

EDITORS' OUTING MAY END SPLIT OF DEMOCRATS

Editorial Association Event
Viewed as Harmony
Session.

The two-day outing of the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association, next Friday and Saturday at French Lick, was viewed by Democratic leaders as not only the opening gun in the state Democratic campaign but as a harmony session in which factional differences may be patched up.

A meeting of the Democratic state committee is scheduled for next Saturday morning with James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman, as one of the speakers. Some leaders believe that this session will heal political bruises sustained during the recent Democratic state convention.

"We want to win, so why not get together?" said one McNutt leader reported to have been partially responsible for splitting the Marion County delegation and starting the band wagon for Lieut. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend.

Shop Talk Included

Despite the fact that politics is to form the highlight of the two-day meeting of the editors, a program has been arranged for a discussion of newspaper-making.

The full program, as announced by Scott B. Chambers, Newcastle, association president, follows:

Registration and golf tourney in the morning of the opening day with a bingo party for women in the afternoon and a dance and floor show with awarding of golf prizes at night.

On Saturday, the closing day, a breakfast for Democratic women and editors' wives is to be given.

The editors' meeting is to begin at 9:30 a. m. with the following addresses: "The Point of Sale Selling," A. E. Johnston, Cincinnati; "Behind the Washington Date Line," John Sembower, under secretary of United States Senator Sherman Minton; "State Publicity Service," Dudley A. Smith, Democratic state committee director of publicity; "What Newspapers Can Do," Lieut. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend, gubernatorial nominee.

Banquet Is Arranged

Displays of office forms in mechanical, editorial, accounting and circulation departments are to be shown.

A tea is scheduled for women in the hotel gardens Saturday afternoon.

The political banquet is to be held at 7 p. m. at the French Lick Springs Hotel with the principal address by Lieut. Gov. Townsend. Other speakers include National Chairman Farley, Gov. McNutt, United States Senators Minton and VanNuys; Omer S. Jackson, state chairman; and Mrs. Emory Scholl, state vice chairman.

George Pursell, Bloomington World publisher, is to be chairman at the editors' business sessions.

Entertainment features of the outing are to include music by the girls' band of Howard County, with kitchen utensils used as musical instruments, and a political skit by the women's Statehouse Democratic Club.

LOCAL FIRMS URGED TO EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Business and industrial firms of the city were urged today by the Chamber of Commerce to prepare exhibits and demonstrations of Indianapolis products for the State Fair opening Sept. 5.

Particular attention was called by the Chamber of Commerce bulletin to plans for a parade typifying products made and sold in Indianapolis.

The parade is to form at Michigan and Pennsylvania-sts at 10 a. m. Sept. 5 and prizes are to be awarded at the fairgrounds for the best floats or demonstrations.

PROBATION SCHOOL CALLED BENEFICIAL

The citizens school conducted for Criminal Court probationers is showing beneficial results, A. L. Cooley, Criminal Court probation officers, said today.

"The young men out on probation seem to be trying to remodel their lives," Mr. Cooley observed.

Next Thursday, William Baum is to address the class on "Preparing for a Job."

NO CHANCE

BY R. H. BRADSHAW

Daily Short Story

The man jabbed the gun at him. "Get to work—quit stallin'."

TERRY whistled a gay tune as he sent his small car over the highway toward home. After two years, he had saved enough money to take the course in agriculture at the State University without worrying about his mother and small brother at home on the farm. He had saved enough to provide for them as well.

He laughed softly as he thought of the expression on his mother's face when this morning, he had brought home $100 which he had withdrawn from the bank to take with him when he left for the university tomorrow. She had promptly hid the money in a baking soda can on her pantry shelf, against his laughing protest that it would surely be safe for only one day.

As he slowed the car to make the turn into the dirt road that led to their little farm, a hitch-hiker stepped from the side of the road and hailed him. Terry stopped.

"Sorry, buddy," he said cheerfully. "I'm turning here."

THE man walked up to the car and rested a hand on the newly polished hood. Terry, who had just polished it that morning, was slightly annoyed, but said nothing. After all, it wouldn't take a second to shine it up again.

"Oh, you're turning?" said the man. "How far is it to Claremont?"

"Ten miles," Terry answered.

"You take the right fork of the highway about six miles from here," the man opened the door and climbed in. "Okay," he said, "we'll take the right fork."

"But I'm not going," Terry broke off suddenly as he saw the revolver in the man's hand. He stared at it for a minute.

"Let's be going," the man said, softly.

TERRY put the car in gear and started it rolling along the highway. Through his mind raced all the incidents which he had seen in the movies in which the hero drove the car at a reckless speed and kept the bandit from shooting for fear of his own life. But this wasn't the movies. That gun was pointed at him and it might go off. Then the man removed all thought of a daring escape from his mind.

"Listen, rube," he said grimly. "I'll bet I can plug you and grab that wheel before you can put us in motion. Want to try it?"

The man watched him closely for a minute and then, apparently satisfied, reached into his pocket with his free hand, still keeping the gun trained on Terry. He pulled a roll of bills out of the pocket and started counting them into his lap.

"One hundred bucks," he said under his breath.

TERRY'S heart sank. The man had come from the direction of his farmhouse. A moment later, his suspicions were confirmed.

"You hicks oughta learn to trust the banks," he said, stuffing the bills into his pocket. "Imagine keeping 100 bucks in a tin can! She don't deserve to have the dough."

Terry's mouth tightened with a sudden spasm of fear. If this fellow had harmed his mother or brother! Unwittingly, the man answered his question for him.

CENTENNIAL AT BROWN COUNTY TO EXHIBIT ART

Nationally Known Painters to Display Work
Aug. 29-Sept. 6.

