'Common People' Have Their Day at Pittsburgh Rally, Stokes Reports.

a red, white and blue hat. It did not stand up proper and erect, like the other souvenir hats you spotted here and there in the hustling crowd, with a picture of the President in front.

It looked for all the world like the tri-colored cockade which other women wore once so many years ago.

She dashed off into the crowd on her nonchalant, gay way—but she was the crowd.

She was a symbol of the great mob of common people who gathered last night in the baseball park and stood for hours, some of them, squashing in the mud, to see the man whom they regard as their deliverer.

Now they were good natured, shouting and laughing, and later they hissed their hate.

Before the President arrived, before the conveyer of motorcycle policemen put-putted slowly through a gate in the far corner, before the deliverer appeared in his open car to wave his hat and set off a great burst of human joy and delirium across the tiers of the grand stand and across the waving multitude in the field—they had their Danton, one of their own.

State Senator Warren R. Roberts he was, a stern-faced, square set of fellow, who knows the common touch.

He gave them their enemies and they spat out their names—Amy Mellon (poor, poor Andy, he said, and they tittered); Textile Joe Grundy, Pew (the oil man) Rockefeller (the still bigger oil man).

"Boo," came the swelling chorus, after each name, to smite their champion pleasantly in the face. He smiled with satisfaction.

Sets Off Poor Against Rich

Then, cleverly, he began to set the poor off against the rich.

The President, he said, has decreed that your children shall enjoy equal opportunity with the sons of the rich.

He spoke of "the smug complacency of pseudo-aristocracy."

He recalled how the sons of the poor and the sons of the rich shared time of bully beef, fought side by side, died together in the World War. But since then, he said, something has happened.

A Mirabeau appeared in the handsome presence of their Governor, George H. Earle, a son of wealth who has taken up the cause of the common people.

He gave them their enemies—

"There are the Mellons who have grown fabulously wealthy from the toll of the men of iron and steel, the men whose brain and brawn have made this city great; Grundy, whose sweatshop operators have been the shame and disgrace of Pennsylvania for a generation; Weir, the arch enemy of the worker; Pew, who strives to build a political and economic empire with himself as dictator; the Du Ponts whose dollars were earned with the blood of American soldiers; Morgan, financier of war."

Between each name on the catalogue he was forced to pause as

4 PER CENT MILK PRICES ANNOUNCED

Four per cent butterfat milk bought from Sept. 16 to 30 inclusive, is to be paid for on the following basis, according to Leon C. Collier, Marion County Milk Administrator:

the tumultuous mob swept in from the great throng stretched on every side of him.

Now the revolution is over. These men said so themselves as they contrasted the desolation in those miles beyond the ball park, the silent machinery, the smokestacks which no longer darkened the sky—back in 1932; and the hum of machinery, the belch of smoke along the Pittsburgh skyline today.

The revolution is over. But still it's a bitter memory. With jobs today, they feel better. They laughed gaily and chattered as they jostled one another out of the ball park. There was a carnival atmosphere. But they do not forget.

And their Dantons, their Mirabeaus, the fellows who know them and live with them, are not going to let them forget until they go to the ballot boxes Nov. 3. The President will speak to a comparative few people here and there.

These champions of theirs are taking the stump day after day, night after night, all over the country.

They are drawing the issue, call it a class war if you will.

That's why, when you stand among the masses this way, watch their reactions, you can have no doubt about the outcome of this election. There happens to be so many more of the sort who crowded the ball park than of the others.

No Democrat could have attracted 60,000 people here four years ago, their Danton reminded them.

They told of the deliverance last night.

And then—the scene was all set for the deliverer.

They drowned him with peans of joy.

COUNTY AWAITS BOND PAYMENT

$5000 Forfeit Still Owing in Haley Case, Records Reveal.

Marion County did not receive any money from a $5000 forfeited bond for which Prosecutor Herbert M. Spencer "settled" with three professional bondsmen, records of County Clerk Glenn B. Ralston showed today.

The bond had been ordered forfeited by Superior Court Judge Clarence E. Weir after LeRoy Haley, known as the "lazy bandit," failed to appear in Criminal Court to answer charges of robbing several filling stations. Abe Greenspan, Hyman Unger and Nathan Tamler signed the bond.

After Haley was reported to have left the city, Prosecutor Spencer filed civil suit on behalf of the county in Superior Court to have the bond forfeited. Judge Weir issued the order.

Spencer Explains Action

Prosecutor Spencer yesterday explained that he released the bondsmen on his own volition after "they had promised to locate Haley and return him to Indianapolis to face trial." The prosecutor said the same procedure had been followed in other cases.

Judge Weir said the prosecutor was without authority to settle the forfeiture case without a court order.

"It is my belief that I have this authority," Mr. Spencer said. "If not, then the settlement in this case will be void and the $5000 judgment will stand."

ZEP HALF WAY ACROSS OCEAN, EKINS REPORTS

Times Globe Circling Thinks Craft Will Reach Goal on Schedule.

As for myself, I can't recall having said much about schedules at any time.

ASuspicious Rainbow

One thing reasonably is certain, a delayed arrival at Frankfurt would complicate time tables for each of us. At 8 a. m. today, New York time, we were about 1000 miles beyond Cape Race and doing a good 83 knots ground speed, but it is hard to believe that we are at last through with the weather, all of it bad, which has plagued us ever since we left Lakehurst. Perhaps we are, because a little while ago we plowed through a tremendous rainbow, suspicious for three newspaper magicians.

Aside from worry over our schedules (and that will be with us until one of us flashes across the top in New York with a record) life proceeds pleasantly enough in this Atlantic interlude. Dorothy Kilgallen, aspirant to the faded laurels of the world's Nellie Bly, spends a good deal of time scribbling postcards, trying to think up gags to amuse anxious relatives.

Dorothy also indulged in a typically feminine shopping expedition, buying souveniers from the stock maintained by the writing room steward. Exchange difficulties bogged her down, and when she finally threw herself on the mercy of the steward, she discovered she had spent $6.80.

Worries About Fish

My only worry, aside from the distressing uncertainty of our arrival time, is whether Ford Wilkins has remembered to feed my tropical fish.

conditional declaration of war." Unofficial wars among signatories would thereby be outlawed.

Although the purpose of the draft convention primarily parallels the League of Nations, cognizance is taken of the fact that some of the probable signatories to this pact already are members of the league. An "escape clause" is provided to prevent conflict with league obligations.

In case of hostilities without a declaration or ultimatum, neutral powers, under the terms of the draft treaty, would be free to declare "for the purposes of their municipal legislation concerning neutrality" that a state of war exists. This action would not be deemed an unfriendly act nor afford grounds for complaint.

The treaty would give neutral powers freedom to impose such restrictions or prohibitions on trade and commerce between them and belligerents as they might deem appropriate in the interests of international peace without contravention of provisions in other agreements of trade. Such measures would apply to all belligerents.

The neutral nations would pledge themselves under the proposed treaty not to permit the exportation of "arms, ammunition or implements of war to any of the belligerents or to any neutral country for transshipment to or for the use of any belligerent."

The treaty lists the articles included under arms, ammunition and implements of war in six specific categories.

The treaty would also prohibit the flotation of loans through issuance of bonds or other evidence of indebtedness and the "establishment
