

Proposed Military CCC Dangerous Flynn Says.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(Maj.) Gen. George Moseley, of the United States Army, has made a proposal to the CCC. The general says the CCC should be continued; that service in it should be for six months, and that it should be compulsory for every boy reaching the age of 18. The time, he urges, should be divided equally between service on work and military training. And this proposal is made in an article published in the official organ of the CCC.

The precise meaning of this proposal is not clear. It might be made compulsory for all young men, or it might be made optional. Mr. Flynn never before has been offered in American history. And while it has been suggested that it should be made compulsory, it has never been so far as the general is concerned, it is a matter of opinion, not of law. The CCC, as now organized, is voluntary. It was set up to offer a refuge for young men out of work, who wished to escape from want and idleness. Their work was utilized in the process to perform certain useful tasks throughout the nation.

But now General Moseley suggests two vital changes. First, he suggests that the plan be made compulsory, and second, that military training be introduced. If this were done, of course, we would at once have a standing draft army, like the nations of Europe whose militarism we have so persistently deplored.

There is nothing new, of course, in the proposal of a large standing draft army of conscript soldiers. But this army will have soldiers who will give their time to the rifle and half to the pick and shovel. And this is brand new here.

The proposal was made on the very day when Reichfuhrer Hitler made his sensational review of his "labor conscripts" in Nuremberg, when, on one field, 50,000 young men, with shovels on their shoulders, who had been drafted by the government for work, marched by their leader.

THE spectacle was commented on all over Europe and America. The labor conscript is not new in history. It has been recorded in Egypt under the pharaohs. Cheops, the builder of the Great Pyramid, is said to have drafted a vast army of workers to build his monument. During the inundation, when farming was suspended, he summoned the field hands from their farms and organized them into a great army of workers along the Nile. The practice persisted at least a thousand years after him and most of those extraordinary temples which are now seen at Luxor and Karnak and the site of Memphis were erected by men in involuntary servitude. Historians always have spoken of it as a species of slavery, which it is.

Hitler has restored this to Germany, and his review last week was notable because it was a frank glorification of this ancient Egyptian form of slavery. This is the plan which Mr. Moseley proposes for the American youth. Where it would be, of course, no man can tell.

SEE ADVERTISING GAIN Times Special

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—The volume of advertising placed by retail merchants in the newspapers of 67 major American cities during the last 23 weeks, was larger than that placed during the corresponding weeks of 1935. Advertising Age reported today.

As a result, retail advertising in these cities now is 5.9 per cent greater than it was at the same time last year. The weekly figures indicate that this percentage of gain will be increased as the year progresses, the report said.