Times Special
NASHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 22.—Nationally known Brown County artists are to exhibit their work during the Brown County Centennial Aug. 29 to Sept. 6, centennial officials announced today.

Dale P. Bessire, artist and fruit-grower chairman of the Centennial Art Committee, said thousands of art-lovers from Indiana and other states are expected to view the exhibit.

The finest canvases of local artists are to be displayed, Mr. Bessire said, and are to feature only Brown County scenes. He said studios of all artists are to be open to centennial visitors at various times.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visitor

Public attention recently was focused on the Brown County Art Gallery when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, unannounced, drove into Nashville, and, after viewing the paintings, purchased several.

Tracing the country's art history, Mr. Bessire said that artists first began to hear of Brown County in 1888, shortly after the late T. C. Steele came into the hills to paint. The first permanent studio, he said, was built in 1907 and soon artists began to come in from distant points.

The Brown County Art Gallery Association was formed in 1925, he said, and patronage was so gratifying that the gallery was enlarged in 1935.

The Frederick Nelson Vance award is made annually for the most meritorious work by an active artist member.

Members Are Named

Active members now are Mr. Bessire, Robert E. Burke, C. Curry Bohm, V. J. Cariani, Homer G. Davidson, Charles W. Dahlgren, Oscar E. Erickson, Alexis J. Fournier, Marie Goh, Carl G. Graf, L. O. Griffith, Lucie Hartrath, Othmar Heffner, Thomas Lockie, Georges LaChance, George Moek, Frederick Polley, Robert M. Root, Alberta R. Shultz, Adolph R. Shultz, Musette O. Stoddard, Paul T. Sergeant, James Tepping, Will Vawter and Edward K. Williams.

Honorary members are J. K. Lilly, Indianapolis, and Frank M. Hohenberger, Nashville. Mr. Hohenberger is a pictorial photographer and color-print artist.

Mr. Griffith designed and executed the centennial seal. It shows the county's pioneer beginning. In the center is a log cabin with a native stone chimney, an old well and sweep, a team of yoked oxen and a covered wagon in the foreground. The sun appears over the distant hills and clouds, symbolical of difficulties, appear in the left corner. On the lower edge of the circle border are engraved the dates, 1836-1936. On the upper left part of the border are the words: "Brown County Centennial."

GRAND JURY TO GET FREIGHT THEFT CASE

Two Kokomo youths waived hearing and were bound over to the Federal grand jury yesterday when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Howard S. Young on charges of breaking seals on freight cars containing interstate shipments.

The youths, Byron Clifton McBride, 20, and James William Smith, 22, were alleged to have taken flour from a freight car at Kokomo.

Both were held in Marion County Jail under $1000 bond each.

PROGRESS WITH PURDUE

The story of Purdue University as an institution and Purdue graduates as individuals is one of progress.

Purdue University, preparing for its sixty-third academic year, stands recognized today as a leader in the educational field, just as Purdue-trained men and women are found as leaders in the fields for which they were prepared.

Even during the so-called depression years, well over 90 per cent of Purdue's graduates were actively employed, most of them in the fields for which they were trained, convincing evidence that Purdue men and women are in demand in industry and commerce. In normal times, Purdue's graduates experience no difficulty in obtaining employment in positions with a future.

Courses in Agriculture, Forestry, Civil Engineering, Chemical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Home Economics, Science, Pharmacy, Physical Education, Industrial Education, Engineering Law, Public Service Engineering, and a well organized Graduate School for advanced study.

O. A. R. P. VOTER TO MAKE OWN BALLOT CHOICE

Third Party Support Up to Individual, Pension
Leader Says.

Third party support by members of the Townsend Aid-Age Revolving Pension Plan is to be wholly a personal issue and not one of combined action on the part of all O. A. R. P. clubs of Indiana, it was declared today by C. F. McCampbell, O. A. R. P. state area manager.

"It is planned to support congressional candidates in the various districts in the ensuing election but each Townsend member may vote as he wishes in the presidential campaign," Mr. McCampbell said. He admitted that some members of the state Townsend clubs were supporting the Union Party of Indiana, Inc., a third party seeking the election of William Lemke as President.

Methods of collecting dues in Townsend clubs have been changed. Members now pay $2 yearly instead of 10 cents weekly, Mr. McCampbell said. One-half of the dues collected goes to the national organization.

How to Get the Coal That You Buy

At this time many people are beginning to "lay in" their winter's supply of coal. In order that the public may be in a position to protect themselves from certain unscrupulous sellers of coal we offer the following information.

Responsible dealers, who constitute a majority of the established concerns in the city, endeavor to meet all the requirements of the Indiana state law in the sale and delivery of coal. This law was drafted for your protection. You can aid not only in protecting yourself, but in protecting the community, by calling to the attention of the Better Business Bureau any instance wherein you feel that this law has been violated, and we will see that the information gets to the proper department for handling. Remember to do the following:

DEMAND a duplicate delivery ticket with each load, setting out:

1. Description of the coal.
 - a. The state where the coal was mined.
 - b. Name of the coal, or number of vein or seam.
 - c. Size and grade of coal.
2. The gross, tare, and NET WEIGHT of the load, signed or initialed by the weigher.
3. Name of person or firm selling you the coal.
4. Be sure that the delivery truck carries the name of the seller. This should be in not less than three-inch letters.

The state law demands that the above information be given you, under a possible penalty of both a fine and imprisonment. It applies to truckers and peddlers as well as established dealers. No matter what price you may be paying for the coal, you may be getting gyped if you do not know what you are getting. You can not afford to do business with any coal merchant who does not readily comply with the above regulations. If in doubt, call the
