valparaiso. Both are married and both have five children.

The men held are Fred Barnhart,

34, La Porte, and Ira Berndt, 44,

Valparaiso. Both are married and both have five children.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle

Out in the barn lot was a wagon bed half loaded with cut, immature corn. At 6 it was to be hauled into the cattle yard and tossed to the cattle.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

"But maybe it'll rain," he said.

He went into the darkened parlor of the house, where he couldn't see the sun, and where it might have been a degree or so cooler.

Mr. Murphy got up out of the shade of his car. He headed for the house. He rubbed the gray stubble of his face. Across the fields you could see the sun hit and bounce back up in rhythmic curls.

Production Cost Too High

"It's costing me more to produce a pound of beef than I'll ever get for it. If I could get 11 or 12 cents a pound I'd make out all right. I have no choice but to sell."

"Everyone has the same idea, to sell. If you want to do something smart you want to do it when no one else is doing it."

Mr. Murphy has 63 acres in pasture, 40 acres in wheat, 20 of which was badly winter-burnt; 75 acres of corn. The wheat was pretty good, the oats better than most. He's holding all of it to see what happens.

Corn Cut for Cattle